Strain on Human Body.

In hot weather the human body makes an extraordinary effort to adapt itself to conditions and meet the strain placed upon it. Violent overheating or great physical effort for a few hours causes the body to throw off some four liters of fluid. In other words, the perspiration secreted in a brief while is greater than the entire blood supply of the body.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default having been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage containing a Power of Sale, by reason of which default said Power of Sale has become operative, and the Assignees of the Mortgagee hereinafter named are authorized to declare the whole sum due, and they hereby do declare said sum due, which mortgage was executed by Albert C. Jahr and Josie Jahr, his wife, Mortgagors to Deposit Trust & Savings Bank of Winona, Minnesota, a corporation under the laws of the State of Minnesota, Mortgagee dated October 25th, 1920, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County, Minnesota, on the 27th day of October, A. Breadfruit.

The breadfruit, with the coconut and banana, furnishes the chief food of the natives of the Pacific islands. That is why we call it "breadfruit," because, for them, it takes the place of bread. Apart from its fruit, the tree itself is a very useful one, for, when beaten out, the inner bark forms a fine white cloth called tapa cloth.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale

Default having been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage containing a Power of Sale, by reason of which default said Power of Sale has become operative, and the Assignee of the Mortgage hereinafter named is authorized to declare the whole sum due, and she hereby does declare said sum due, which mortgage was executed by Clarence Knutson and Mollie Knutson, his wife, Mortgagors, to Deposit Trust & Savings Bank of Winona, Minnesota, Mortgagee dated November 10th, A. Brevities.

A new material, pyroxylin, is used by a German inventor in the manufacture of safety razors. It looks like ivory, tortoise shell or marble, depending on the manner in which it is manufactured. The advantage of this material lies in the fact that the apparatus cannot rust. There is no need to dry the razor after use. It is sufficient to wipe it. Another advantage is that it is cheaper than razors made of metal.

MOST IMPORTANT NEWS OF WORLD

Big Happenings of the Week Condensed for the Benefit of Busy Readers.

Washington

Washington — Representative Victor Berger of Wisconsin, only socialist in congress, cabled congratulations to Ramsay MacDonald, Great Britain's new premier.

Washington—The ship liquor treaty with Great Britain was transmitted to the senate by President Coolidge. It was referred to the foreign relations committee, which plans to begin its consideration in the near future.

Washington—Expressions of apology and regret for the search by police and prohibition agents Dec. 20 of the apartment occupied by an attache of the Hungarian legation are made in letters to Secretary C. E. Hughes from Major Daniel Sullivan of the District of Columbia police and Assistant Secretary Moss of the treasury department, which the secretary has transmitted to the legation.

Washington — One thousand American delegates to the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World convention in Condon next July, will travel on three shipping board vessels. Lhigh C. Palmer, president of the Emergency Fleet corporation, announced that arrangements had been made to carry 600 of the delegates on the steamship Republic, sailing July 2; 100 on the George Washington, sailing July 4, and 300 on the Leviathan, leaving New York July 5.

Domestic

New York—Discovery of a serum for scarlet fever was announced by Dr. A. R. Dochez, associate professor of medicine at Columbia university.

Beaufort, N. C.—The four masted schooner Anna M. Records, was abandoned by its crew off Cape Lookout Shoals, because of its waterlogged condition and was towed into Cape Lookout cove by a wrecking tug, which had taken the crew off.

Columbia, Mo.—David Sarnoff, vice-president and general manager of the Radio Corporation of America, sent a message to Iwaki station, Japan, and received his answer by telephone, the message traveling 14,000 miles in 1 minute, 45 seconds.

Dayton, Ohio — Fifty thousand dollars will be given as prizes in the international air races to be conducted this fall, it was announced by Frederick B. Patterson, president of the National Aeronautic association. This amount, it was said, is four times as much as has ever been given in this event heretofore.

Detroit, Mich.—An 8 month old Airedale puppy, frozen to the ice in the Detroit river and howling for help, was rescued from death by a 64 year old man, who risking his life on the treacherous, broken ice, crawled to the dog, chopped him free, bundled him in a blanket and brought him safe to shore.

Indianapolis—As the result of a poll of members of congress by the American Legion, Garland W. Powell, national director of the Americanism commission of that organization, predicts that drastic restriction, if not complete suspension, of all immigration to the United States is to be expected of the present congress.

Chicago—Remarking that, having been reared in a small town where the railroad pay roll was the only pay roll he appreciated the importance of his new task, former Governor Edwin P. Morrow, of Kentucky, took office as a public representative on the United States rail labor board. He succeeded Judge R. M. Barton, Memphis, Tenn., resigned.

Cincinnati—Benjamin Franklin Purnell and others of the House of David in Michigan lost a motion filed in United States circuit court of appeals for summary reversal of their conviction in United States district court at Grand Rapids. Reversal was sought on the ground that John W. Hansel and others had failed to file their brief within the time limit. Appellate court granted the appellees until Jan. 22 to file their brief.

Los Angeles—Vilkjalmur Stefannson, arctic explorer, has decided to turn his attention to the little known areas of Australia, he announced at a banquet given in his honor here by the Adventurers club of Los Angeles. It is his intention to devote six months to exploration and research on the continent with a view to writing a suitable geography of that part of the world, he said.

Muskogee, Okla. — Five thousand dollars daily from oil raised Dixie Fife, 19 year old Creek Indian girl, from poverty to riches, but it has not brougt her happiness. Last week she agreed to pay $50,000 as a divorce settlement to Berlin Jackson, the farmer boy sweetheart she married soon after oil was discovered on her allotment, and she left a sod house on the prairie for a modern home with three expensive automobiles in her garage.

Denver — Overpowering three sentries who stood guard over them with shotguns, 10 military prisoners from Fort Logan near here, bound the guards with their own woolen leggings, took their weapons and made a spectacular dash for liberty from a sand pit in which the prisoners were working. All of the runaways were captured a short time later.

New York — The United States launched 172,817 tons of new merchant ships in 1923, and was the only maritime nation to show a gain over the previous year, the annual report of Lloyds' register disclosed.

Sports

St. Paul—"Bermondsey Billy" Wells of London, welterweight champion of England, decisively outpointed Jimmie Jones of Youngstown, O., in their 10-round fight at the St. Paul Auditorium.

Minneapolis—The seven-game football schedule played by the University of Minnesota last fall drew total attendance of 134,740 persons and net receipts to the Gopher institution were $132,900, it was shown in a statement made public by Albert J. Lobb, comptroller, and Conrad Seitz, who had charge of ticket sales.

Foreign

Geneva—Any report that Sweden is withdrawing from the League of Nations was characterized as "grossly ridiculous" by league officials.

Geisenfeld, Bavaria—Franz Dietrich claims to be the champion sausage eater of Germany. On a wager recently Dietrich ate 14 one pound sausages in two hours and also drank 10 large glasses of beer.

Sydney, N. S. W.—Three mills of the British Empire Steel corporation were closed and half of the 2,000 men employed laid off, as a result of the coal strike.

Manila — The house of representatives of the insular legislature passed a bill appropriating $50,000 for the relief of typhoon sufferers, after Governor General Leonard Wood vetoed it.

Cordova, Spain—An important paleontological discovery was reported from Guademala, where a perfect human skull of the Neanderthal type and stone instruments were found in a swamp.

Berlin — German bankers informed the finance and foreign ministers stabilization of German currency was impossible if payment of the cost of maintaining garrisons in occupied territories is continued.

Berlin — Charles M. Schwab, who has been investigating the situation in the Ruhr, has arrived in Berlin from Essen. "I am not talking," said Mr. Schwab, when asked concerning his visit to Germany. "I am just looking things over."

Mexico City—Lists of foreigners accused of meddling in Mexican politics, especially those suspected of secretly aiding the revolutionists, have been compiled and forwarded to President Obregon for action looking to their expulsion from the country.

Paris — French naval experts are watching the invention of Professor Guglelmo Motti, Italian savant, who is experimenting with Civita Vecchia, discoverer of a new law for light traversing water, enabling submarines to see clearly under water regardless of the depth.

Paris — France's war damages total 82,000,000,000 francs (about $3,700,000,000), according to statistics compiled by Minister of the Liberated Regions Reibet. The total marks a reduction of 18,000,000,000 francs ($820,000,000) from an estimate made on Jan. 15, 1922, and is chiefly reduced through a revision of claims and damages after investigations revealed frauds and exaggerated demands by persons whose property had been devastated.

Paris—The progressive depopulation of France is caused as much by fancy Parisaan dolls as any cause, according to a thesis put out by Anatole France and Pierre Calmette, in a new book, "Dolls From Paris." France wrote the preface and Calmette the text of the book which accuses French women—half jocularly, but with an undercurrent of seriousness—of forgetting their duties to the race and nation because they prefer to play with dolls.

Elberfeld, Germany—Disorders are occuring in connection with the strike of the textile workers in the Elberfeld-Barmen region, involving more than 60,000 employees. Conflicts between the strikers and the police have occurred at Werden, Lennep and Barmen, with some firing by both sides in each affair, resulting in the wounding of numerous persons and many arrests.

Tokio—A message of congratulation from President Coolidge to Prince Regent Hirohito on the occasion of his impending wedding, was conveyed to the imperial palace by American Charge d'Affairs Caffray. The president wired: "Personal happiness" to the royal couple and hoped "for the regent success "in your high aims and aspirations for your country."

Munich, Bavaria—Former Grand Duchess Marie of Luxembourg died in Hohenburg castle at Lenggries, Bavaria. She was the reigning duchess of Luxembourg at the outbreak of the war, and when the Germans demanded passage of their armies through Luxembourg, on the way to attack France, the grand duchess demurred, and, in way of protest drew her motorcar across the street through which the German columns were about to pass. To escape courtmartial she fled to a convent then abdicated in favor of her sister, Charlotte.

Berlin—Trial by jury is to be abandoned throughout Germany for three months except in first degree murder cases as an economic measure.

Paris — Prince Orlov, one of the few surviving relatives of the late Czar Nicholas of Russia, is going to Detroit, Mich., supposedly to work for Henry Ford. Ford's representative at Bordeaux has booked passage for Prince and Princess Orlov and Judge Sokolov. After learning the factory operations the prince will return to Bordeaux, where he will act as an interpreter between capricious Fords and French owners.

ISSUES CALL FOR FARM-BANK MEET

Fargo, N. D.—A call by President Coolidge for a conference of representatives of various industries in the Northwest to meet in Washington at 10:30 A. M., on Monday, February 4, was issued Monday.

The purpose of the conference which will be held with the secretary of agriculture, is given in telegrams received, in the state as being the consideration of the agricultural and the banking problem in the Northwest.

The call for the conference was announced simultaneously with an appeal by nine United States senators to the farmers of the Northwest, asking them to advise members of congress what they desire in the way of agricultural legislation.

Northwest Gets Attention.

Washington, D. C.—The northwestern credit situation is occupying a very large place in the attention of President Coolidge.

Managing Director Meyer, of the War Finance corporation, just returned from the Northwest as a member of the commission sent to determine what aid the federal government might render, had an engagement to deliver his report and discuss with the executive plans for recapitalization of Northwestern banks.

A plan to make federal loans available to stockholders for recapitalization of banks in stringent credit areas, particularly the Northwest, is being studied by President Coolidge as a means of bringing quicker financial relief to that section than would be possible through formation of a private syndicate of bankers and financiers.

The new proposal, suggested by some members of congress, contemplates enactment of emergency legislation to permit a federal agency, probably the War Finance corporation, to advance the funds for recapitalization on the personal notes of the stockholders with the bank stock as collateral. Early action of some sort is expected, since the president is known to feel that relief must be found quickly, and the question of time is regarded generally as the most important consideration in determining a course of action.

SEEK ANNULMENT OF LEASE

Legislators Back President in Demand for Showdown.

Washington.—Both the executive and legislative branches of the government moved toward the common end to seeking annullment of the naval oil reserve leases.

While President Coolidge was endeavoring to select two nationally known lawyers to take charge of the prosecution of suits, civil, and criminal, the whole subject came up for discussion on the floor of the senate.

Before the president announced at midnight Saturday the administration's determination to act at once, Senator Walsh, Democrat, Montana, who has been foremost in pressing the senate oil inquiry, had prepared and the investigating committee had endorsed in principle a resolution authorizing the executive to act and directing him to employ special counsel to take charge of the litigation.

The Walsh substitute for the Caraway resolution, which was made public charges that the Sinclair Teapot Dome lease was executed without authority "under circumstances indicating fraud and corruption." Senate action would be confined to the Teapot Dome transaction at this time, it was explained, because of the conditional offer by Doheny, through his counsel to reconvey to the government the leases awarded to his company on the California reserve.

Business Block Razed Sunday—Ten Business Places Affected.

Medina, N. D.—Fire destroyed an entire business block on the west side of Medina's main street early Sunday, the loss of buildings and stocks of merchandise being estimated at $100,000, partially covered by insurance.

The losses were: William Levenson, dry goods and department store; Frank J. Redner, pool hall and restaurant; Redner and Prezzler, barber shop; Ruele's general store; Adam Bollinger hardware store, Medina cream station, Dr. Todd, Dr. Simonson, and C. M. Boynton, offices; Buckwater hotel annex and rooms over pool hall.

The fire was discovered at about 1:30 A. M. by Dr. Simonson who smelled smoke and investigating discovered fire in the Levenson store.

The Northern Pacific fire department and firemen from Jamestown arrived in time to save the Thompson Yards lumber buildings and stock. The fire was under control at 6:30 A. M.

Merchants who lost stores and stocks are planning to rebuild.

Students Admit Mail Robbery.

Butte, Mont.—Robert Ackler, Bud R. Heller, of Boston, and Bernard Quesnell, Kalispell, Mont., students of the University of Montana at Missoula, are under arrest in that city charged with robbing the Missoula postoffice of $35,000 currency. The money had been consigned from Spokane to the Missoula Trust company. The three students confessed, according to postoffice officials, and declared they had concealed the money under a bridge over the Missoula river. The money was later recovered.

WILL PROSECUTE TEAPOT OIL MEN

Washington.—President Coolidge has decided to employ counsel drawn from both the Republican and Democratic parties to proceed with court action as a result of evidence adduced at the senate committee hearings on the leasing of naval oil leases.

In a statement issued, the president declared that "counsel will be instructed to prosecute these cases in the courts so that if there is any guilt it will be punished; if there is any civil liability it will be enforced; if there is any fraud it will be revealed; and if there are any contracts which are illegal they will be cancelled."

The president determined upon this course after being advised by the department of justice that it was in accordance with precedents. Explaining that the justice department had been observing the evidence unfolded in the senate committee, the executive in his statement asserted that "every law will be enforced and every right of the people and the government will be protected."

White House officials in making public the statement said that the special counsel would be appointed just as soon as selections could be made.

An offer to have reconveyed to the government the rich naval oil reserve in California and other oil contracts entered into by the Pan-American Petroleum and Transport Company after E. L. Doheny had loaned Albert B. Fall, then secretary of the interior, $100,000 on his personal note, was submitted to the senate oil committee by Gavin McNab, counsel for Mr. Doheny.

The offer carries a single stipulation—that the company be reimbursed for expenditures made in the Pearl Harbor government oil reservoir development and willingness is expressed that payment be made in oil from offset wells sunk in the California reserve at the request of the government to prevent drainage of that field. These wells then would be surrendered.

Although this offer is a modification of the original proposal for reconveyance should a board of experts determine that the contracts were not wise, advantageous, and the best that the government would have made, the committee decided to transmit it to the senate without recommendation. In the committee discussion objection was raised after the offer had not been signed by Mr. Doheny, but by his counsel. Some senators expressed doubt of the wisdom of passing upon the proposal in that form.

NEW ROAD TO SELL STOCK

Fargo to Grand Forks Rail Project Passed by State Commission.

Bismarck, N. D.—The application of the Red River Valley Railroad company, of Minneapolis, which proposes to construct a railroad between Fargo and Grand Forks, was granted permission by the State Railroad Commission to issue $500,000 of stock. The action was taken by the commission in a special meeting, following representations by the company that the awarding of contracts awaited its action on the petition which has been under investigation by the commission for the past two months.

The company, originally incorporated on December 15, 1914, by W. H. Graves and C. M. Drew, of Minneapolis, and R. A. Hamilton, of Milwaukee, was incorporated for $1,500,000.

It proposed to build a line from Fargo to Winnipeg, according to the original articles, but represents to the State Railroad Commission that it would build a line between Fargo and Grand Forks. The proposed route would follow the Red River quite closely, being east of the present route of the Great Northern.

MINERS AGAINST STRIKING

Indianapolis.—Repudiation of the "ruinous" practice of striking on the job, and a pledge of their high regard for the "sanctity of contracts" was voiced by the United Mine Workers' convention in casting an overwhelming vote of confidence in their leader, and commending him the second time for deposing the officials of the Nova Scotia district.

Defending his action before the convention, International President John L. Lewis said he regretted he had to stand before the delegates to answer questions put by the deposed Nova Scotia vice president, Alex McIntire, who, he said, is no longer a member of the United Mine Workers, "but a keeper of a grog shop."

Radio Station for Farm Advancement.

Chicago.—A powerful radio broadcasting station catering exclusively to the farmers of the country, is being erected by the agricultural foundation of a prominent mail order firm and is expected to begin broadcasting programs soon. The new station will have a wave length of 448 meters. Samuel Guard, director of the foundation, said the station "will broadcast facts about the nation's basic industry that will be of real value to the farmer, giving an interpretation of market trends and current events."

News Briefs from All the State

Condensed Stories of Happenings of the Week in Minnesota

Willmar — The new $36,000 water plant for this city will provide it with a water reservoir of a half million gallons and a pumping facility.

Thief River Falls—A total of $465 was paid out as bounties for 70 wolves in Pennington county in 1923. In the first half of the year the bounty was only $7.50 per wolf, the increased bounty of $15 going into effect in July.

New Ulm — Five high school declamatory teams will compete for honors here Friday, Feb. 21. The schools at Arlington, St. Peter, Springfield, Hanska and New Ulm will have representatives in the contest.

Crookston — The Polk county chapter of the Red Cross has voted to offer $1,000 to the county commissioners to be used toward maintenance of a county nurse.

Rollingstone — Loss estimated at $15,000 was caused by a fire which destroyed the grain elevator, warehouse and coal shed of Schmidt & Speltz, here. No water was available to fight the fire.

Park Rapids —Park Rapids will observe the dedication of the new Great Northern depot Jan. 31, with a banquet program and general get together meeting. Officials of the Great Northern will take part in the program.

Willmar—A $30,000 addition to the orphan's and old people's home in this city will be completed this week. It will make the institution one of the finest in the state. Funds for the building have been largely obtained from old folks who wish to pass their last years there.

Red Wing—County roads in Goodhue county are to be marked in much the same manner as the state trunk highways, according to J. A. Prior, county superintendent of roads. The county markers will be in black and white instead of black and yellow, as used by the state.

Hibbing — The Hibbing high school will soon be able to boast of one of the best high school bands, not only in this state, but in the entire United States, since the board of education has decided to purchase equipment for the high school 100 piece band. About $15,000 worth of equipment will be provided.

Ortonville — The annual ice harvest is now on in full blast on Big Stone lake here. Nearly 100 men are engaged in cutting the ice and getting it loaded into boxcars for shipment to the division points on the Milwaukee railway. It is shipped as far north as Fargo, west to Butte and east to Montevideo.

Little Falls — The Itasca Paper company of Grand Rapids has acquired a site here for a new pulp mill, officials of the company announced. They said a deal has been consummated with the Minnesota Power and Light company of Duluth by which adequate power for the project will be obtained.

Mankato — John C. Wise, 60, telegraph editor of the Mankato Free Press, died of heart disease while on his way home from work. Mr. Wise was prominent as a democrat, having charge of the state headquarters of the party in St. Paul during the campaign of L. C. Hodgson three years ago.

Ely—"Cal" Dahlgren, supervisor of the Superior National forest, and "Big Bill" Darby, of the Canadian forest service, who has charge of forestry work in most of western Ontario, have been conducting a two day conference here. Their object is to get closer co-operation in the conservation of forests and the prevention of fires along the border of the two domains.

Madison — The board of county commissioners has issued an order to the county auditor to prepare special ballots for all of the voting precincts in Lac qui Parle county that the voters may act on the question of whether or not the commissioners shall make an appropriation for sustaining the county agent's office the coming year.

Red Wing — Volunteer members of the fire department are up in arms over the new law which the state attorney general has ruled must be applied to volunteers. The department members have several methods to suggest in the way of making up for this lack of protection and one of these will be decided upon at a meeting and presented to the board of fire commissioners for consideration.

Owatonna — As the clock in the court house tower here struck the hour, the heavy weights attached to the winding mechanism broke loose and fell through the floor into the room of the county nurse. In the room at the time were six people, who narrowly escaped being hit by the 1,500 pound weights. The crashing iron fell through the floor to the story below, where the floor sank under the weight.

Willmar—A marked highway from Aberdeen, S. D., to the twin cities probably will be a reality before the end of the coming motoring season. Plans are now being worked out on the project and early in the spring the highway selected for the trail will be logged and may be marked immediately. Benson, Willmar, Atwater and Litchfield are among the towns in Minnesota through which the new highway will be marked

St. Cloud—Edward Thiele, aged 38, was electrocuted while stringing wires with a crew between Monticello and Bgi Lake.

Duluth—Purchase of three vessels by the Minnesota Transatlantic company was announced.

Crookston—An interesting part of the Red River Valley mid-winter shows here Feb. 4 to 11 will be the annual meetings of the various organizations actively concerned in making the shows a noteworthy event.

Faribault—This city was the leading livestock shipping point in the state in 1923, a single association selling 425 carloads of hogs, cattle and sheep, yielding a total income of more than $500,000 to the farmers.

Red Wing—A trunk containing what was evidently the life savings of Heinrich Foch, of Zumbrota, $3,243.07 in silver and currency, has been unearthed by appraisers making a check of the estate for the probate court.

Willmar—Taxes to be paid by the people of Kandiyohi county will show an increase this year of $70,000 and for the city of Willmar an increase of $24,000. The townships of the county also will pay $45,000 more than in 1922.

Chisholm—Chisholm American Legion and auxiliary members claim one distinction for their posts which perhaps is not duplicated in Minnesota. Royal Huber is commander of the American Legion post and Mrs. Royal Huber, his wife, is president of the auxiliary.

Wadena—Resolutions indorsing the Coulter loan bill and Mellon tax reduction plan and another urging extension of the teaching of journalism at the University of Minnesota were passed by the Northern Minnesota Editorial association at its concluding session here.

Pipestone—The first "spud special" to be routed through this section of the state passed through Pipestone over the Gerat Northern railway. The train was made up of 47 carloads of potatoes and was running on passenger train schedule. The big shipment of spuds originated at St. Cloud and was en route to Kansas City.

Minneapolis—Clothing for the distitute Indians on the White Earth reservation will be collected by clubwomen in every district of the state at the request of the social and industrial conditions division of the Minnesota Federation of Women's clubs, who sent out letters on the subject to her district chairmen.

Red Wing—All stockholders of the Goodhue County Co-operative company, now in the hands of receivers, will be held responsible for payment of 100 per cent assessment on their stock holdings as a result of a decision handed down in Goodhue county district court here by Judge Albert Johnson. The assessments will be levied within 20 days.

Rochester—The Rochester Arts association was the name decided upon by the women of this city who met to arrange plans for an organization to sponsor art in the community. The matter of selecting officials and committees was put in the hands of a nominating committee. Plans for a gallery, library and museum are to be outlined later.

Springfield—John Brandt, president of the Minnesota Co-operative Creameries association, was the chief speaker at the annual dinner of the Springfield Creamery company and its patrons. He detailed the benfits to be derived from co-operation in marketing a standard product through one agency. More than 600 farmers and business men were present at the banquet.

Minneapolis—More than 200 members of the Minnesota Brotherhood of Threshermen met in annual convention at the West hotel. They discussed mutual insurance, the attitude of the state highway department upon the use of public roads by threshing machines, the possibility of lowered costs in threshing in 1924, and the campaign of the United States department of agriculture to get farmers to clean their wheat.

New Ulm—That the co-operative creameries in this section have had a very successful year is shown by annual reports recently given out by some of them. At Courtland a total of 316,226 pounds of butter were made during 1923. Receipts amounted to $146,002 and the sum of $143,205 was paid to patrons. At Klossner 331,513 pounds of butter were made, the receipts were $148,413 and patrons were paid $126,987. The Hanska-Linden Co-operative creamrey made 289,550 pounds of butter and paid patrons $119,231 for the butterfat.

Duluth—Problems common in Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan, with especial reference to those affecting agriculture were discussed and the reduction of taxes, uniform forestry and fire protection laws for the three states and the early completion of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence deep waterway as a solution of the transportation problem of this section of the country were recommended by the Tri-State Development congress, which concluded its fourth annual convention in this city.

East Grand Forks — Anton Anderson, of this place, is trying to locate Jens O. Bjerk, supposed to be working at his trade as a boilermaker in some Minnesota city. According to Anderson, Bjerk, who was last heard of in Rochester, Minn., has fallen heir to a considerable fortune in Norway.

Crookston — Only 537 acres are needed, according to W. R. Low, in charge of the co-operative potato marketing campaign in the county, to put Polk county "over the top," or to give it the required "50 per cent of the 1922 acreage."

A Tale of the Flatwoods

"Big Jack," he went on, "couldn't kill him with a nigger maul. Didn't he fetch that chuckle head a groanin' lick? Lord! Leetle too high, though," he commented in the nice criticism of a man who, in his day, was known to have been the most dangerous rough-and-tumble fighter on the border.

He paused, and his face assumed the same puzzled expression it had worn at the festival the evening before.

"I reckon hit couldn't 'a' be'n, an' it's jist as well not t' say nothin' about it," he went on, "but I thought that feller favored that scape-gal'us of ol' Sime's—Ken Colin—what 'e would 'a' be'n by now. I noticed it when 'e flared up off'n the floor thar with the knife."

Counterman leaned nearer.

"That's jist what I mosey'd up t' talk about." He lowered his voice. "That wus Black Bogus."

Uncle Nick straightened.

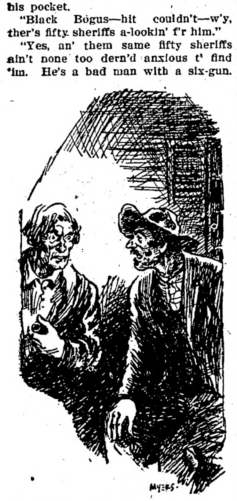
"No!"

"Hit were."

The old man swore, took out his pipe again, stared at it and put it back in his pocket.

"Black Bogus—hit couldn't—w'y, ther's fifty sheriffs a-lookin' f'r him."

"Yes, an' them same fifty sheriffs ain't none too dern'd anxious t' find 'im. He's a bad man with a six-gun.



"That's Jist What I Mosey'd Up t' Talk About." He Lowered His Voice. "That Was Black Bogus."

He may be Ken Colin—that I don't know—but I do know he's Black Bogus. I run afoul of 'im three year back, down Vincennes way. It wus when—"

The fisherman stopped, breathed hard, passed his hand up over his sunken eye socket and sat staring out into the gathering night. The aged hunter studied him covertly. More than once he had thought of asking for the story of that lost eye, but the innate delicacy of the born woodsman had restrained him.

"Calc'late you wus some su'prised when 'e swarmed in?"

"I 'low I werdn't no worse su'prised than he'd 'a' be'n if he 'a' saw me. But I happened t' be back in the corner b'hind the crowd—an' it's a good thing I were. I dasn't come face t' face with Black Bogus. He tricked me once; he won't trick me no more"—the old hunter saw the weather-stained fist of the fisherman grip tight; heard his lanky jaws clamp together; watched him instinctively hitch the holster of his long-barreled six-gun to an easier position at his hip—"an' I've already got enough blood on my hands over—"

He stopped abruptly and again sat staring into the night.

The man was a mystery. He had come to Buckeye as the driftwood comes—nobody knew from where. He paid his way, asked no questions, answered none. In the silence that fell Uncle Nick sat pondering him—what his life story might have been.

"What crosses my path is, how 'e come t' be there, p'tic'lar how 'e happened t' come out s' bold—'specially if 'e is the man you think 'e is. It ain't his way. He never would 'a' done it if it hadn't 'a' be'n f'r Zeke Pollck's squir'l whisky." He straightened, glanced around at his aged friend, and had the light been sufficient, the old man might have seen that the twinkle, never long absent from the doubly capable eye, had returned. "Big Jack an' the parson shore did show 'im a good time—while 'e lasted."

Uncle Nick grinned.

"That parson lord! I ain't been t' church in fifty year, but I'm calc'latin' on goin' next Sund'y. If that parson can outface the devil the way he outfaced that hulkin' chuckle-head, he ain't no bad man t' hitch up with."

"I'm only hopin'," Counterman went on. "Big Jack an' the parson, too, f'r that matter, has seen the last o' Black Bogus. I'm hopin' but I'm doubtin'."

"I ain't, nary a doubt," Uncle Nick chuckled. "Your Black Bogus"—the puzzled expression touched his face again—"got a bellyful las' night. He ain't honein' f'r no more, I'm bettin' m' bottom dollar 'e ain't."

"I dunno," Counterman pursued. "He's a bad lot. Ther' ain't a worse man the length o' the Wabash. An' then there's Loge Belden they say moved in the ol' cabin up Eagle holler last week with 'is sister.

"Cordwood—huh—he ain't no more a wood-chopper than I be. He's a river man. Come f'om the K'ntucky mountains in the first place, an' use'n t' be a pearl fisher till they run 'im off'n the river. I never knowed Loge, that is, what y'u might say pers'n'ly. I never see'd 'im till 'e tangled with Big Jack in the post office t' other evenin', but I knowed 'is sister, not the one that's with 'im now but the—other one—the one that's—dead—"

"Black Bogus is an old pal o' Loge's," he went on after a time. "Wouldn't wonder he's harborin' up thar, an' if 'e is, why is 'e? An' what are they both—'r either one of 'em—doin' up hyur in the Flatwoods? Hit looks t' me"—he bent toward his companion—"they've got the'r eye on ol' Sime Colin."

Uncle Nick sat thoughtfully fumbling his chin.

"That'd leave Ken out," he mused. "He wouldn't 'a' fell that low. Anyhow, ther's lots o' folks that looks like other folks." Counterman thought a moment before he spoke again.

"Black Bogus' game is counterf'itin', but he's got the guts f'r anything; an' Loge's or'n'ry enough f'r any dirt. Ther' ain't nothin' I'd put a-past 'im. He's done time twice't a'ready, an' would be doin' it right now if it werdn't f'r 'is sister. Thar's one good gal—as different f'om Loge as the devil f'om Sund'y. Hit's Loge's one good p'int—he thinks a heap of 'is sister."

"Well," commented Uncle Nick with his slow drawl, as the other paused, "bit might be the makin' of ol' Sime if somebody could manage t' pry a dollar 'r two off'n him, an' as f'r Big Jack, I 'low ther' ain't none of 'em honein' f'r more truck with him."

He chuckled complaisantly, possibly fancying that he had put a particularly neat and unanswerable finish to the argument.

"That ain't it," Counterman pursued, "Black Bogus an' Loge are both the kind that strikes in the dark."

"Thunder!"

Uncle Nick's shoulder jerked away from the porch post, and the fisherman caught the glitter of his deep-set eyes in the twilight.

"They cayn't come nothin' like that on the boy 'r I'll strike the warpath m'self. Dunno but what I'll peel an eye on that cabin up the crick."

The old ranger sat erect and restless, drumming with his fingers on the porch floor and looking away across the narrow mouth of Eagle hollow to where Black rock poked his tumbled ramparts up against the eastern sky.

The clatter in the kitchen ceased. Aunt Liza's still sprightly, vastly positive step came across the cabin floor, and a moment later the creak of her rocking chair joined the droning chorus of the beetles.

"Wonder what Big Jack thinks o' the way the parson's a-cuttin' around 'is gal?" Counterman mused. "An' her the best prize in the Flatwoods, even if she didn't have a cent."

"I knowed 'is father, Col. David Warhope, when 'e first come t' the Flatwoods up'rds of eighteen years back, an' I knowed 'is grandfather, Old Col. David Warhope. I fit Tecumseh an' the Prophet under the gran'father. The homestead wus a present t' him f'om Gen. Andrew Jackson. Ol' Colonel David an' young Colonel David, they wus both fine, upstandin' men, soldiers every inch, an' Big Jack's like 'em. Hit's too bad the homestead had t' be lost t' ol' Sime, an' the boy bound out to 'im. But even so, he'd make a heap sight more fittin' man f'r a Flatwoods gal than that hump-backed, squinty eyed parson. Beats the devil the headway he's a-makin' with 'er. I wouldn't 'a' thought—"

"No good'll come o' it," broke in the acid tones of Aunt Liza. "Didn't y'u see 'is carryin's on with 'er at the sociable las' night? Big Jack ain't go'n' t' be a bound boy f'rever. She'll rue the day she draps a fine lad like him an' takes up with a furriner."

"Don't talk to me," snapped the tart voice. "I reckon I know wh't I see with m' own eyes. Mind what I tell y'u, she'll rue it, an' so'll Sime Colin a-lettin' 'im harbor around like that. Don't keer if 'e did go t' school with Ken.

"I bet y'u [illegible] ther' would n' [illegible] sich [illegible] dunno what w' Sime can be thinkin' about, nothin' but money noo thin' an' lan'-grabbin' I reckon. If I had a gal I'd no more think o' lettin' 'er be hanored up with a [illegible] feller than that a way [illegible] I'd no more think o' lettin' 'er than I'd think o' takin' wings and flyin' t' Ingland. There ain't no sense—"

"Huh!" snorted the voice, in ultimate contempt. "What d' you know about raisin' gals? Cayn't see an inch ahead o' y'ur nose. Hyur we set, in our old age, bar'ly able t' keep soul an' body t'gether, when we might 'a' tuck our pick an' choice—an' me a dingin' it into y'u f'om daylight t' dark jist how it'd be, too."

"Oh, well, Liza" the old man rejoined, in tones more serious, "don't throw it up to a man b'cayse 'is foresight ain't as good as 'is hindsight. You might 'a' done worse. I hain't never be'n in jail yit, an' you hain't never be'n in the porehouse."

The dim figure rocked a while in silence.

"Gals is gittin' e'en a'most too high falutin' these days," she resumed, though in a milder voice. "Bound 'r free, Big Jack's a-plenty good enough f'r Texie Colin, the best breath she ever drawed, with all 'er money an' good looks.

"Use'n t' be a gal could git along with one beau, but now'days—huh—they ain't sadisfied 'less'n they've got two 'r three a-traipsin' after 'em. Things is comin' to a purty pass—that's what I say—to a purty pass. If a gal ain't sadisfied with one beau at a time, how in the name o' sense can y'u expect 'er t' be sadisfied with one husban' at a time?—now there's the business of it, I-jeeminy!"

The air of hard finality with which the grim lips were pursed up and twisted around toward the right ear, the crisp positiveness with which the words were uttered, almost made the twilight seem to crackle, like stiff parchment being folded after the reading of some weighty mandate.

Counterman dropped an arm across his knee and sat very still, as if afraid the slightest sound might touch off again that hair-trigger tongue; Uncle Nick looked away toward Black Rock; the bats darted about in the dim half light, intrepidly threading the bewildering labyrinth of fruit trees; a cricket at the corner of the porch tried to match the creak of Aunt Liza's rocking chair.

CHAPTER X

Warning of the Frogs.

While the cricket carried on his squeaking contest with Aunt Liza's rocking chair, Jack Warhope, in the tiny cabin at the homestead, sat reading by the candle on the small center table—studying would be a truer word, for the book was Professor Asa Gray's celebrated "Manual of Botany."

The breath of the trees came down over the cliff, caught and rustled the pliant sprays of the crimson rambler, then the countryside settled still; the words of the book blurred, dimmed, faded away, and from the transfigured page there looked out at him a face with laughing eyes.

A trim slim figure flitting with unconscious grace across the lawn to where a tall, suave, profoundly bowing man awaited by the rustic seat under the great maple at Whispering spring, crossed his mind—and the face was gone.

He laid the book aside, blew out the candle; turned his chair and sat staring into the fire, still faintly alive and fast waning, behind the open hearth of the cook stove A stick burned in two, fell into the coals and stirred out a tiny shower of sparks. A bright little blaze flared up, danced over the walls and timbers of the cabin, glinted upon the sword and spurs hanging under the companion pictures beneath the draped flag.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

MAKING PROGRESS

YOU may often be filled with wonder at the apparent ease with which some of your friends, of no pronounced ability, climb steadily and unerringly to the heights.

To your mind they are deficient in mentality and power of endurance, yet, in spite of your doubts, they keep mounting surely day by day, brushing aside difficulties with no observable effort and holding fast to their places.

Opposing forces do not daunt or discourage them.

They plan and execute. They refrain from boasting, yet within their hearts there is an ironlike resolution to stay in the fight until they meet victory.

Often they are footsore, exhausted in body and spirit, but never are they in a mood to admit defeat. They know quite as well as you that their talents are limited and their faults many. It is this conscious knowledge of their frailties that make them persist without pause in their commendable effort.

While you are having jolly times at night among the bright lights, they are seeking in the solitude of their room the precious nuggets of wisdom, digging deep below the surface.

They have become students of biography, following seriously the blazed trails of the noble men and women who only a few years ago passed over the highway to fame and left their sign-boards at the fatal cross-roads, where all later travelers may stop, read and gather new courage.

It must be a shallow sort of human being indeed who cannot see the value of such observation and study.

But whatever it may be with regard to the frivolous and fun-loving, this idea of following step by step the rugged paths of the great, striving to comprehend their emotions and to emulate their examples, is not only profitable to the earnest student but extraordinarily inspiring.

What dullard seeking improvement fails to find encouragement in reading of such men as Washington and Lincoln?

Those who cry "impossible" are those who need most to familiarize themselves with the trials of the immortals who overcame and won imperishable crowns.

SOMETHING ABOUT YOU

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

SOMETHING about you, just can't say
Just what it is, but, anyway,
Something I never really guessed
Makes you different from the rest,
Something the rest of the world can't see
Makes you all the world to me,
Something about your lips, your hair.
Something about you makes me care.

Something about you now and then,
Can't say what and I can't say when,
Something every little while,
Maybe your eyes, perhaps your smile,
Anyway, something hits me here,
Heart goes thump and my head feels queer,
Something about you like a queen,
Something—oh, you know what I mean.

Can't say when and I can't say what:
Something none of the rest have got,
Something I never seem to find
Anywhere else in womankind.
Many, many the girls I meet;
Something about you makes you sweet,
Something, somehow, I've never known,
Something about just you alone.

Something about you, mind and heart,
Makes you, somehow, a girl apart,
Lifts you all of the rest above,
Makes you, somehow, the girl I love.
Something about the things you say,
Something, somehow, in just the way
You do the things that you always do,
Something, somehow, that makes you you!

Has Anyone Laughed At You Because—

By ETHEL R. PEYSER

You Always Promise to Write?

And you usually do not. This laughter is kind and the light promiser often realizes little, how much he hurts. When you promise you really mean to fulfil it, but things come up to wean you: your work, your engagements, your fatigue, your hatred of letter writing. No doubt you want to write and yet you never get to it. It is because you have an idea your friends want a novel or serial. They don't—only a couple of lines would satisfy—you have too big ideas!

FIRELESS COOKER DISHES

FOR the busy house mother there is no convenience which is of greater comfort than a good fireless cooker. For a busy day, or a day away from home, or for a Sunday dinner, it alone is worth its cost.

Pot Roast With Potatoes

Sear a three-pound roast on all sides in a hot frying pan. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and put it into the cooker kettle. Pour over a pint of boiling water and if the meat is not very fat add a little fat from tried out suet. When boiling hot, from the stove, place in the cooker on a heated radiator and cover with another; both should be glowing hot. Cover and let stand in the cooker for three and one-half hours. One hour before serving open the kettle and drop in enough potatoes to serve the family—that have been cooking in boiling water long enough to become heated through. They will finish cooking if dropped into the broth beside the meat.

Chicken Pie

Cook a chicken in boiling [illegible] in cooker for five or six hours. When done remove the large bones, cut the meat into small pieces. Add to the gravy a pint of rich milk and thicken with two tablespoonfuls of flour. Season with salt, paprika and a little onion juice. Cover with a rich biscuit crust in the form of biscuits and bake in the calorie, using two hissing hot radiators.

Sour Milk Cake

Add a cupful of sugar to [illegible] eggs, a cupful of sour cream, a teaspoonful of soda, one and one-half cupfuls of flour, a teaspoonful of baking powder. Flavor with vanilla and bake forty-five minutes, using two radiators.

For breakfast, cereals, as the oatmeal after boiling for ten minutes into the cooker with one heated stone and allow it to stand until breakfast time. Reheat and serve. It will be well cooked.

Soups and stews are especially good cooked in a cooker and will need only the boiling liquid in the kettle for heat.

THE ROMANCE OF WORDS

"DECIMATE"

DURING the World war it was a comparatively frequent occurrence for some war correspondent to report that, during an attack, the German forces "were decimated by the withering fire of the allied troops." But, could he have gotten into spirit or ouija board communication with Julius Caesar, who holds a prominent place among the world's great war correspondents, the modern writer would have found that his statement meant something far different from what he imagined it did.

The word as we use it today is the outgrowth of the Roman custom of punishment for revolting cohorts. After the revolt had been crushed, every tenth man—decimus—would be selected by lot and put to death. If a cohort suffered in battle so that about one man in every ten was killed it was said to have been "decimated," but to use the word as a general synonym for great slaughter is hardly in accordance with its Latin origin. One might as well say that the attacking troops were "terribly tithed."

Lyric Poets of Germany.

Minnesingers was the name given to certain lyric poets of Germany that flourished during the Twelfth and Thirteenth centuries.

They were generally men of noble birth, and sang of love, friendship, religion, war and adventure at the court of kings and feudal barons. Although akin to the troubadours of Province, the minnesingers treated love in a more refined spirit and manifested a greater reverence for woman.

They wrote principally in the Swabian dialect of middle high German.—Detroit News.

Pneumonia Is "Catching."

Few people realize that pneumonia is one of the most prevalent of communicable diseases. Last year the reported incidence was greater than for any other diseases except influenza, measles and tuberculosis. For the first ten months of this year only measles exceeded pneumonia in prevalence.

The Idle Word.

An idle word may be seemingly harmless in its utterance, but let it be fanned by passion, let it be fed with the fuel of misconception, of evil intention, or prejudice, and it will soon grow into a sweeping fire that will melt the chains of human friendship, that will burn to ashes many cherished hopes, and blacken more fair names than one.

Catarrhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure catarrhal deafness and that is by a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Many cases of deafness are caused by catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure acts thru the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Catarrhal Deafness that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Circulars free. All Druggists, 75c.

Origin of Honeydew Melon.

The original seed of the honeydew melon is said to have been obtained from a melon shipped from Africa to New York city. The seed was planted at Rocky Ford, Colo., and crossed with other varieties for two or three seasons. The so-called honey-dew melon is the result. As yet this melon has not been brought into a stable condition of reproduction.

And whereas, the said Deposit Bank & Trust Company, the assignee and holder of said mortgage, has paid delinquent taxes upon the mortgaged property hereinafter described in the sum of Two Hundred Eighty-two and 21-100 ($282.21) Dollars; and whereas, the said Deposit Bank & Trust Company, the assignee and holder of said mortgage, has duly elected and does hereby elect to declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice, under the terms and conditions of said mortgage and the Power of Sale therein contained, and whereas, there is actually due and claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of Thirty-five Hundred ($3,500.00) Dollars, with accumulated interest from November 1st, 1920, at the rate of six and one-half per cent per annum and also the sum of $282.21 for taxes paid as aforesaid, with interest thereon from date of payment at the rate of six per cent per annum; and whereas, the said Power of Sale has become operative and no action or proceedings having been instituted at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof,

NOW, THERFORE, Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the Power of Sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and covered by said mortgage, viz:

South Half Southwest Quarter Section Twenty-two and North Half Northwest Quarter Section Twenty-seven, of Township One Hundred Fifty-six North, of Range Forty-one West of the Fifth Principal Meridian, in Marshall County and State of Minnesota.

Which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Marshall County at the Front door of the County Court House, in the City of Warren, in said County and State on the 19th day of March, 1924, at 11 o'clock A. M. of that day at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay the amount then due on said mortgage and interest and the sum of $282.21 for taxes paid on said described premises with interest from the date of payment, together with the costs and disbursements of such sale and Seventy-five Dollars attorneys fees stipulated in said mortgage in case of foreclosure.

Dated January 26, 1924.

President Coolidge's Tribute

To Abraham Lincoln

A proclamation issued January 30th, 1919, by Calvin Coolidge, then Governor of Massachusetts

FIVESCORE and ten years ago that Divine Providence, which infinite repetition has made only the more a miracle, sent into the world a new life, destined to save a nation. No star, no sign, foretold his coming. About his cradle all was poor and mean save only the source of all great men, the love of a wonderful woman. When she faded away in his tender years, from her deathbed in humble poverty she dowered her son with greatness. There can be no proper observance of a birthday which forgets the mother. Into his origin, as into his life, men long have looked and wondered. In wisdom great, but in humility greater, in justice strong, but in compassion stronger, he became a leader of men by being a follower of the truth. He overcame evil with good. His presence filled the nation. He broke the might of oppression. He restored a race to its birthright. His mortal frame has vanished, but his spirit increases with the increasing years, the richest legacy of the greatest century.

MEN show by what they worship what they are. It is no accident that before the great example of American manhood our people stand with respect and reverence. And in accordance with this sentiment our laws have provided for a formal recognition of the birthday of Abraham Lincoln; for in him is revealed our ideal, the hope of our country fulfilled.

NOW, therefore, by the authority of Massachusetts, the 12th day of February is set apart as and its observance recommended as befits the beneficiaries of his life and admirers of his character, in places of education and worship wherever our people meet one with another.

GIVEN at the Executive Chamber, in Boston, this 30th day of January, in the year of Our Lord one thousand nine hundred and nineteen, and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and forty-third.

LINCOLN'S GETTYSBURG ADDRESS

FOURSCORE and seven years ago our fathers brought forth upon this continent a new nation, conceived in liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal. Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battlefield of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field as a final resting place for those who here gave their lives that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this. But in a larger sense we can not dedicate, we can not consecrate, we can not hallow this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it far above our power to add or detract, the world will little note, nor long remember, what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us, the living, rather to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us, that from these honored dead we take increased devotion, to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion; that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain; that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, and for the people, shall not perish from the earth.

HAD TO LET HOUSEWORK GO

So Ill Husband had to do the Work. Completely Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

South Bend, Indiana.—"I was all run-down, tired out, and had pains in my back and bearing-down pains. I was so sore I could hardly drag myself around and was not able to do a bit of housework. My husband worked all day in the shop, and then came home and helped me at night. The doctors said I had female weakness, and there was no help but to be operated upon, and of course that would cost us a great deal. My husband heard about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at the factory and one night he stopped at the drug store and bought me a bottle of it. I had begun to think there was no help for me, but I took three bottles of it and now I feel like myself once more. The price for three bottles wasn't so much as the doctor had charged. I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound enough."—Mrs. DORA OSBORNE, 430 Sherman Avenue, South Bend, Ind.

Women troubled with female weakness should give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial—now. For sale by druggists everywhere.

The Appealing Charm of Health and Beauty

Sioux Falls, S. Dak.—"About two years ago I was in a rundown, nervous condition, my back ached terribly and I had bearing pains. I suffered from functional disturbances, and felt sick and mean all over. A friend told me about Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and she was so enthusiastic about it that I bought a bottle. I never took a medicine in my life that did me so much good; it strengthened me and rid me of all my aches and pains. My system was regulated and my nervousness left me. I am still just as well and strong as can be—never know a sick or wearisome day and I give all the credit to Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription."—Mrs. Christina Van Hess, 1425 N. Dakota Street.

In the glowing embers another face began to form, slowly—a face handsome in spite of its forbidding beard, formidable spectacles and drawn, peering eyes. Every act of the eccentric preacher-schoolmaster, since the day the Milford stage dropped him in front of the post office, passed before his mind—every act, as far as known, had been scrupulously circumspect.

Dreaming there by the dead embers of the fire, the woodsman found himself analyzing the preacher, in his careful way, from shiny boots to high hat. The ill-health excuse he had never believed, or rather, had set it down to an imaginary ailment—the man looked absolutely fit to enter a cross-country relay. He eliminated the elaborate frock coat, stiff neck stock, high hat and spectacles—divested of all oddities and accessories, there remained a tall and very capable man.

Then, there was the ivory-handled six-gun that happened to thud against the bottom of the skiff, and a pair of very deft hands feeling over the stacks of clothes—a circumstance that had totally escaped the other members of the seining party. Besides, there was the perfect agreement of the heel-prints on the dusty deck of the concealed houseboat—another circumstance that he alone knew.

If he was a college professor and a minister what was he doing in the Flatwoods? If he was not, still, what was he doing in the Flatwoods?

As he pondered, suddenly the dark face that had flared up from the floor of the woods and glowered at him over the log, slid into his mind. So close it came upon the heels of his attempted analysis of the preacher that the two thoughts fused into one. The connection was startling. It brought him up out of his chair and left him staring through the open cabin door into the night.

Was there a connection? Might it be possible that Ken, crime-stained and low-fallen, had sneaked back to the Flatwoods, and the preacher, being a college friend, was trying to befriend him—possibly save him? But no; there was the letter—it was absolutely genuine.

The woodsman straightened and stretched to rouse himself from the wild spell of the thought, to drag himself back from the drift of it; felt the revolver at his hip; crossed the floor and stepped out into the yard.

The night was unruffled; the woods breathed softly in the pale starlight. Back in the hills a red fox was barking; over in the bottoms a plover whistled his melancholy call; the lonesome wail of a timber wolf drifted down out of Eagle hollow.

But for the true woodsman the night has messages that other ears do not hear. As he stood in the yard sifting the sounds that rode the air, he suddenly bent forward and stood keenly listening. The frogs in Eagle run, just below the bridge in front of Uncle Nick's, had abruptly stopped croaking, only to begin again after a moment, while the frogs farther down fell silent—somebody was walking along the bank of the little stream. Somebody—frogs do not stop croaking at the tread of cattle or other like animals.

It was near midnight. Why should anybody be prowling in so secluded a spot at such an hour? The alert and experienced woodsman could even gauge the speed of the prowler by the successive silences that fell as he moved down the stream. He was going slowly—possibly creeping.

From the bridge at Uncle Nick's a foot-path led down the east bank of Eagle run and divided a short distance below, one fork leading around the base of Black rock to the Warhope homestead, the other on down the stream, through a small pasture lot and into the park-like orchard and grounds of Simon Collin. It was along this fork of the path that the night prowler was apparently stealing.

The woodsman hurriedly closed the cabin door, ran across the corner of the fallow yard, and the next moment was creeping cautiously along the fork of the path that led around under the dense shadows at the base of Black rock.

The caution of Jack Warhope was seldom at fault. There was always the chance that the woodcraft of the man he followed was as fine as his own. He paid him the compliment of keeping back from the stream, out of earshot of the frogs, and silently took up the trail.

Where the path crossed the fence into the little park the prowler stopped and stood for some time listening intently.

It is a law of the woods fundamental and primary, whether stalking animals or men—that the woodsman must never move while the creature he stalks is still. Jack, hardly twenty steps away, stood quiet as the breath of the night and waited.

With a final searching look in every direction, the man by the fence climbed cautiously over and stole down the creek bank into the little park. Jack crept up to the fence, crawled over and followed.

At Whispering spring the night prowler crouched down by the rustic seat, put his hands to his mouth and very cleverly imitated the quavering call of the screech owl. Jack seized the favorable moment, crept up as near as he deemed prudent and hid in the dense shadow of a clump of shrubbery.

The night was so placid that during the intervals between the imitative calls the low murmur of Whispering spring fell distinct and clear upon the silence. A few steps away the red-roofed cottage bulked large in the gloom.

The man had already twice given his call and was about to give it a third time, when the parlor door at the front of the house rather noisily opened, and a man came down off the porch and across the yard. As he walked over the brink of the slight decline where the yard dipped to the creek, he passed in outline for a brief moment against the southern sky.

It was the preacher.

His glasses were off, the stoop gone from his shoulders and his step showed not a sign of mincing. He was partly dressed, partly in his night clothes—precisely as one who had wakened naturally from sleep and gone into the yard for some trifling purpose or other. There was a light spot at his hip which the watcher under the clump of shrubbery surmised to be the ivory handle of the six-gun that had thudded against the bottom of the skiff.

He went straight to the spring, took down the dipper and dipped himself a drink, making a deal of noise in the act—even an unnecessary amount of it, as it seemed to the critical ears under the shrubbery.

The drink over, he hung up the dipper, with another clatter; sauntered past the man crouched by the rustic seat; snatched something that was reached out to him; hid it in the bosom of his shirt; whispered a very hurried word or two; strolled back up the yard; crossed the porch; re-entered the parlor door and locked it behind him.

The man crouching by the seat half-rose and slipped back the way he had come, the frogs, as before, falling silent as he came even with them and resuming their croak again after he had passed. Jack tried hard to make him out as he stole by, less than a dozen steps away, but he was so stooped and so shrouded in gloom that the effort was in vain.

And so they had come—and gone. A burden seemed to be lifted from the night. A clean breeze came down out of the cool dells of the serene woods as if to sweep away the taint of their presence.

The woodsman lay a long time listening, and reviewing the astonishing pantomime. Not a sound did he hear. He glanced up at the red-roofed cottage. From porch step to gable it lay as peaceful as its background of placid sky. It was hard to think that at that moment it might be standing at the danger-center of some intangible web of evil that was being woven about it.

He knew the lay of the house as well as he knew his own small cabin—along the south and fronting the road the seldom used parlor, with the spare bedroom opening off from it on the east; back of these the sitting-room, and the old banker's bedroom adjoining it, with the small room containing his safe opening off it on the west and extending some distance beyond the main wall; back of these rooms the dining-room and back of it the kitchen.

Front entrance to both parlor and sitting-room was from the wide porch, which filled up almost the entire jog between the parlor and the small room that served as office.

Mrs. Curry and Texie both slept upstairs, the latter over the old banker's bedroom, the former over the office. There were no rooms above the parlor and spare bedroom, these, with the porch, being a later addition to the original building.

With every possible caution Jack slowly crawled up the yard, around back of the house, and under the partly open window of the parlor bedroom; lay listening for a guarded moment; then rose, noiseless as the night, and peeped within.

On a chair just under the window hung the somber frock coat; on the bed a man breathed even and deep, apparently sleeping as tranquilly as a tired athlete.

CHAPTER XI

Knives of the Night.

A man strolling carelessly through the woods would be surprised to know how many eyes are on him, how many creatures scrooch in the covers and wait for him to pass. He might even imagine from the silence that he is alone. The true woodsman knows that he is never alone, that his slightest move is watched by a thousand eyes. The stillness does not deceive him.

But let something happen—a stick snap, or some creature break cover in sudden panic—and instantly all is commotion. The still woods wake to the call of voices, the beat of wings, the clatter of scampering feet.

In such quiet lay the forest next morning when Jack Warhope, threading the dew-bathed glades, inadvertently stepped on a brush that flipped up and rattled some dead leaves lodged in a thick cluster of sprouts growing about an old white oak stump.

A pheasant that happened to be hiding under the brush instantly flushed. It seemed as if the flurry of his wings fanned the whole woods alive. A fox squirrel bounced up out of the leaves and skurried away; a chipmunk dived into his den; a pair of blue jays set up their strident screech; a crow left the dead limb of an oak and went floundering along over the tree-tops squawking the news that the most dangerous animal in the world—a man—was loose in the woods.

With the heavy shotgun he carried—a present from the banker—Jack covered the pheasant as it glanced away until it blended with the dull gray of the trees and faded from sight. He dropped the butt of the gun to the leaves and stood listening to the beat of the swift wings, growing fainter, finally ending abruptly, and he knew the bird had settled again to the brush.

"Well, ol' drummer," he chuckled, speaking half aloud—a habit the woods teach men—and throwing the shotgun lightly across his arm, "y'u didn't need t' rush off without s' much as sayin' good morning. I could 'a' stopped y'u if I'd be'n a-mind to. I had y'u right on the end of my trigger finger."

Though Jack Warhope was considered a man of clumsy tongue, he could talk well enough to himself, or to the creatures of the woods. He even had a curiously sane and sensible philosophy—a sort of romantic idealism—that outcropped at such times.

The woods—the true, the constant, the steadfast woods—the first instinct of unspoiled men with a heartache—the vastness, the all sufficiency, the immense Shekinah of the solitudes. With the gun lying across his arm he stepped cautiously to where the pheasant had flushed and peered about under the brush and bushes.

As his straining gaze searched with extreme minuteness every leaf, or glimpse of weed or bark or grass blade, gradually a grayish-brown spot, just where the bush of a fallen limb lay along the side of a crumbling log, began to take shape. He shifted his position for a better view—the gray-brown spot was gone.

He located it again, and as he looked, slowly there grew out of the blending colors of the copse the figure of a hen pheasant on the nest, so perfectly harmonizing with the leaves and brush among which she hovered that only the very keenest eye could have spied her out at all. A moment he gazed, and slipped away as noiselessly as he had come.

"Let 'er alone," he muttered when at a safe distance. "Let 'er think I couldn't find 'er. She'll think if I couldn't the fox can't, and he's her greatest dread right now."

The trees were hardly leaved out enough yet to conceal a man walking carelessly through them, or fully keep back the sun from peeping down through the thick tangle of twigs and coaxing forth flower and grass blade from the quickening mold. The silver sheath of the hickory buds had already burst and sprung wide apart, the delicate green of the crinkled, newborn leaves appearing in sharp contrast to the purple sheen lining the rent scales. The oaks had begun to thrust forth the tender tips of their new foliage, investing the waking forest with a tint of faint grayish red, as if to the infant leaves some trace of the birth blush still clung.

Upon the floor of the woods spring had already spread a carpet of infinite color and design, new and bright and still unsoiled—here a fancy spangled pattern of spring beauties; there a pattern of solid green where the may-apples opened their umbrellas to the light, in readiness to shield the fragile flowers of white wax that were soon to hover beneath their sheltering folds; and, draped over all, a shimmering silver haze, the gracious benediction of the skies.

The man stopped before a crab-apple tree, the buds of which were opened just enough to make one curious to see more of the beautiful mystery folded teasingly away within the protecting scales. Already some bees, pioneers of their tribe, fussed about the aromatic clusters of peeping color, gathering statistics on the season's honey crop.

A breeze stirred the trees, as if the woods were taking a deeper breath. Jack lifted his shoulders and filled his lungs with the nectar-laden air. Warmed by the exuberance of life that rustled and quivered and thrilled around him there gushed up within him the Jubilate of a man wooed by the genial day into almost primal closeness to nature. He dropped the butt of the gun to the leaves, leaned lightly upon it and stood listening to the dull droning of the bees.

Prayer of the Tree.

Upon a tree in Portugal a traveler read this appeal:

Ye who pass by and would raise your hand against me, harken ere you harm me.

I am the heat of your hearth on the cold winter nights.

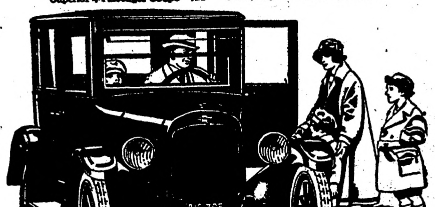
The friendly shade screening you from the summer sun.

And my fruits are refreshing drafts, quenching your thirst as you journey on.

I am the beam that holds your house, the board of your table, the bed you lie on, the timber that builds your boat.

I am the handle of your hoe, your door, the wood of your cradle and coffin.

Ye who pass me by listen to my prayer: Harm me not!



Why You May Need—

for Economical Transportation CHEVROLET

There are three main groups of prospective buyers of Chevrolet automobiles and commercial cars.

First, are all who know from comparisons or through the experiences of friends that Chevrolet provides the utmost dollar value in modern, economical transportation of people or merchandise.

Second, the large group of people with modest incomes who have the false impression that so good a car as Chevrolet is beyond their means.

They do not realize that due to engineering excellence and full modern equipment, Chevrolet operating and maintenance costs average so low that during the life of the car, it delivers modern, comfortable, fast transportation at the lowest cost per mile, including the purchase price.

Third, the smaller but very important group of car owners of ample means, only a small percentage of whom as yet realize that Chevrolet as an extra car virtually costs them nothing, due to the reduction in their transportation expenses effected by it.

We respectfully suggest consideration, investigation and comparison of Chevrolet with any other car at any price.

Caught the Post

Pat was walking along the road when, hearing a whir, he looked back and saw Larry flying fast and furious on a bicycle.

"Hi, wait a minute," shouted Pat. "I want to speak to you."

"I can't; I'm in a hurry. I want to catch the post," cried Larry, flying by.

Suddenly the bicycle swerved and crashed into a telegraph pole and Larry and the machine lay in a helpless tangle. When Pat came up Larry was extricating himself from the wire puzzle.

Cure for Insomnia

Insomnia victims have found strange cures, such as counting imaginary sheep passing through a gate, but an innkeeper in Europe, when she discovers one of her guests has not slept well, turns his bed so that it will face in another direction. She maintains from her long experience in catering to the comfort of travelers that some are "east and westers," while others are "north and southers," or "west and easters" when it comes to sleeping.

One Reason for Nervous Disorders

YOUR doctor can tell you that nervous disorders are very common among Americans. One reason for this is found in the fact that they are great coffee drinkers.

Coffee contains caffeine, a drug, prescribed by doctors as an emergency stimulant for the heart and nervous system. It has a tendency to increase blood pressure, develop heart irregularities and cause digestive disturbances.

If you feel that coffee is not good for you, serve Postum as your mealtime drink.

Postum is a pure cereal beverage that refreshes and satisfies. It is absolutely free from caffeine or any other irritating drug.

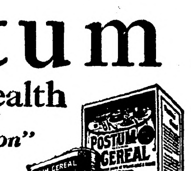
Postum for Health

"There's a Reason"

Postum comes in two forms: Instant Postum [in tins] prepared instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal [in packages] for those who prefer the flavor brought out by boiling fully 20 minutes. The cost of either form is about one-half cent a cup.



"Every Picture Tells a Story"

Is Winter Time Your Backache Time?

DOES every cold, chill or attack of grip leave you lame, achy and all worn out? Does your back throb and ache until it seems you just can't keep going another day? Do you know these troubles are often due to weakened kidneys?

Winter's colds and chills throw a heavy strain on the kidneys. The kidneys are apt to weaken and fall behind in filtering the blood. Poisons accumulate and upset blood and nerves.

Then comes constant backache, rheumatic pains, headache dizziness and kidney irregularities.

Don't wait! Delay is often serious. Use Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys. Doan's have helped thousands. They are recommended by users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

"Use Doan's," Say These Good Folks:

E. P. Laqua, farmer and contractor, Hankinson, N. Dak., says: "I took Doan's Pills for an attack of backache and lameness in the muscles of my hips and back. Taking cold, no doubt, is what brought this attack on me. There was a dull, nagging ache in the small of my back and the muscles of my hips were so lame it hurt every move I made. When I stooped over I could hardly straighten. I used Doan's Pills, however, and they cured me of the trouble."

Mrs. Catherine Duickas, Hankinson, N. Dak., says: "I had trouble with my kidneys and dull pains in my back. Soon I began to get so lame in the muscles of my hips that it hurt me dreadfully when I did any hard work about the house. Someone told me about Doan's Pills and I sent for a box. I am glad to tell anyone that that one box of Doan's cured me and left me feeling well."

WILSON: GREAT IN WORLD WAR

Momentous Struggle Placed Him at Zenith of Human Power and Fame.

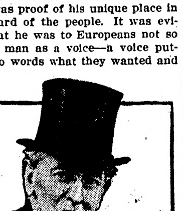
Woodrow Wilson, twenty-eighth president of the United States, was the human phenomenon of the World war, the most momentous of all the wars of history. At fifty-four he was no more than a university professor and political writer. At sixty-three he was in a place of fame and power unsurpassed in history. What place will history give him?

The great war brought to the front many men whose names will live in honor. In the last analysis three men stand out: Wilson, Lloyd George, Clemenceau. Of these three it was Wilson who held the world's eye—Wilson, the human phenomenon of the times, until fifty-four no more than a college president and political writer and at sixty-three on a pinnacle of fame and honor and power unsurpassed if ever attained by any man in history.

It is impossible now to differentiate between Woodrow Wilson the man and Woodrow Wilson the head of the most powerful nation of earth in wealth, material and fighting men. Certainly he could not have reached the place he held without great ability and extraordinary capacity for leadership. By virtue of his place he became a focus of world attention as soon as the great war began. Before the armistice was signed he had become a great moral leader with the ear of the peoples of the world. Only as such could he have forced upon the allied world the unofficial acceptance of his project of a league of nations, with its fourteen points as set forth to congress January 18, 1918.

Abroad and at Home.

The enthusiasm evoked by President Wilson's visits to Paris, London and Rome was proof of his unique place in the regard of the people. It was evident that he was to Europeans not so much a man as a voice—a voice putting into words what they wanted and had not been able to express; his ideas and ideals were a sort of religion to them.



WOODROW WILSON

But he showed himself a statesman as well as a voice. He played the game masterfully. He established sympathy between himself and his man or his crowd. He made few if any mistakes in taste or judgment. He "matched his mind," to use his own expression, with the best of Europe and he got his league of nations before the peace conference and got it adopted.

President Wilson's two months in Europe may be divided into phases. When he landed the attitude toward the league of nations was this: The government of France was antagonistic; Great Britain's was suspicious; Italy's was skeptical. The first phase, his triumphant progress through France, England and Italy opened the eyes of these governments to his hold on the people. The second phase, the preliminary work of the peace conference, convinced these governments that President Wilson had an idea rather than a set plan which he purposed to force upon them.

Contemporary estimates of President Wilson at home were as wide apart as the poles. Senator J. Thomas Heflin (Dem., Ala.) when representative spoke on the floor of "Woodrow Wilson, the greatest apostle of world liberty and democracy since Jesus Christ."

Senator Thomas W. Hardwick (Dem.) of Georgia, said January 21 in the senate: "I believe in a written constitution. I believe in a strict interpretation of it . . . and I believe that unless we leave and abandon this mad saturnalia of imperialism here at home and return to the ancient principles of our fathers there will be no safety nor happiness for the people of this republic."

Senator Albert B. Cummins (Rep.) of Iowa expressed the half-way view when he said in the senate January 23: "I think President Wilson is the most intensely practical statesman of this or any other day. He began his administration in the belief that the executive office had not the power that it ought to have. He has accomplished more in the direction in which he set his face and his mind than any other man, either in this generation or in any former generation; and the only criticism, if it be a criticism, is that he has not marched in the right direction and has done things that he ought not to have done."

In the process of wresting from congress all the powers he believed the Constitution conferred upon the executive, President Wilson made many political enemies who questioned not his ability, but his motives and methods. To particularize would be largely to review the political history of the last six years. The railroad situation, however, may be cited as an example. Representative E. E. Denison (Rep.) of Illinois said January 15, 1919, "Government ownership of railroads will be the dominant political issue in the next national campaign and Mr. McAdoo will of course expect to be the candidate of his party. He will hope to capitalize what has been done for the railroad men."

President Wilson was re-elected in 1916 upon a peace platform. October 25, 1918, just before the congressional elections, he issued an appeal to the voters of the United States asking them, if they had approved of his leadership and wished him to continue to be their unembarrassed spokesman in affairs at home and abroad, to express themselves unmistakably to that effect by returning a Democratic majority to both houses. The result of the elections was to change the political complexion of both houses as follows: 65th congress—Senate, 51 Democrats and 45 Republicans; house, 215 Republicans and 213 Democrats. 66th congress—Senate, 47 Democrats and 49 Republicans; house, 239 Republicans and 193 Democrats.

President Wilson in attending the peace conference made several new departures. He left the country during office. He took the office with him, signing acts and making appointments while in Paris. He ignored the senate, though he is empowered by the Constitution to make treaties "by and with the advice and consent of the senate."

He appointed as the American representatives himself, Secretary of State Robert Lansing, Henry White, Edward M. House and General Tasker H. Bliss. He sailed December 4, 1918, and arrived at Paris December 14. The French capital was en fete for the occasion. December 24 he went to England and thence to Italy. He returned to Paris January 8, after a journey that resembled a "triumphal procession."

After the preliminary sessions of the peace conference President Wilson returned to the United States in February, returning to Paris March 15, 1919. He signed the peace treaty June 28, 1919, and returned to the United States July 8. His second term as president expired March 3, 1920.

After his retirement from the presidency Mr. Wilson lived quietly, making a partly successful fight to regain his health. He occasionally went to the theater and rode much in his car about the environs of Washington. He bought a home in Washington and in 1921 formed a law partnership with Bainbridge Colby, who had been his secretary of state, succeeding Robert Lansing. He took part in the funeral procession of President Harding in Washington and was the recipient of much public attention.

Mr. Wilson's last public utterance was last fall, November 10, 1923, the eve of Armistice day, he spoke by radio to the American people, defending his peace policy and saying that the American people had withdrawn into a "sullen and selfish isolation which is deeply ignoble because manifestly cowardly and dishonorable."

Armistice day Mr. Wilson briefly addressed thousands from the front steps of his home, concluding thus:

"I am not one of those that have the least anxiety about the triumph of the principles I have stood for. I have seen fools resist Providence before and I have seen their destruction, as will come upon these again—utter destruction and contempt. That we shall prevail is as sure as that God reigns. Thank you."

Woodrow Wilson was born December 28, 1856, in Staunton, Va. He was the son of Rev. Joseph R. Wilson, a Presbyterian minister, and Jessie (Woodrow) Wilson. In 1885 he married Ellen Louise Axson. They had three daughters—Jessie (Mrs. Francis B. Sayre), Eleanor (Mrs. W. G. McAdoo) and Margaret. Mrs. Wilson died August 16, 1914, in the White House. December 18, 1915, Mr. Wilson married Edith (Bolling) Galt, a descendant of Pocahontas. The first 29 years of Mr. Wilson's life covered his boyhood and education. The next 25 were devoted to teaching and writing. With his election to the governorship of New Jersey in 1910 began his active political career. His chronology includes this:

1890—Professor of jurisprudence and political economy at Princeton.

1902—President of Princeton (first nonclerical)

Origin of Honeydew Melon.

The original seed of the honeydew melon is said to have been obtained from a melon shipped from Africa to New York city. The seed was planted at Rocky Ford, Colo., and crossed with other varieties for two or three seasons. The so-called honey-dew melon is the result. As yet this melon has not been brought into a stable condition of reproduction.

Strain on Human Body.

In hot weather the human body makes an extraordinary effort to adapt itself to conditions and meet the strain placed upon it. Violent overheating or great physical effort for a few hours causes the body to throw off some four liters of fluid. In other words, the perspiration secreted in a brief while is greater than the entire blood supply of the body.

Breadfruit.

The breadfruit, with the coconut and banana, furnishes the chief food of the natives of the Pacific islands. That is why we call it "breadfruit," because, for them, it takes the place of bread. Apart from its fruit, the tree itself is a very useful one, for, when beaten out, the inner bark forms a fine white cloth called tapa cloth.

Dravolette.

A new material, "dravolette," is used by a German inventor in the manufacture of safety razors. It looks like ivory, tortoise shell or marble, depending on the manner in which it is manufactured. The advantage of the material lies in the fact that the apparatus cannot rust. There is no need to dry the razor after use, it is sufficient to rinse it. Another advantage is that it is cheaper than razors made of metal.

Chicago—Louis L. Radt, a diamond salesman for a New York firm, reported to the police that he had been kidnaped by three bandits who robbed him of diamonds valued at $50,000 and threw him out of their automobile.

Omaha—Robert R. Pointer of Dearborn, Mich., was nominated as the presidential candidate of the people's progressive party at the first convention of that organization. Roy M. Harrop of Omaha was nominated as the vice-presidential candidate.

New York—Two representatives of the internal revenue department examined account books of the Antisaloon league of New York, showing the income of William H. Anderson, state superintendent of the league, who was convicted of third degree forgery.

Aurora, Ill.—Warren Lincoln's tulip bed, where he said he thought he had buried the headless bodies of his wife, Lina, and her brother, Byran Shoup, were completely dug out, but nothing was found.

Chicago—A sword swallowing act at a vaudeville show appeared easy as Jacob Sienke sat in the audience and watched the trick done. He went home and tried it himself, according to hospital authorities, who announced that he had died from lacerations of his throat.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Inauguration of an employees saving and stock ownership plan by the Bethlehem Steel corporation was announced by Eugene G. Grace, president. The corporation, he said, would assist its employees to purchase its 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock on easy payments.

Little Rock, Ark.—Verlim D. (Red) Orr and L. A. Wise, former Missouri & North Arkansas railway strikers, serving from seven to 10 years in the state prison here, on pleas of guilty to a charge of arson, were granted full and complete pardons by Governor T. C. McRae.

El Paso, Texas—Mrs. Alvaro Obregon, wife of the Mexican president, accompanied by her five children, arrived in El Paso from Irapuato. She is enroute to Hermosillo, where her father, Francisco Tapin, is dangerously ill. Mrs. Obregon traveled to Juarez on a special train guarded by 50 soldiers.

Oklahoma City—The mills of the gods that grind slowly, but exceedingly fine, after 25 years have brought to Colonel Reginald P. McNally, U. S. A., of this city, recognition of an act of bravery in the Philippine islands. On April 25, 1900, Colonel McNally, then a second lieutenant, led a squad of nine men against 200 Filipino insurrectionists on the Bodoc river in Luzon, routing the entire number and bringing his men through uninjured. He has been cited for gallantry in action.

D. Rockefeller, Jr.

Muskegon, Mich.—With rudder swept away by a small submerged iceberg and a hole stoved in its hull, the freighter Sheboygan, owned by the Hill Steamship company of Kenosha, Wis., was towed into port here and the crew of 37 men taken off.

El Paso—A shipment of 50,000 rounds of ammunition for use by the Obregon forces against the rebels crossed the border.

Wilkesbarre, Pa.—Six men, all residents of Mainville, Pa., are under arrest charged with burning the breaker and dynamiting the commissary of the Beaver Valley Coal company.

New York—The steamers America and Rotterdam arrived after being delayed and buffeted by the worst storms their skippers ever experienced. Waves broke over the Rotterdam's bridge, 72 feet above the water line.

New York—Former Supreme Court Justice Harrington Putnam was elected president, and Chief Justice William Howard Taft re-elected honorary president of the American branch of the International Law association which conducted its third annual meeting at the University club last night.

Sports

St. Paul—Nick Allen, catcher of the St. Paul baseball team, was appointed manager of the Saints for 1924 by John W. Norton, owner. Allen was chosen over a long list of other aspirants for the position. He was picked as the best choice of all those available, as possessing the best qualities of leadership, Norton said, in making the announcement.

Chamonix, France — The United States hockey team scored an easy victory in its first match in the winter sports of the Olympic games, defeating the Belgium team by the score of 19 to 0. The Americans simply toyed with the Belgians during the first period. Drury, Rice and McCarthy promptly got their combination work going, completely bewildering the Belgian players, and scoring almost at will.

Minneapolis—Dr. W. K. "Bill" Foster, for 14 years gymnastic coach at the University of Minnesota, who resigned last year, has been appointed as gym coach again to succeed Herbert Watson who leaves this week for Pontiac, Mich., to become a Boy Scout executive. Foster coached every gymnasium team from 1908, the year of graduation, until his retirement last year. Foster developed into a great gym athlete during his student days at Minnesota.

Minneapolis—Stepping into larger fistic fields for attractions that will have national interest, Frank McCormick, Minneapolis boxing promoter, hung up a purse of $100,000 for a 10-round no decision battle between Luis Firpo and Tommy Gibbons for the first week in May at the Nicollet ball park. McCormick authorized Tommy Walsh, his vice president, to wire his offer to Eddie Kane, manager of Tommy Gibbons and Billy McCarney, who is looking after Firpo's interests in America.

New York—Mike McTigue, world's light heavyweight champion, and Georges Carpentier will open the outdoor season with a bout for the title in one of the New York ball parks. The event will be the feature of an all star card that is to be staged for the benefit of the milk fund. McTigue has agreed to terms and promised to meet Gene Tunney, the American champion, later in the summer, if he is successful against the Frenchman. McTigue is now trying to get out of a contract he signed several months ago to meet Tunney this winter.

Foreign

Paris — French naval experts are watching the invention of Professor Gugielmo Motti, Italian savant, who is experimenting with Civita Vecchia, discoverer of a new law for light traversing water, enabling submarines to see clearly under water regardless of the depth.

Tokio—The American Ambassador Cyrus E. Woods, and Mrs. Woods, returning to Japan from the United States, arrived here aboard the liner President Taft, three days behind schedule. They were just in time to hasten to the Imperial palace to attend the reception for foreign diplomats given by the Prince Regent Hirohito and his bride.

Vera Cruz—Large crowds witnessed the ceremonies attending the taking of the bodies of Captain Sparrow of the United States cruiser Tacoma and two radio men killed in an accident aboard the vessel, to the Prometheus, which is carrying the bodies to the states. Marines from the Prometheus received the bodies from the naval school where they had been with a guard of honor composed of naval cadets.

Paris — France's war damages total 82,000,000,000 francs (about $3,700,000,000), according to statistics compiled by Minister of the Liberated Regions Reibet. The total marks a reduction of 18,000,000,000 francs ($820,000,000) from an estimate made on Jan. 15, 1922, and is chiefly reduced through a revision of claims and damages after investigations revealed frauds and exaggerated demands by persons whose property had been devastated.

Paris—Harry F. Sinclair, the American oil promoter, is ill with a severe cold contracted during his recent voyage from New York to France. It was learned that Mr. and Mrs. Sinclair have moved from Paris to Versailles to obtain a more quiet environment, and, it is stated, incidentally to discourage the swarms of newspaper reporters who have been attempting to interview Mr. Sinclair with regard to the situation surrounding the Teapot Dome oil lease inquiry in progress at Washington.

Belgrade—M. Rodzianko, president of the last Russian duma, is dead here. M. Rodzianko was born in 1859. He was first elected president of the duma in Russia in 1911, his choice being considered a forerunner of reconciliation between the Octobrists and the then Premier Stolypin.

Tokio—Kermit Roosevelt, president of the Roosevelt Steamship company, announced completion of an alliance between that company and the Kokusai Kisen Kaisha, one of the leading shipping firms of Japan, which will provide for a round-the-world freight service.

News Briefs from All the State

Condensed Stories of Happenings of the Week in Minnesota

Ruthton—Dedication exercises and services which were conducted at the new school building were well attended by residents adjoining this and other school districts.

Northfield — The campaign for changes in the Northfield city charter took definite form when appointment of a new charter commission by District Judge F. W. Senn was announced.

DEATH ENDS CAREER OF NOTED AMERICAN

War-time Leader Loses Gallant Struggle After Lingering Illness; End Peaceful

Washington.—Woodrow Wilson has found in eternity a haven from the storms and sorrows of a troubled world.

In the prayerful quiet of a Sunday morning death folded him gently in its embrace and bore him to his Maker.

He passed from life while he slept, with those he loved best close about him. His broken body had weakened little by little until the last spark of his vitality went out. But his spirit was supported to the last by the indomitable courage of the old fighting days. In his last wakeful moments he told his loved ones that he knew the end had come, and was ready.

Whether there will be a state funeral ceremony or merely a private gathering of those nearest him to pay their last meed of devotion, is still to be decided. It depends almost entirely on the wishes of the widow who has been his ever present help in the long weary months of his illness and who was with him when he died.

30 Days Mourning.

The federal government already has offered to do whatever is fitting to express the nation's reverence at the passing of a great leader. President Coolidge called at the home of bereavement, expressed his regret and his readiness to be helpful and then issued a proclamation of 30 days official mourning. Over the White House and the government departments, on the nation's fighting ships at sea, and over the outposts of American diplomacy in foreign lands; the Stars and Stripes were brought to half mast. Congress Monday recessed in respect for his memory, and the whole machinery of the government whose guiding genius he was for eight momentous years will stand still on the day of his funeral.

The place of entombment has not been selected, but it is probable his body will be placed for a while in a Washington cemetery. There it will await the erection of a memorial to serve as his last resting place, and to perpetuate fittingly in stone the memory of those great days of crisis when the whole world hung upon his words.

Although he had not known a well day since he crossed the threshold of his place of retirement, or for months before, last Friday saw the beginning of the end of his long illness. His collapse during his western speaking trip in 1919, followed by a stroke of paralysis soon after his return to Washington, had made him almost an invalid long ago. Early last week a slight digestive disorder further weakened his delicate vitality, and on Friday his friend and physicial, Dr. Grayson, found his condition growing hourly more serious.

Without Pain to the Last.

He refused nourishment, and by Saturday night he was barely conscious. At 9 P. M. he fell asleep and never wakened again. It was at 11:15 A. M. Sunday that life finally went out. From first to last he was without pain, and in his last wakeful moments he appeared to be resting in complete comfort.

As the end approached the little group watching in the sickroom drew nearer about him.

Mrs. Wilson sat on the bed beside him, with his almost lifeless hand in both of hers. Close by was his eldest daughter, Margaret Wilson and Admiral Grayson, faithful in his ministrations since the first sign of illness more than four years ago, watched for some new way at last to help him as he crossed the bar.

But there was nothing to be done. More and more feeble became the pulse beat; little by little death was completing its conquest. A quick flutter of eyelids, a faint twitch almost like a smile, across the wasted features and the spirit of the great war president had burst at last the long weakening fetters that bound it to earth.

Thus, he who had dreamed a high dream of peace for all the world had found peace for himself, and had left behind a world still tossed by strife and turmoil.

Thus, he against whom life had turned at last, after leading him through paths of greatest glory, found death gentle and even merciful.

Thus, with the soft chanting of hymns floating in on the sabbath air, was written the last letter of that imperishable chapter of human history comprising the life of Woodrow Wilson.

Expressions of sorrow over the death of former President Wilson and tributes to his greatness of character as a man and as chief executive of the United States continue to arrive hourly at the home of the dead leader.

A Man of Unusual Personality.

Washington—Woodrow Wilson's personality was in many respects the most unusual that ever inhabited the White House. It commanded from millions an admiration approaching worship; it aroused in others aversions amounting to hatreds. Mr. Wilson himself, acknowledged that he had a "single track mind." Friends acknowledged he was reserved, critics said he was cold. His few intimates declared he was neither and joined in acclaiming him one of the most delightful of associates.

THE DAIRY

YOUNG CALVES LIKE GRAIN GROUND FINE

The kind and amount of grain fed a young calf has much to do with its vigor and growth. Most calves will get interested in the grain box when two or three weeks old. Grain is a cheaper feed than whole milk so the calf should be encouraged to eat it at an early age.

About the time the change is made from whole milk to skim milk, some grain should be placed before the calf. If grain is left in the feed box all the time, it is likely to become stale. Calves should have only what they will clean up in one feeding. Feeding grain immediately after the skim milk will help to prevent the calves from sucking each other.

Young calves prefer grain finely ground, but older calves like it coarsely ground. After the calves are two or three months old, whole grains may be satisfactorily fed. A calf will consume two to three pounds of grain daily when three months old if fed twice a day, and usually more if allowed grain at will.

Such feeds as corn, oats, barley and kafir are excellent calf feeds. A good mash can be made from equal parts of ground corn and oats. Wheat bran may be substituted for ground oats if oats are not available. Equal parts of bran, ground corn and oats make a good feed. Oilmeal added to the ration tends to keep the calves sleek and in good condition.

Calves will begin to eat small quantities of hay about the time they take an interest in the grain. For calves eight to ten weeks old, red clover or mixed hay is recommended in preference to alfalfa hay, due to the latter often causing intestinal trouble. Legume hays are very palatable and contain a large amount of protein and mineral matter which are necessary for growing animals.

Good quality corn silage may be fed when the calf is three months old or older. Only the finer parts of fresh silage should be fed. Do not allow it to lie around in the manger until spoiled.

Well-Designed Barn Has Much Advertising Value

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A well-designed attractive dairy barn has an appreciable advertising value, especially when the owner derives a portion of his income from the sale of surplus animals. The cost of a new barn, however, should not go beyond the point where the interest on the investment, plus depreciation, will become an excessive overhead load.

Some of the other factors to consider in building are climate, topography, drainage, location relative to other buildings, size and state of the dairyman's business, fire risk, materials available for construction, and local regulations covering the production, handling and disposal of milk. Farmers' Bulletin 1342, Dairy Barn Construction, just issued by the United States Department of Agriculture, answers many of the questions suggested above. It gives correct principles of construction of dairy barns; plans of one and two-story buildings; and details of the construction of windows, ventilating flues, cow stalls, floors and drainage systems.

This bulletin may be obtained, while the supply lasts, upon application to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Every Dairy Cow Should Have Rest of Six Weeks

Every dairy cow should be "dried off" for at least six weeks before calving and it is the practice of all up-to-date dairymen to so treat the cows. It is accomplished by milking her only every other time for a few days, lengthening the intervals until there are practically no strippings. Reduce the food during the drying-off period. Rub camphorated oil under the udder each night and morning if milk secretion persists.

Inexpensive Powder for Killing Lice on Cattle

Cows rub their necks? Act as if they had bugs? Probably they have. Get a good louse powder. Usually the trouble is local and the whole hide doesn't need to be treated. The best and cheapest powder is made from three pounds of flowers of sulphur, one pound of sabadilla powder and a half pound of insect powder. Mix well and put in an old pepper shaker. Sabadilla should be asked for first because some drug stores don't keep it in stock.

Box Stalls Recommended for Maximum Production

Cows kept in box stalls produce more milk and slightly more butterfat than those kept in stanchions, according to the United States Department of Agriculture, but the slight increase in product does not balance the added expense for space, bedding, and labor. Box stalls are to be recommended only when maximum production is desired regardless of expense, as in testing cows for records.

LINCOLN'S GETTYSBURG ADDRESS • •

FOURSCORE and seven years ago our fathers brought forth upon this continent a new nation, conceived in liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal. Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battlefield of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field as a final resting place for those who here gave their lives that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this. But in a larger sense we can not dedicate, we can not consecrate, we can not hallow this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it far above our power to add or detract, the world will little note, nor long remember, what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us, the living, rather to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us, that from these honored dead we take increased devotion, to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion; that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain; that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, and for the people, shall not perish from the earth.

The Fortunate Boy

by Ida M. Tarbell in Collier's

HOW devoid of understanding is he that pities Abraham Lincoln's youth! It was so hard, we say, so meager and ugly—no comforts, no hair mattress, no electric light, no free library, no ready-made clothes. We rehearse what we know he did not have, but fail to see what he did have.

The real boy Lincoln was not he who slept in the loft of a log cabin through whose chinks the snow may sometimes have sifted; it was the boy who came home after a long day's work with glowing eyes, hugging to his heart a book—a borrowed book—who did his chores almost unconsciously, his mind on the joy that awaited him. What mattered it to him that he must gather chips and shavings to keep the logs flaming, if he would have a light to read by? He had a book to read, and he read it until sleep overtook the household, and then carried it up to bed that at the break of day it might be within his reach.

The real boy was not he who struggled with plow or ax or flatboat rudder; it was he who while working rehearsed over and over the passages that he had read the night before, making them his own. It was the boy who as he traveled the furrow visualized George Washington, Valley Forge, the crossing of the Delaware, who learned to declaim the "Great Declaration"—a thing born so close to his own time that no disappointing experiences had yet chilled its noble phrases. To him there was a quality of truth, of possible realization in the famous document which thrilled and ennobled him. The real boy Lincoln was the one who, in those days, we call so hard, carried with him a faith in the possibility of freedom and opportunity for all men, a faith which grew as he toiled.

He is not the one to be pitied. Pity the boy who, surrounded by all the thousands of volumes which rehearse the making and interpret the meaning of the Declaration of Independence, has never yet caught its vision or felt the fire of its inspiration.

His Craving for Books.

He must walk far for the book—beg it from neighbors who knew him, build acquaintance with strangers into confidence sufficient to borrow. Pity him for that? He had to learn a great thing—that the book is worth the price—any price. What did he grudge that brought him Bobby Burns or Aesop or Plutarch or the Constitution of the United States, or a collection of the strange and changing laws of men—that brought him anything that dealt with the workings of men's hearts and minds?

Pity the book hunter! What if the chase was long, the path hard, the footwear worn, the coat of homespun—what was all that to him? It was the quarry, not the way, of which he thought. A book in hand, he walked homeward with the man he had found—Jefferson, Shakespeare, Bunyan, Defoe—and for days, whatever came, cold, short rations, hard labor, Jefferson, Shakespeare, Bunyan, Defoe was by his side.

No, this boy is not to be pitied, but rather he who has never longed for a book, never walked a mile to borrow one—he who when a book is by his side can keep his hands from it, who can live among books daily, incurious, unacquainted.

The boy Lincoln did not read for forgetfulness. The book was not a sedative, a soporific for him. It did not take him out of Spencer county, Indiana, but rather helped him to understand Spencer county. It interpreted to him the thing of which he and Thomas Lincoln and Nancy Hanks Lincoln, and all of these neighbors and friends of theirs, were a part.

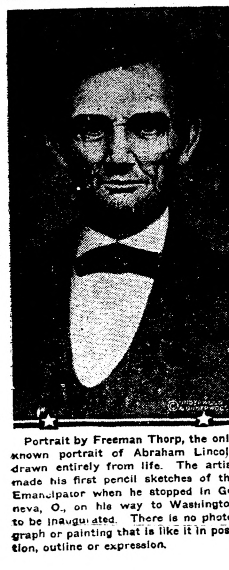
Read to Remember.

The pioneer life had its excitements and allurements—discovery, danger, hope lifted it out of the commonplace. Young Lincoln shared all this; and the book told him, as those about him could not, the meaning, the reasons, behind it all. It traced the path that a long line of forbears had traveled westward—their sacrifices, their hopes! Through the book he saw southwestern Indiana and its people as a scene in a great and noble drama—saw its relation to the opening of the new continent, the upbuilding of a new kind of government, the founding of something which would admit more and more men to the opportunities of the earth.

The book did something else for him—it helped him to understand human beings. His curiosity about them was insatiate—their ways, their thoughts, their passions, their meannesses, their nobilities. The boy Lincoln saw wide ranges of human material—a few men of education; many men of patient, steady, daily labor—reverent, believing men; he saw those of riotous life, and not a few of men of petty living—dirty habits, physical and mental. He shirked no man. He was curiously impersonal in his contacts with men. He sought to know them—and the book helped him. Aesop, Bunyan, Burns, Shakespeare—all of them helped him understand the men of Spencer county, Indiana. He loved and sought the book because of the light and understanding it gave to life.

Do not pity him because he had no steadier glow to read by than that of blazing logs—rather rejoice that he read!

Only Life Portrait of Lincoln



Portrait by Freeman Thorp, the only known portrait of Abraham Lincoln drawn entirely from life. The artist made his first pencil sketches of the Emancipator when he stopped in Geneva, O., on his way to Washington to be inaugurated. There is no photograph or painting that is like it in position, outline or expression.

Crop Changes Are Found Necessary

Unusual Number of Adjustments Have Been Made by Farmers.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Although types of farming in the United States are more or less fixed by necessary adaptation to conditions of soil, climate, and markets, they are always undergoing minor changes, and the last few years with the unprecedented disturbances in commodity prices and in production and transportation costs, have brought about an unusual number of readjustments. The United States Department of Agriculture has obtained reports on crop changes in many states, which give some idea of the shake-up in agriculture.

Eastern farmers, with a high freight rate differential in their favor, are considering whether they cannot produce some of the feed which they now buy. In the South the inroads of the boll weevil have compelled some farmers to turn from specialization in cotton to other crops. Flax has been successfully substituted for wheat in a small portion of the spring wheat region.

For many farmers flax is a highly attractive crop as a substitute for part of their wheat. This was demonstrated by the cash returns from the 1922 crops, which were high for flax and low for wheat. As a result, flax acreage, this year was increased to 2,300,000 acres from 1,300,000 acres in 1922. The present flax acreage is the largest since 1913. Yet home production will probably not supply half the home demand. We have imported flax every year since 1909. Under the present tariff of 40 cents a bushel, it is likely flax acreage will increase still more.

There has been a big increase in the number of sheep in the United States in the last two years, under the stimulus of tariff protection and an active demand for wool. Two-thirds of our sheep are raised on the range and one-third on the farms. Many farmers who already have sheep can no doubt increase their flocks with profit, say live stock experts in the Department of Agriculture. Others, it is said, could profitably add sheep to the live stock enterprises.

Sheep Rasing Profitable.

In the last year the farm price of sheep has risen from $4.80 to $7.50 a head; the farm price of wool has increased from an average of 29 cents a pound in 1922 to 38 cents. These advances have been a boon to many farmers whose major crops have not brought good prices. Further expansion of the sheep industry probably would be profitable.

Farmers in the semi-arid regions, especially in western North Dakota and eastern Montana, are finding that it pays them to grow corn on land which they have been accustomed to summer-fallow. With only a small additional amount of labor required for planting and cultivating, they are growing a feed crop which helps them to broaden their live stock production. Experts of the Department of Agriculture say that farmers in these areas who have enough live stock should plant as much corn as they can conveniently handle.

If the present price of corn continues, it is believed it will be profitable to increase the corn acreage in most of the corn belt. In 1922 the spread in Ohio between the value of an acre of corn and that of an acre of wheat was wider than in any year since 1913. An acre of corn in Ohio this year promises to be worth nearly twice as much as an acre of wheat or oats. In Chester county, Pa., the average value of an acre of corn giving the normal yield of 65 bushels at 70 cents a bushel would be $45, while the value of an acre of wheat yielding 25 bushels at 85 cents would be only $21. While this relation exists farmers naturally have a strong motive to reduce their wheat acreage and keep their corn acreage up to the highest point consistent with a balanced labor program and the maintenance of soil fertility.

Wheat acreage has been cut down throughout the country since 1919 except in parts of the Northwest states, which are practically a one-crop area. The location and size of farms in this one-crop territory often prevent any fundamental change in the type of farming. Yet farmers are introducing milk cows on their farms, or increasing the number already owned. Some have been successful with hogs and poultry. A combination of wheat, corn and live stock has been tried on some farms with good results.

Farming conditions are more hazardous in the Montana triangle than in any other part of the spring wheat area. Many of the "dry" farms in the territory have been abandoned. Some of the farmers who have stayed are trying mixed farming. Government experts believe there are prospects of success in some localities.

Farmers Overlook Opportunities

Farmers in some parts of the country are overlooking opportunities to make money, in the opinion of department experts. Investigators who recently studied conditions around Altoona, Pa., found that the city shipped in 92 per cent of all the potatoes it consumed in 1922. Blair county, in which the city is located, is a good potato growing area. Farmers there might increase their production greatly and still have the advantage of a first class local market. Most of the Blair county farmers are dairymen. Probably dairying is on the whole a more profitable occupation for them than potato growing. Since, however, potatoes can apparently be shipped in from distant states at a profit, and since a few more acres of potatoes could be grown on many Blair county farms without limiting the extent of profitableness of dairying, there should be money in increased local production.

In the Yakima valley, Washington, potato growers are working on plans to prevent a repetition of losses suffered in the last few years from lack of a readily accessible market. Probably the Yakima valley produces larger yields of potatoes of the highest grade than any other area in the country. The Yakima reclamation projects in 1922 produced an average of 260 bushels an acre on the 8,442 acres harvested. Yet the growers lost money, and a large part of the crop had to be dumped back on the fields.

To reduce such losses in the future, new plans for marketing the choicest grade of potatoes are under consideration. It is proposed to grade and sort the potatoes, wrap each one in paper, and pack them in small boxes for shipment by the Panama canal to Eastern markets. Potatoes thus packed, it is figured, could be laid down in New York at a cost of transportation of $1.25 a hundred pounds, and would command premium prices. High rail rates have shut out Yakima potatoes from some formerly profitable markets, and a way to overcome this handicap is urgently required.

Dairy Cows Require Warm Water in Winter

Proper Supply Should Receive Attention.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

All animals require plenty of good, pure water. This is especially true of the milking cow, as water constitutes more than three-fourths of the total volume of milk. The water supply, therefore, demands the dairyman's most careful attention. Stale or impure water is distasteful to the cow, and she will not drink enough for maximum milk production. Such water may also carry disease germs which might make the milk unsafe for human consumption or be dangerous to the cow herself.

During the winter, says the United States Department of Agriculture, when cows are stabled the greater part of the time, they should be watered two or three times a day unless arrangements have been made to keep water before them at all times. The water should, if possible be 15 degrees to 20 degrees above the freezing point, and should be supplied at practically the same temperature every day. When water well above freezing temperature is stored in tanks and piped directly to the cow, there is probably little occasion for facilities to warm it. When it stands in a tank in which ice often forms, it is usually well to warm it slightly. This can be done by a tank heater, by live steam, or by hot water from a boiler. If a boiler is used for running a separator or for heating water to wash and sterilize utensils, steam from it can readily and cheaply be used to warm the water.

Selecting Evergreens for Farm Windbreaks

"Farmers are often puzzled to know what variety of evergreen will be most suitable as a windbreak," says K. J. Braden, representative of the office of blister-rust control, United States Department of Agriculture university farm. "The nursery catalogues list many kinds which are suitable, but not all of which will do well on every soil. Clay or clay loam soil will readily support spruce or white pine, which are good on account of retaining their lower branches in spite of shading. White pine will grow faster than spruce. The variety known as Black Hills spruce is botanically the same as white spruce.

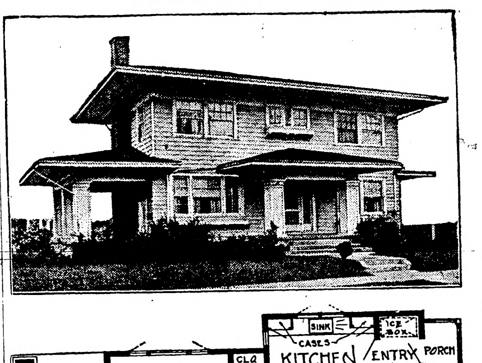
"On sandy loam or sand soil it is better not to attempt to grow spruce. White pine may do well, but Scotch pine will probably be better. On a light soil Scotch pine will grow faster than any other evergreen, and has a dense and heavy foliage when young. Jack pine, sometimes called Bank's pine, is of scanty growth and comparatively valueless. Norway pine is good, but rather expensive, on account of the high cost of collecting its seed. Evergreens die when their rootlets are exposed to the sun for even a few moments. They thrive only when planted in cultivated soil, since grass robs them of moisture."

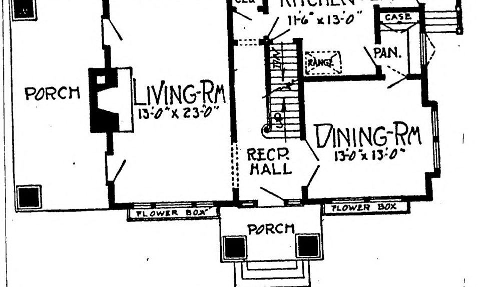
Allow Plenty of Room for Convenient Cellar

A convenient cellar for average farm conditions is one of four cars' capacity. A cellar 20 feet wide, 32 feet long and walls 8 feet high will provide sufficient room for the storage of four cars of produce with a four foot alleyway through the middle in which to work.

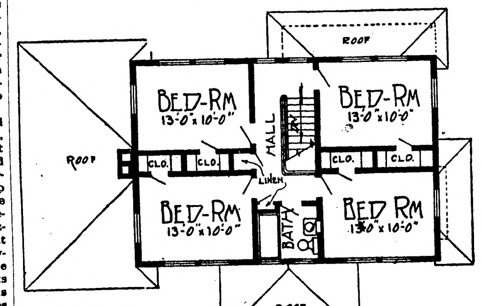
A cellar of ten cars' capacity or more should be provided with a driveway lengthwise through the middle having a double door at each end. Such a driveway is of great convenience in hauling in and out of the cellar and may be used at various times as a space for grading, sorting and packing. The plan of a large cellar should allow a drive 8 feet wide with spaces 12 feet wide on each side for storage bins. The maximum width for convenience is about 32 feet. The length will vary according to the desired capacity.—Extension Service, Colorado Agricultural College.

Western Colonial Two-Story Residence Is an Ideal Home





First Floor Plan.



Second Floor Plan.

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1827 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

As the colonial settlers emigrated westward they carried with them some of the good qualities which made them excellent pioneers, and we owe this kind of residence to the ones who emigrated from New England to the west. The general characteristics of the colonial house underwent a slight change; the eaves were strengthened as a protection from the most insistent western sunlight and also from the winds and storms which swept along the prairies more often and more fiercely than they even did along the New England hills and valleys.

So now we have a house like this, characteristic of the middle states, and to be met with as far west as Oregon. The exterior is of siding, but brick or stucco could be used with equally good results. There are two porches. The front one leads into the reception hall and the one at the side opens out from the living room through long French doors.

The living room occupies almost one whole lower half of the house, with a fireplace so placed as to add to the general attractiveness of the room. Occupying the other half is the kitchen and the dining room. Observe that the spacing of the reception hall is amply large enough for the installation of a handsome staircase. It is very gratifying to note how of late years there has been a resurgence of the staircase as a decorative element in a home interior. It is now possible to secure very fine ones quite reasonably and fully equal in attractiveness and construction to the best of early colonial times when there were staircases whose beauty has remained as a continual inspiration since.

Upstairs are four bedrooms arranged with bathroom on a central hall. The bathroom has two fair sized windows, making it a place of light. We have often wondered why the tendency has been to make the bathroom smaller than it ought to be. There used to be an idea that a bathroom required concealment but in these days of figured glass and cheap curtains a window ought to be provided which would ventilate well and give father ample light to shave by when he hurries to get ready for work of mornings.

The generously dimensioned porches suggest that one might use these, glassed in, for extra rooms. In winter they could be made comfortable by proper provision for heating and in summer the use of made-to-order screens would make them the most preferred rooms of the house.

A dwelling like this gains much by simple landscaping to make the most of its natural advantages. Here the lawn was raised just a bit above the sidewalk level, yet it bases the house, one might say, and sets it off to better advantage.

If finished in wooden siding this house will look well in other colors than white. Yellow body with white trim would be well, so would light green with white trim, or gray with white trim. If finished in stucco, gray or white or cream color would be ideal. It would make a fine brick house, using cream or red brick and having the window and cornice trim white for contrast.

Plan Using Sun's Rays to Cut Down on Fuel

The orientation of the home for developing and utilizing the heat from the sun's rays is being given considerable thought by the advisory council for scientific research of the Canadian government. A comprehensive series of experiments are being carried out which show a most remarkable possibility for the saving of fuel through proper insulation of the walls and ceiling.

Sun boxes built to correspond with sunrooms and thoroughly insulated on all sides, excepting that portion exposed to the sun's rays, are fitted with thermometers and a close check kept on the interior and exterior temperatures at different hours of the day. Some of the results are published:

Time	Air	Interior
9.45 a. m.	16	56
10.57 a. m.	20	88
12.52 p. m.	24	114
3.22 p. m.	24	94

A. Floyd Markin, 4331 Warwick avenue, Chicago, is now making an experiment along these lines on a practical scale. A sunroom has been constructed on the southern end of his home, the south and east exposures being inclosed in glass. The balance of the room is insulated by the use of a gypsum product, insulex, which is poured into the space between the studding, four inches under the floor and three inches between the ceiling joists. Mr. Markin says that the room is as warm as though heated by a stove or radiator during the sun hours. He is now arranging to place shutters over the windows in an attempt to retain the heat overnight.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale

Default having been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage containing a Power of Sale, by reason of which default said Power of Sale has become operative, and the Assignee of the Mortgagee hereinafter named is authorized to declare the whole sum due, and she hereby does declare said sum due, which mortgage was executed by Reier Reierson and Gjorgine Reierson, his wife, Mortgagors to Deposit Bank of Winona, Winona, Minnesota, a corporation under the laws of the State of Minnesota, Mortgagee dated February 19th, 1919, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County, Minnesota on the 20th day of February 1919 at 8 o'clock A. M., in book 92 of Mortgages, on page 83,

Which said mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said Deposit Bank of Winona, Winona, Minnesota, Mortgagee, to Ruth Lyons Rau, by written assignment dated March 12th 1919 and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County, Minnesota on the 31st day of January 1924 at 11 o'clock A. M., in Book 110 of Mortgages, on page 236,

And whereas, the said Ruth Lyons Rau, the assignee and holder of said mortgage, has elected and does hereby elect to declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice, under the terms and conditions of said mortgage and the Power of Sale therein contained, and whereas, there is actually due and claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of Twenty-five Hundred [$2500.00] Dollars, with accumulated interest from the 19th day of February 1922 at the rate of six per cent per annum, and whereas, the said Power of Sale has become operative and no action or proceedings having been instituted at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof,

NOW, THEREFORE, Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the Power of Sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and covered by said mortgage, viz:

Lots Four [4] and Five [5] and the South Half of the Southeast Quarter [S1-2SE1-4] of Section Twenty [20] in Township One Hundred Fifty-six [156] North, of Range Forty-one [41] West of the Fifth Principal Meridian, containing 167.19 acres, more or less, according to the United States government survey thereof, in Marshall County and State of Minnesota.

Which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Marshall County at the Front door of the County Court House, in the City of Warren, in said County and State on the 25th day of March 1924 at 10:30 o'clock A. M. of that day at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash, to pay the amount then due on said mortgage and interest and all delinquent taxes, together with the costs and disbursements of such sale and Seventy-five Dollars attorneys fees stipulated in said mortgage in case of foreclosure.

Dated February 5, 1924

Free Moving Pictures, Music Free

Saturday Feb. 23 The Red River Valley 20th Anniversary Pageant film will be shown at the Holt consolidated school under the auspices of the Holt Commercial Club. The picture shows the progress made since the early pioneer days. This is an opportunity the people in and around Holt should take advantage of. The pageant was written and directed by Supt. Selvig of Agri. School at Crookston, given the first time at R. R. Valley Dairymen's convention last November. A large number of our people saw the pageant and we hope they will pass the news along.

As a large crowd is expected, the picture will be shown twice that night. First show at 7:15, which the town people are requested to attend, as farmers and their families must be admitted first at 2nd show.

Be there when the gong sounds, everything is free, so dont disappoint us.

Produce Superior Lambs for Market

Breeding, Feeding, Castration and Docking Among Important Factors.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Producing desirable lambs for the market is dependable to a large extent on the three following principles of management, namely, good breeding, proper feeding, and castration and docking of the lambs. Of these three factors, the latter is probably more abused than any of the others, especially when it is considered that docking and castrating are easily done and add much to the desirability and value of the lamb carcass. The most desirable, and thus the most profitable, lamb carcass cannot be produced from lambs which have not been docked and castrated, says the United States Department of Agriculture.

Hinge Real Profits.

The farmer does not market his bull calves as bulls, nor his boar pigs as boars, says the department. Why, therefore, should he market his male lambs as ram lambs rather than as wethers? The correction of this neglect by castrating and docking the lambs is vital, and upon a more general observance of the practice in the farm flocks hinge the real profits and more general success. It is conservatively estimated that 80 per cent of the native lambs—those marketed from farm flocks—which reach the markets come undocked and uncastrated, and that the percentage of ram lambs among the offering during the last year has been as large as ever before.

Docked Lambs Look Better and Sell at Higher Prices.

Universal in Range Flocks.

On the other hand, the custom of docking all lambs and castrating the males is almost universal in the range flocks, and to this practice in a large measure may be attributed the fact that lambs produced on our western ranges outsell native or farm-raised lambs at the market on the average of from $1 to $1.50 per 100 pounds. These operations have been found profitable, and that is the big reason that they have become so commonly practiced on the western range. They are likewise applicable to the farm flock and just as necessary for the production of the best lambs and consequently the most profit.

Take Drastic Measures for Controlling Crows

Drastic measures for the control of crows include the use of strychnine in corn, in hens' eggs or in meat, trapping by means of specially designed steel traps, the destruction of nests, and shooting at winter roosts. Beef heads or fresh carcasses of animals may be treated with strychnine and placed in trees or places frequented by the crows with good results. Great care must be exercised in the use of poison corn to prevent the poisoning of domestic animals.

Three Great Things in Keeping Farm Accounts

Three things should be kept in mind in keeping farm accounts. First, enter every expense or receipt item. Second, enter each item in its proper place—expenses on the left hand pages and receipts on the right hand pages. Third, make the entry clear and complete so that you can tell exactly what it is when you refer to it later and have forgotten the details and possibly the entire transaction.

Soy Bean Rotation Will Increase Soil Fertility

A rotation that is being used to a considerable extent, is soy beans, wheat, clover and corn, the corn being used either one or two years. This has the advantage that the wheat can be sown in the soy bean stubble. The rotation also increases the soil fertility and gives a more economical distribution of labor.

Use Carbon Bisulphide to Kill Bean Weevils

Carbon bisulphide is the correct remedy for bean weevil. After the treatment is given the beans should be aired for some time and after that there should be no harm in eating the sound ones. An easy way to pick out the sound ones is throw all of them in water. The ones containing the weevils will rise to the top and float.

Farmer Organizations Doing Large Business

More Than $2,000,000,000 Worth Done During 1923.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

More than two billion dollars of business was done by farmer business organizations in 1923, according to estimates made by the United States Department of Agriculture. The estimates are based upon reports from 6,639 organizations which did a total business of $1,200,000,000. Reports have been received from 8,313 associations and additional reports are yet to come in from approximately 2,000 organizations.

Of the 8,313 organizations reporting, approximately 90 per cent were primarily engaged in selling farm products, and about 10 per cent in the collective purchasing of farm supplies. Grain marketing organizations comprised more than 30 per cent of the associations; dairy products 22 per cent; live stock 14 per cent, and fruits and vegetables 11 per cent.

Two thousand six hundred grain organizations did a total business estimated at $490,000,000; 1,841 dairy products organizations a total business of $300,000,000; 1,182 live stock shipping associations a business of $220,000,000, and 956 fruit and vegetable associations a total business of $280,000,000. Seventy-eight cotton cooperatives did $100,000,000, and 14 tobacco organizations $132,000,000.

Protein Usually Lacking in Ration for Poultry

The most popular ration being fed by the farmers who are feeding a balanced ration is known as the Purdue standard laying ration. The scratch feed consists of ten pounds of corn, ten pounds of wheat and five pounds of oats. The mash is a mixture of five pounds of bran, five pounds of shorts and three pounds of high grade tankage. Plenty of grit, oyster shells, succulent feeds and water are kept before the hens at all times. The unbalanced rations which are being fed to some of the flocks consist of corn and wheat; corn, wheat and bran; wheat and bran; wheat; and corn. The principal thing lacking in the unbalanced rations is an animal protein. The hen manufactures eggs from the feed that is given to her. The number of eggs she will lay depends upon the kind and amount of feed she receives. She cannot maintain her body and manufacture a large number of eggs from feeds which do not contain the proper kind and amount of nutrients.

Eggs for Hatching Must Be From Healthy Stock

Good eggs are the foundation of good hatches. The best incubator in the world can't hatch bad eggs. Make sure the eggs you set come from healthy stock kept under sanitary conditions; then select only those of normal size and shape, free from imperfections of shell.

Eggs for hatching should be as fresh as possible—not over ten days or two weeks old—and they should be gathered three times a day in cold weather to prevent chilling—then kept in a room of steady temperature at fifty to sixty degrees.

When an egg tests fertile at the end of the first week of incubation, it doesn't necessarily mean a chick. Beginners often blame the incubator when the real fault may be that the eggs are too old. Or they may have been subjected to rough handling or kept in too cold or too warm a temperature. In such cases the germ will start, but hasn't the strength to complete the process.

Vitamin "A" Essential to Swine Development

Vitamin "A" which is found in yellow corn, alfalfa hay, cod liver oil, butterfat and green feeds, is essential to the proper development of swine, according to results obtained from investigations conducted at the Kansas State Agricultural college.

Valuable breeding animals may often be saved after breaking down by the prompt addition of cod liver oil to their feed. From a production standpoint, the practice followed by many successful swine growers of adding alfalfa hay to the swine ration during the winter is basically sound and one that may well be followed more generally, results of the test indicate.

Japanese Clover Adapted to Poor Land Pasturage

Scattered abroad in many sections of the country is found a small clover known as Japanese or little Japs clover. This clover is excellent in many respects and is almost unexcelled for pasturage on poor land, especially hilly land due to the fact that it is a great legume bearing many nitrogen nodules upon its roots. It grows from about 4 to 10 inches in height depending upon the soil. This clover is relished by practically all farm animals.

Improvement Association Against Imported Seeds

The International Crop Improvement association, which is composed of 17 state crop improvement associations, went on record at its fifth annual meeting held in Chicago as being in favor of national legislation against imported alfalfa and clover seeds.

The DAIRY

RAW LINSEED OIL IS BEST TO KILL LICE

The little red lice or biting lice of cattle are common to young and mature animals alike. They do not suck the blood of the host but feed upon loose scales of the skin and portions of the hair. Their multiplication is favored more by the dry, scaly skin of the cow than by any other condition. They are smaller than either of the other kinds and are red in color, but can be seen with the naked eye.

The eggs of the red louse hatch in five to seven days and it takes about fourteen days for the young lice to mature and begin laying eggs. The red lice are more active and move about from place to place on the host.

None of the lice can live any length of time away from the host. But their eggs are carried by means of loose hairs from animal to animal. This is the most probable manner of spreading infestation and the hardest to control. It is practically impossible to disinfect all objects that are capable of transmitting the loose hairs. Especially is this true where the cattle have the run of pasture and yard. Whitewash can be used effectively around buildings.

Effective control measures must be directed against the lice during the period after they are hatched from the eggs and before they mature and start the egg-laying process. Any substance that will destroy the eggs will be injurious to the skin of the animal. Any substance that is poisonous to the cow should not be used.

The most lasting control depends upon killing the lice and putting the hide of the animal in the condition that will be unfavorable for the growth and development of the lice. For this purpose raw linseed oil has given most satisfactory results in the experiments made at the Connecticut experiment station. Linseed oil has been used for years by many dairymen, but its use was not general.

The raw oil is not poisonous. Only a small amount is required for each cow, one pint being sufficient to treat four or five cows. It is not injurious to the hide of the animal but will kill the lice.

The raw linseed oil may be supplied with a stiff brush when the cows are being cleaned or groomed. Treatment should begin in the fall and early winter before the lice become numerous. The second application of the oil should be made in 12 to 13 days. All of the three kinds of lice will have had time to hatch from the eggs during the interval but will not have had time to mature and in turn lay eggs. The second treatment should be followed by an application of the oil every 30 days during the winter and early spring in order to keep the lice under control. It is practically impossible to permanently rid an entire herd of cattle of lice.

The boiled linseed oil is not recommended because there is more danger of its blistering the hide. When using the raw oil, precaution should be used not to rub the hide too strenuously when applying as burns may result. Strong sunlight will sometimes cause burns also.

Improper Feeding Cause of Trouble With Calves

Scours in calves may be due to overfeeding, irregular feeding, feeding cold milk, sour milk, dirty milk, use of unsanitary feeding pails, etc., says J. P. LaMaster, chief of the dairy division at Clemson college, who makes the following suggestions for treatment:

1. For ordinary scours, as soon as symptoms are observed, omit one feeding and reduce next feeding to half, and then gradually bring up to original quantity.

In case the disease becomes obstinate, give from 1½ to 2 tablespoonfuls of castor oil, repeating the dose on the second day if necessary.

Scours may be due to the mother's milk being too rich in butterfat.

2. To prevent white scours, tie the navel string close to the body and paint with iodine as soon as the calf is born. There is no cure for white scours.

Calf Will Learn to Eat Hay Very Early in Life

A calf will learn to eat hay very early in life, and it should be clean and leafy and replaced often with fresh hay. In ten days or two weeks it may be taught to eat grain. It is often easily started by placing some oats or ground barley on its wet nose and will soon be eating from a box or dish. It is a great mistake to allow grain or feed to stand before it, as the feed soon becomes soiled and sour.

Temple of Diana One of World's Seven Wonders

One of the seven wonders of the ancient world was the Temple of Diana at Ephesus, built in the Fourth century before Christ, and burned by the was doomed to early destruction at the hands of a half-crazed Greek named Herostratus. In 356 B. C., on the night when Alexander the Great was born, he burned the temple to the ground. When he was arraigned for his crime he said he had done it to make an immortal name for himself, and he had chosen the night Alexander was born because Diana was the goddess of childbirth, and he believed that she would be in Macedonia to bless the little prince's arrival.

A new temple, started in 350, became a storehouse for great gifts. In 262 A. D. invading Goths destroyed the city and burned the temple. Only a few of the columns escaped, and they were used in the mosque of St. Sophia at Constantinople.—Detroit News.

Dogs Remember Tones

Can dogs pick up a foreign language and still remember that of the land of their birth? Experts who have been consulted agree that they can. The experts emphasize the fact, however, that it is primarily the inflection of the voice that the animal learns to understand when sent to a foreign country. It pays much closer and quicker attention to the tone than to the sound of the words, says the Detroit News.

Dogs, like horses, remember the sound of the language of their masters and even after many years in a foreign land can remember the meaning of sentences.

A clear proof of some dogs' cleverness is to be found in the way they pick up several native tongues and dialects when they leave their British masters in India and Africa, in places where several languages are spoken.

Airplanes in Colombia Haul Mail and Freight

A Colombian aerial transportation company generally known as "Scadta" is planning additional transport facilities for the Giradot-Baranquilla portion of its system, Trade Commissioner Carlton Jackson reports to the Department of Commerce. New planes, double the carrying capacity of those now in service, will be employed and the rates for passengers, mail and express will be reduced.

The trip up the Magdalena river by airplane has been more in favor than that to the coast, chiefly because the time taken by boats ascending the river has been so much longer than the return trip. For this reason, according to Mr. Jackson, the airplane fare for the up trip has been $175, compared with $150 for the trip to the coast. It is now proposed to reduce these fares to $70 and $50, respectively. The weight limit per passage will be readjusted to permit a small trunk being carried at a moderate cost. It is generally believed that the company has done well during its three years of operation, and if its plans mature it will soon establish lines to all important points in the country.

Source of Sun's Heat

The source of the vast amount of heat which the sun gives off cannot be the result of combustion, for if such were the case it would have been consumed long ago. The Helmholtz theory is generally accepted. It assumes that the sun's bulk is gradually contracting, and that the energy thus produced is turned into heat. It has been calculated that a contraction of 150 feet a year would be enough to account for the heat developed.

An Amazing Fact
To many people it may seem incredible that a habit so common as coffee-drinking can be harmful. Yet if your doctor were to enumerate the common causes of indigestion, headache, and run-down condition, he would be likely to mention coffee.
If you are troubled with insomnia, nervousness, or are inclined to be high-strung, try Postum in place of coffee for thirty days, and note the difference in the way you feel, and how much better you sleep.
Postum is a pure cereal beverage, absolutely free from caffeine, or any harmful drug.
Postum for Health
"There's a Reason"
Your grocer sells Postum in two forms: Instant Postum [in tins] prepared instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal [in packages] for those who prefer the flavor brought out by boiling fully 20 minutes. The cost of either form is about one-half cent a cup.

NERVOUS & HALF-SICK WOMEN
Relieved by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound
These Three Letters Prove It
Lowell, Mass.—"I am sending you a few lines to let you know what good your medicine has done for me. I want you to let every one know that it has helped me in nervous troubles. I have four children and you know there is a lot to do where children are. They would come in from school and they would start telling me about their little troubles but I could not stand it. I had to send them away. I could not even walk on the street alone I was so nervous. I found one of your books and read it and then I saw in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I got it and had taken one bottle when I saw a change in myself. I was surprised. The children can talk all they want to now and it does not bother me. I am still taking the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. JOSEPH LEMERE, 84 South Street, Lowell, Mass.
Felt Like A New Woman
Springfield, Missouri.—"For four or five months I was run-down, nervous, my back ached and I did not feel like doing a thing. Sometimes my legs ached and felt like they would break and I had a hurting in my sides. I had been reading in the newspapers the letters of other women who had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and the advertising of it appealed to me so I bought some and saw results in almost no time. I had hardly been able to do my own work and after taking the Vegetable Compound I felt like a new woman. I recommend it to my friends who have troubles like I did, and hope they will find the same results."—Mrs. M. CARPENTER, 607 W. Chase Street, Springfield, Missouri.
40 Years Old, Feels Like 20
Hagerstown, Md.—"I was very bad off with backache, a bearing-down feeling in my body and a pain in my left side. I could not be on my feet at times and once I was so bad I walked bent over to one side for three weeks. My sister read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and got me a bottle. I got so much relief that I took more until I was well. I am 40 years old and feel like 20. I am sure this medicine will help all women."—Mrs. MARY E. SANDY, 436 W. Franklin Street, Hagerstown, Md.
Over 100,000 women have so far replied to our question, "Have you received benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?"
98 per cent of these replies are "Yes."
That means that 98 out of every 100 women who take this medicine for the ailments for which it is recommended are benefited by it.
All druggists are having increased sales of this medicine.

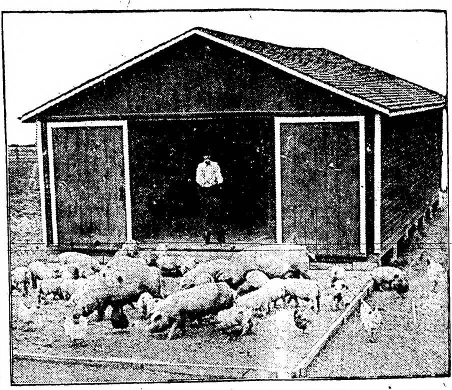
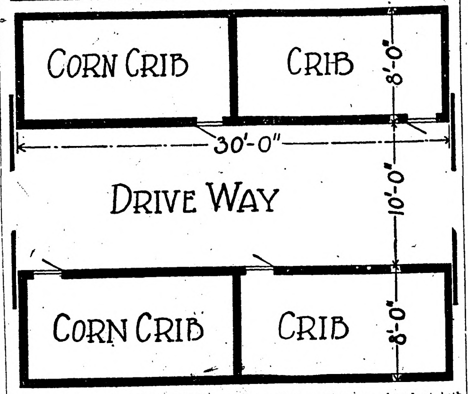
Combination Corn Crib and Feeding Floor Is Efficient





By WILLIAM A. RADFORD

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building work on the farm, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1827 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

Hogs and corn are a logical farm combination. Generally the prices of the two farm products are such that a farmer gets a higher price for his corn by marketing it "on the hoof." When this is done storage space for the grain is necessary so that the corn will be available for daily feeding.

To handle this work efficiently there has been devised and put into general use on many corn-belt farms a combination corn crib and feeding floor, such as is shown in the accompanying illustration. The corn is stored in the building, usually located in the hog lot or immediately adjoining it. At feeding time the ear corn is taken from the cribs and thrown onto the concrete feeding floor. The hogs get every kernel of the grain, as the floor is solid and none of the grain is lost in the mud. If the hogs overlook a few kernels the farm poultry flock is at hand to clean up.

The corn crib is 28 by 30 feet. The foundation is of the pillar type, concrete blocks being set every five feet and the joists laid on them. The floor is of plank, but a better method would be to have the foundation a concrete wall and the floor of concrete, making it tight against rats, which do great damage to stored corn. The framing is of lumber with regulation crib siding around the cribs and matched siding in the gables.

Through the center of the building is a 10 foot driveway, closed at both ends by double sliding doors. There are four cribs, two on each side of the drive. The driveway makes it a comparatively easy task to unload the corn into the cribs from the wagon.

This is a simple and inexpensive type of crib. Its construction is such that almost any man who has had experience in carpenter work can build it. The lumber used is of standard size that is carried in stock at all lumber yards. The crib siding leaves opening between each piece of lumber for air and ventilation. At the same time the rain and snow is kept out.

The concrete feeding floor is as wide as the building and slightly less in depth. This also is easily constructed. Two by four-inch timbers are set on the ground and held in place by stakes. Over a foundation of loose crushed rock or small stones a mixture of cement and sand mixed with water to a consistency so that it will flow easily is spread. One part of cement to two or three parts of sand is about the right mixture. The foundation of broken stone saves considerable material, but as the cement and sand mixture flows into the crevices, it makes a strong cement slab. The surface is troweled smooth with a straight-edge board and finished if a more workmanlike job is wanted with a float or hand trowel.

Feeding ear corn on a cement feeding floor is economy. The hogs clean up practically all the grain, the floor is easily cleaned of cobs and none of the food is lost in the soft earth.

This combination corn crib and feeding floor gives the farm an economical corn storage house and a clean feeding floor. When it is set in the hog lot or nearby, there is a considerable saving of labor in feeding the animals. These are two advantages that will appeal to the thrifty grower of corn and hogs.

Garden Near Kitchen Is Saver of Many Steps

"Much has been said and much has been written regarding the saving of steps in the kitchen, but very little has been done about the saving of steps in the garden," says J. H. Burdett of National Garden bureau. "This is a point you should remember in planning for your vegetable garden.

"For the sake of the family cook, who will have to gather the early vegetables, such as radishes, onions, lettuce and early spinach, in the rain or heat, a good deal of the time, such a bed of vegetables should be as close to the kitchen door as is consistent with the appearance and layout of the garden. Following the same line of reasoning, the vegetables most commonly used, as well as the early spring vegetables, should be planted near the kitchen door.

"Asparagus and rhubarb, etc., being permanent, should be placed where they will least interfere with the other plants and general efficiency. They cannot be planted with other vegetables, and for this reason should be at one side of the garden, and most distant from the house. The tall vegetables, such as corn, pole beans and tomatoes will make it difficult to gather the other vegetables if placed in the middle of the garden. They should be placed at the side or in the back, and will be valuable in forming a background."

Convenient Lighting Arrangement for Cellar

In homes where the man of the house has a liking for tinkering with tools, there is usually quite a bit of excess current used because he will leave the main cellar light burning while he is working at his bench. It also is true that his bench light is not always located ideally for all types of bench work, it having been found that a portable light is particularly desirable for the bench.

That both of these conditions may be met satisfactorily, some clever brain devised the method of stretching tightly several lengths of wire running the entire length of the cellar. A turnbuckle should be provided for each wire, so it can be kept taut. A lamp and long cord can now be suspended on the wire and moved about the cellar at will to any place where a light is desired.

Stucco in Winter

Winter is a good time to rehabilitate old homes by the application of a coat of stucco. Stucco, contrary to the general belief, is unaffected by cold, and better jobs are done in the winter while there is no shortage of labor.

Many old frame dwellings have been made to look like new by giving them a finish of stucco which can be done at a very little cost comparative with the results obtained.

Club Comedy

An Englishman tells a story about a caddie who tried in vain to get the job of carrying the clubs of a pompous amateur player. When it was the latter's turn to play, he placed the ball carefully, threw himself into position, swung his club like a forge-hammer and—missed.

The rejected caddie laughed joyfully. Once more the novice drove and missed and the caddie's laughter became uproarious. At the third try the ball was dislodged from its perch and spun over the turf for about six feet. "Hi, man!" yelled the caddie derisively, "I'll carry your clubs for the fun o' the thing."

Goldbeaters' Skin

Gold was first hammered between parchment leaves until the mold, termed goldbeaters' skin, was invented. This skin is made from a membrane of the ox and the secret of its making is kept by a family in London which has made the membrane for three generations. Three months are consumed in the treatment of the membrane and it may be beaten continuously for months with a 16-pound hammer without material injury.

Origin of Victoria Cross

The Victoria Cross, given for conspicuous bravery, was instituted in 1856 on the close of the Crimean war, and was given to citizens who had borne arms against the Indian mutineers. In 1911 the decoration was extended to the Indian army. A bar may be awarded for an additional act of bravery. With the decoration is a pension for noncommissioned officers and men of ten pounds a year, with an addition of five pounds for each bar.

Laxatives do not overcome constipation
More Important is Internal Cleanliness
LAXATIVES and cathartics provide temporary relief only, at the expense of permanent injury. In time, says an eminent physician, an almost incalculable amount of harm is done by the use of pills, salts, mineral waters, castor oil and the like.
Some laxatives, according to an intestinal specialist, contain poisons which affect the stomach and intestines, resulting in grave disorders. Certain laxatives are a direct cause of piles.
Physicians Advise Lubrication for Internal Cleanliness
Medical science, through knowledge of the intestinal tract gained by X-ray observation, has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus Nujol brings internal cleanliness.
Not a Medicine
Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water it is harmless.
Get rid of constipation and avoid disease by adopting the habit of internal cleanliness. Take Nujol as regularly as you brush your teeth or wash your face. For sale by all druggists.

Strain on Human Body.

In hot weather the human body makes an extraordinary effort to adapt itself to conditions and meet the strain placed upon it. Violent overheating or great physical effort for a few hours causes the body to throw off some four liters of fluid. In other words, the perspiration secreted in a brief while is greater than the entire blood supply of the body.

Breadfruit.

The breadfruit, with the coconut and banana, furnishes the chief food of the natives of the Pacific islands. That is why we call it "breadfruit," because, for them, it takes the place of bread. Apart from its fruit, the tree itself is a very useful one, for, when beaten out, the inner bark forms a fine white cloth called tapa cloth.

Bravoletta.

A new material, bravoletta, is used by a German inventor in the manufacture of safety razors. It looks like ivory, tortoise shell or marble, depending on the manner in which it is manufactured. The advantage of this material lies in the fact that the apparatus cannot rust. There is no need to dry the razor after use, it is sufficient to rinse it. Another advantage is that it is cheaper than razors made of metal.

Big Happenings of the Week Condensed for the Benefit of Busy Readers.

Washington

Washington—Virtually certain that congress will further restrict legislation before June 30.

Washington—Advance guard of navy's aeronautic polar expedition leaves for Alaska to prepare way for Shenandoah's trip.

Washington—Favorable report on measures authorizing the Kansas City Federal Reserve bank to build branch houses at Denver and Omaha were made by the senate banking committee.

Washington — Republican leaders tell president legislative program will be in following order: Tax reduction, immigration, Muscle Shoals and soldier bonus, with appropriation measures sandwiched in.

Washington — Woodrow Wilson's widow would be granted free use of the mails under a resolution introduced by Chairman W. W. Greist, (rep. Pa.) of the house postoffice committee. This privilege was recently extended to Mrs. Florence Kling Harding.

Domestic

Kansas City—Sale of the Kansas City, Mexico and Oriente railway system to satisfy a government loan of $2,500,000 was ordered in federal court here by Judge John C. Pollock.

St. Catherines, Ont.—News was received here that the contract for Section 8 of the Welland canal has been awarded by the government to Quinlan, Robertson & Co. of Montreal for $10,500,000.

Youngstown, Ohio—Warrants were issued charging Nicky Arnstein and Charles Drucker, central figures, in the $5,000,000 bond investigation in New York four years ago, with obtaining $48,300 under false pretenses.

Chicago—Vicepresident A. C. Johnson of the Chicago & Northwestern railway was elected chairman of the western traffic executive committee, succeeding C. E. Spens, vicepresident of the Burlington road, resigned.

New York — The United States district attorney's staff went before Federal Judge Knox with 290 petitions for injunctions which would padlock New York saloons, cabarets and restaurants for persistent violation of the Volstead act.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Inauguration of an employees saving and stock ownership plan by the Bethlehem Steel corporation was announced by Eugene G. Grace, president. The corporation, he said, would assist its employees to purchase its 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock on easy payments.

Cincinnati — Luther Halsey Marsh, 100 years and 8 days old Civil war veteran and reputed godson of Luther Halsey, aide de camp to General Washington in the Revolution, is dead here. He had been a resident of Cincinnati 94 years, his parents being pioneers from New Jersey.

New York—Woodrow Wilson carried $20,000 worth of life insurance. One was issued when he was 37 and a professor at Princeton. The other was taken out in 1899, six years later, his secondary occupation being given then as lawyer and lecturer. Mr. Wilson once said a man who did not provide for his children and dependents has not "opened his eyes to any adequate conception of human life."

New York—The St. Lawrence-lakes waterway project has been favored by formal resolutions and appropriations from 18 states, representing 40 per cent of the population and 77 per cent of the wheat producers of the nation, while opposition is confined to New York, Baltimore, Philadelphia and Montreal, James P. Goodrich, former governor of Indiana, stated before the New York State Chamber of Commerce.

Oklahoma City—The mills of the gods that grind slowly, but exceedingly fine, after 25 years have brought to Colonel Reginald P. McNally, U. S. A., of this city, recognition of an act of bravery in the Philippine islands. On April 25, 1900, Colonel McNally, then a second lieutenant, led a squad of nine men against 200 Filipino insurrectionists on the Bodoc river in Luzon, routing the entire number and bringing his men through uninjured. He has been cited for gallantry in action.

Chicago—For the second time in as many days the police, acting under orders of Chief Morgan Collins, stopped a theatre from showing the moving picture, "The Birth of a Nation." The house had been sold out when the police arrived, took the operators from their booths and turned off the electric switches. The complaint alleged the showing of the picture was in violation of the statute forbidding performances tending to foment class or race hatred.

Dallas — Calvin Coolidge was indorsed for the republican presidential nomination and R. B. Creager, national committeeman, from Texas for vice president by the republican state executive committee.

San Francisco — The Pacific Mail steamer President Wilson, one of the two great ocean liners to bear the name of the departed war leader, came into port from far eastern points with its sign at half mast. The President Wilson bore the body of Mrs. Rupert Hughes, wife of the author, who took her life in the far east a few months ---

Chicago—Louis L. Radt, a diamond salesman for a New York firm, reported to the police that he had been kidnaped by three bandits who robbed him of diamonds valued at $50,000 and threw him out of their automobile.

Sports

St. Paul—Nick Allen, catcher of the St. Paul baseball team, was appointed manager of the Saints for 1924 by John W. Norton, owner. Allen was chosen over a long list of other aspirants for the position. He was picked as the best choice of all those available, as possessing the best qualities of leadership, Norton said, in making the announcement.

New York—The propsed Firpo-Wills boxing match will be held July 19, either in Pennsylvania or Connecticut, it was announced by a spokesman for the syndicate promoting the match. A stadium seating 125,000 will be built. It was understood that Morrisville, Pa., and Hartford, Conn., were under consideration with selection favoring the former which is opposite Trenton, N. J., on the Delaware river, 55 miles from New York, and 35 from Philadelphia, reached by two railroads and several excellent highways. The spokesman said the syndicate would post a guarantee within a few days with a local bank and that Firpo would deposit a forfeit of $25,000 in a Buenos Aires bank. Luis Firpo, announced that a New York syndicate offered him $1,110,000 for his exclusisve services in the United States for one year. This time would commence with his return to America next month but the contract would leave him free to arrange for another fight with Jack Dempsey, through other promoters. The offer of the syndicate, according to Firpo, embraces a bout with Harry Wills, Negro heavyweight, an exhibition tour and moving picture rights.

Foreign

Paris — Communists demonstrated against additional taxes and bread at 1 franc 25 centimes the loaf, but were dispersed by police.

Copenhagen—The Danish king announced that Prince Viggo and his future wife, when they are married, will bear the titles of Count and Countess of Rosenberg.

Paris—Countess Salm, formerly Millicent Rogers, who sailed from New York two weeks ago without the forgiveness of her parents and no friends of her debutante days to see her off, declared that, notwithstanding the many newspaper untruths, she and her husband were "perfectly, perfectly happy."

Peking—International wireless tests in which Chinese and American amateurs had hoped to pick up American radio signals were spoiled by unprecedented statis and interferenec by high powered Asiatic stations. Only a portion of a message from one American station, 61, was received, and this came through a snowstorm. The remainder was not clear.

Moscow—Italy's interests in recognizing Russia are chiefly economical, Karl Radek declared in an editorial in the Pravda. Radek said Italy wants to sell manufactured goods to Russia, receiving in return Russian raw materials, which Italy greatly needs. Italy cannot effect this exchange with the United States because of the American high protective tariff, he added.

Delhi—The demand of the Swarajists, or home rulers, for a round table conference to discuss measures for the establishment of a responsible government will come up for discussion. It is intended to give the government a month in which to agree to the party's proposal and if the government refuses to acquiesce it is the Swarajists' intention to adopt a policy of refusal to sell supplies to the government and general obstruction.

Melbourne, Australia — The American barks, Narwhal, recently reported lost with approximately 25 "gentlemen adventurers," is believed to be safe with its crew at some out-of-the-way port in the South seas. Word has reached here that the Narwhal cleared from Nouman, New Caledonia and it is believed to be continuing its cruise among islands peopled by savages for the purpose of obtaining motion pictures.

Tokio—An unnaturally warm noon, the thermometer registering 65, following a heavy gale in the morning, has caused many persons here to fear a severe earthquake. There has been a continued drouth in Japan, causing many wells to dry up. As a result, many persons are suffering considerable hardship. The drouth is causing concern in Tokio, where, because of the leaks in the water system caused by the September earthquake, the consumption is double the normal.

London—An association of English speaking peoples could establish a permanent world peace, in the opinion of Sir Esme Howard, new British ambassador to Washington, expressed at a dinner by the English Speaking Union. "If the English speaking countries could move together and hold together, not for any material advantage, but for some high ideal such as the establishment of world peace their influence would well nigh be irresistible."

London — Aside from the three new peers created and Lords Parmoor, Haldane and Chelmsford, the new labor government's strength in the upper house of parliament has been increased by the adhesion of the conservative peer, Lord Bledisloe, noted agriculturist.

Christiania—It is feared here that the Amundsen exploration ship Maud, which is drifting with the ice in the Arctic ocean, is in danger of grounding on the New Siberian islands. A radio message from the vessel gave its position as latitude 75 13 N longitude 156 45 E.

Rush City—James D. Markham, grand master of Masons in Minnesota, was the honor guest at a banquet given by members of Jasper lodge No. 164, his home lodge, of which he is a charter member. About 60 Masons attended.

Winona — Two extra nurses to assist in care of health of school children have been engaged as a result of an unusual number of absences from class rooms due to illness. The step was taken as a precautionary measure, officials said, adding that no epidemic of disease exists.

Owatonna — The city council voted to receive bids Feb. 19 for the sale of $350,000 of Owatonna Public Utility company bonds. The council voted to receive bids in the face of a rate cut offer made by the Southern Minnesota Gas & Electric company, which now serves this city.

Ortonville — When 112 carloads of ice were loaded here and shipped to Butte, Mont., for use by the Milwaukee railroad company, a record was made for a day's work on Big Stone Lake. A total of 700 cars of ice already have been shipped from Ortonville this season to division points on the Milwaukee system.

Brainerd—The Minnesota Power & Light Company of Duluth, has absorbed all of the holdings of the Cuyuna Range Power company, which has two waterpower sites near Brainerd and supplies this city and all of the Cuyuna iron range towns and mines with electric power, it was announced here.

Duluth — Unless game laws are rigidly observed and conservation and propagation of wild game is practiced conscientiously, within 10 years all game in Minnesota will be held under domesticating permits, as now allowed by law, was the prediction of J. F. Gould, state game and fish commissioner, who addressed the Duluth Sportsmen's club.

Thief River Falls — Pennington county will have about 30 junior club workers in the Dairy Calf club the coming year, according to present indications. There is a limit placed on the number of free trips to the Chicago shows for dairy calf club members this year. Only the first 30 counties having an enrollment of 25 members in the dairy calf club projects are included.

Winona — The League of Women Voters has been reorganized in this city after a period of inactivity of almost two years. One hundred eighty women attended a luncheon at which reorganization was completed. The league plans to conduct, in co-operation with the State Teachers' college, an "institute of government and politics" at which speakers will discuss topics of discussion in the political education of women voters.

St. Cloud—Ten men barely escaped death, one was slightly injured, and property damage running between $75,000 and $100,000 was done when a 3,000 unit turbo generator in the plant exploded. The force of the explosion shattered the building, tearing out the windows and unroofing it. Parts of casting, some weighing several hundred pounds, were found blocks away. The turbin broke loose at the steam inlet, and the explosion followed a moment later.

Duluth—Claims approximating $4,000,000 against the United States railroad administration for damages resulting from the 1918 forest fires in northern Minnesota, are affected by a decion of the state supreme court reversing the order of District Judge H. A. Dancer in the "test" suit brought by Mr. and Mrs. Harry F. McCool. A year ago the McCools obtained a verdict of $5,000 against the railroad administration. Later Judge Dancer denied a motion for a new trial and this decision orders that the case again be brought before the court.

Willmar—Willmar's new water works system will be ready for operation within a few weks. When the new pumping plant is placed in operation all of the water pumped from the wells will be put through a large concrete reservoir and filtered before being run into the mains.

Slayton — Commercial fishermen seining in Lake Shetek near here found most of the game fish in the lake dead. It is thought that the low water and heavy ice is responsible and it is feared that most of the southern Minnesota lakes will be likewise affected.

Waseca—L. J. Sheldon, a local poultryman, is now delivering over 100 dozen eggs a week to local patrons.

Duluth—John King of Greenway high school, Coleraine, won first place in district extemporaneous contest at Hibbing, speaking on Americanization.

Waseca — Waseca's new $71,000 sewer system was put in operation for the first time last week and is working out very satisfactorily.

LeSueur—The local creamery made 41,000 pounds of buter in January this year, as against 27,000 in January a year ago. Dairying is on the rapid increase here.

Willmar—The Farmers Security State bank of Willmar may open its doors again soon, it was said, financial aid having been promised the institution.

St. Charles—Mrs. Sophia Pickert, a resident of St. Charles for more than 60 years, was 100 years old. She was born near Herkimer, N. Y., Feb. 11, 1824.

Slayton—At a mass meeting of the radio owners of this city, an organization was perfected with 30 charter members. The club will meet twice each month for the purpose of discussing radio topics.

LeSueur—The heaviest hog shipped from here in years was one included in a shipment from the Jas. Janovsky herd. The hog was just past two years old and weighed 910 pounds.

Rochester—Miss Helen Law, public health nurse, has arrived in Rochester to take up work in the field of maternal and infant hygiene as proivded by the Sheppard-Towner act of congress.

Rochester—At a meeting of nine churches here, 2,400 Bibles were dedicated. The books have been obtained through the co-operation of the Gideons and the citizens of Rochester.

Hibbing—Members of the Hibbing Lions club will raise a fund for the benefit of widows and orphans of 41 miners drowned when the Milford Mine, at Crosby, Minn., was flooded. A collection was started with a substantial sum.

Rochester—The statement of Dr. Charles H. Mayo that he would not be a candidate for the democratic nomination for the presidency did not stop his friends from trying to induce the noted surgeon to change his mind.

Rochester—To insure the transformation of the present Lake City road into a well graded and properly graveled state highway, the county commissioners of Olmsted county will dispose of $130,000 in bonds to obtain money for the work.

Willmar—Bids are now being received for the erection of the new $90,000 Lincoln school. Work on the new building will begin in the spring. The new school will relieve the congested condition of the Willmar city school.

Red Lake Falls—The Red River Power Co., thru its manager at Grand Forks, W. H. Brown, announces that an immense power plant will be constructed at this point, to replace the old plant which is now inadequate to care for the needs of the city.

Austin—Friends of Miss Mary Meighen, grade supervisor in the schools, are congratulating her on the adoption by the Minneapolis schools of a seatwork plan which she prepared for use in schools. The state normal school at Gunnison, Colo., is also using this plan.

Hibbing — Work of stripping the "north forty," the former heart of the vilage of Hibbing will be started in earnest in a few weks. Big shovels are ready to go, and the new mine will be producing as fast as it can be made ready. This will give employment to a large number of men.

Rochester—When it became known here that gasoline had jumped to 20.9 cents for low test and 23.9 cents for high test, a number of large consumers conducted a preliminary conference looking to the completion of plans for a co-operative filling station. The idea is to organize a number of truck, bus, taxi owners and others who use a large amount of gasoline and organize for the purpose of financing the filling station.

Crosby—The Cuyuna range honored its dead Sunday, when relatives and friends of the 41 miners who died in the flooded Milford mine met here for a short memorial service. At the mine, five miles from town, giant pumps continued their work of draining the mine and Foley's pond nearby, which poured tons of water and mud through into the mine workings. Workmen who knew the dead miners in life helped at the pumps.

Balaton—Mrs. Louise Bickford Shequen celebrated her 106 birthday anniversary at her home here this week. She is perhaps the oldest person in the Northwest. She was born in Canada in 1818 and come to Minnesota in 1866. Her husband lived to the ripe old age of 108 and they had been married 78 years when he died. She is the mother of five children, two of whom are living. She has sixteen grandchildren, forty great grandchildren and twenty great-great grandchildren.

Slayton—Business men of this city to the number of over thirty donned old clothes and opened the highways between this city and Avoca and Lake Wilson. Lake Wilson and Hadley business people helped. It is planned to keep the roads open the rest of the winter.

Rochester—The Kiwanis club of Rochester will furnish milk to needy children of the city, according to a resolution adopted in which the club agrees to pay for milk purchased for children by the school physician. The club also voted to pay for milk last year for undernourished children.

M'ADOO EXPLAINS OIL CONNECTION

Asserts Attack on Him Inspired By Enemies for Political Purposes

St. Louis.—William G. McAdoo's association with the Doheny oil interests renders his "availability" as a presidential candidate doubtful, according to William J. Johnson, international president of the International Association of Machinists. Mr. Johnston presided at the opening session Monday of the three day convention here of the national conference for political action.

Washington.—In an atmosphere surcharged with tension, William G. McAdoo faced the senate oil committee Monday, and explained his connection with the Doheny interests.

At the very outset he read a prepared statement charging that had he not been "prominently mentioned in connection with high offices" his name never would have been brought into the inquiry.

After leaving the cabinet and in a long cross-examination he reiterated forcibly his assertions that the attack on him had been purely political.

McAdoo emphasized that his professional relations with E. L. Doheny, recently terminated, were "in good faith and had nothing to do with the leasing of naval oil reserves.

Appearing at his own request because of testimony given by Mr. Doheny as to his employment in connection with Mexican oil matters, Mr. McAdoo declared: "I think it may fairly be presumed that if my name was not prominently mentioned in connection with high office, my private practice as a lawyer would be of no interest to this committee, or to the public."

Asserting that "the faith of the people in their own government is shaken" because of the developments in the oil industry, he declared "this question transcends political parties and partisan considerations," and that "the first duty, the imperative duty of the hour, is mercilessly to uncover and to bring to public view and scorn and punishment every one who has betrayed the public trust or who has been guilty of wrong doing in this humiliating and dangerous affair."

"It would be a crime against the public," he said, "if the dragging of innocent people into this affair should divert attention from the guilty to point the discovery of those who have betrayed the public interest."

TWO SLAIN IN PRISON RIOT

Convicts Beaten Back After Desperate Attempt to Escape.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Two prison officers were shot to death and a number of convicts were wounded more or less seriously Monday in a riot in the western penitentiary. After an hour's fight, during which riot guns, tear gas bombs, clubs, and bricks were used, the prison guards, assisted by the county detective and Pittsburgh police forces, succeeded in quelling the disturbance which started when the convicts used explosives in an effort to dynamite their way to freedom. No prisoners escaped.

Warden J. M. Egan reported that the plot was born in the minds of four or five "bad men" recently transferred to the prison here from the eastern penitentiary to be disciplined. He added that he believed the plot was engineered by a quartet of convicts known as "the four horsemen." They had help from the outside, the warden declared.

REVENUE BILL GOES TO HOUSE

Surtax Changes Follow Plans Outlined by Mellon.

Washington.—The revenue bill was formerly reported to the house Monday by the ways and means committee which has been under consideration since the opening of congress. The measure will be taken up for consideration on Thursday with about a month of debate in prospect before it will be passed.

The bill, as reported by Chairman Green, provides for complete revision of the federal taxes and a 25 per cent reduction in the 1923 personal income taxes payable this year. Three other reports were made, however, the differences centering on the income rates, with particular reference to the surtax schedule, which was reported on the lines recommended by Secretary Mellon.

Eleven Republicans submitted one of the additional reports arguing more vigorously for the 25 per cent surtax maximum than did the chairman, who has openly supported a maximum rate of 35 per cent.

Court Order to Stop Vote on Law

Bismarck, N. D.—Suit for an injunction to prevent submission of the so called "nonpartisan" election laws to voters of the state on March 18, in accordance with Governor Nestos' proclamation, will be filed this week, F. O. Hellstrom, Bismarck attorney, said Monday. The suit will be filed in the name of Roy Frazier and Stephen Terhorst, as taxpayers, he said. Frazier was in charge of securing signatures to petitions which held up operation of laws after they were passed by the 1923 legislature.

The Red Lock

A flash of red flamed through the trees and stopped almost directly above his head in the top twigs of a hickory sapling and there swelled out a wild burst of reckless melody that clothed the hickory with music as the opening buds clothed the crabapple tree with beauty.

"I thought so, ol' warcoat," the man muttered, glancing up. "You know where she is, don't y'u?"

He stepped softly toward the crabapple tree—the wild song-burst in the hickory ceasing the instant he moved—and peered in through the gnarled limbs and tangled twigs.

Snugged down among some drifted dead leaves he found it, the treasure that inspired the cardinal's song—a roughly built, deep little nest, and, shining above its edge, a dark glossy crest, some long tail feathers, a short, heavy, reddish bill and a round glittering eye, black as a dewberry.

He let the limb he had bent aside swing slowly back into place and stole away.

"Alw'ys two," ran his thought—"a pair; mates—it's nature's way. Pheasants and cardinals and folks—they're all the same—though birds and beasts alw'ys run true, while folks—sometimes—oh, well—"

He walked away toward the west, coming at length to where the uplands ended abruptly in the line of wooded bluffs that fell steeply to the deep and winding scar of Eagle hollow, and the exact point where the double trail had run plainest the day before—a fact that had doubtless brought him just there. He bent a critical look upon the loutish trail; carefully crossed it; stepped out under a clump of haw trees at the very brink of the bluff and stood keenly searching the woods in every direction.

Below him and a short distance farther down the hollow an old deserted cabin of mud-daubed logs squatted against the bluff a few yards back from the Eagle Hollow road. The place had a reputation in the Flatwoods. It was the uncanny hovel of dead Henry Spencer, a woodchopper, who, on a winter night years before, while in a drunken frenzy, had murdered his wife and infant daughter with an ax, then had wandered out half naked and frozen to death in the snow.

What had once been yard and tiny garden was now overrun with weeds so rank that storms and snow could no longer break them down. A fallen oak had but just missed the cabin, and lay so close to one corner that some wild cucumber vines of the season before had crossed to the ruined roof and still hung in brown and dead festoons stretched from the fast decaying clapboards to the fungous warted branches.

A pair of chimney swallows, true prophets of summer, darted in and out of the crumbling chimney. A yellow-hammer loped down out of the woods, lighted upon the dry and sounding comb-board and drummed a challenge to all and sundry other yellow-hammers—or was it a love call to his mate in the dead limb of a sycamore down at the creek across the road?

The sound drew the eyes of the man. At the moment one of the swallows rose above the roof. As he followed its flight, the chimneys and gables of the red-roofed cottage, nearly a mile away down the hollow, came unexpectedly within his range of vision. His brows drew together; he gripped the shotgun; turned and strode through the fringing brambles back among the trees.

Half a mile farther up the hollow, at the point where he had left off following the double trail the day before, he picked his way down the rough and stony side of the wooded bluff to the road. He was just in the act of stepping out from the fringing trees to cross it when the soft swish of a bush a short distance above caught his quick ear.

Remembering that sinister face behind the log, he threw the heavy shotgun to instant readiness and stood dead still, his eyes searching every leaf and twig along the hillside.

There came a soft footfall, the bushes swayed, parted, and a young woman stepped out into the comparatively open glade where he stood—a girl that he had never seen, flushed and breathing hard.

She saw him on the instant, and her face went white. She darted in among the bushes again, stopped, came slowly back, stood studying him. He was as closely studying her—plainly, even shabbily dressed; her faded sunbonnet [illegible]; her hair disheveled by the brambles; but, in spite of all, comely, and ruddy with health.

She made a quick effort to adjust the sunbonnet, spared a hasty touch to the disheveled hair and raised her eyes. He noticed they were blue.

"They call me that." He raised his eyes a trifle. "And y[illegible]?"

She glanced uneasily up the hollow and back to his face. Half covertly searching his eyes, she seemed to gather reassurance from the level frankness of them.

"I 'lowed y'u—must be—" She glanced back at the bushes; drew a step away from them, as if she feared that hands might come out of them and clutch her. "I'm—Jennie Belden—an' I wus on the way t'—find you—"

Quite evidently much disturbed, she missed the quick lift of the man's shoulders. She glanced again at the bushes, listened a moment, drew a step nearer and lowered her voice.

"You're in dreadful danger, an' I wus comin' t' warn y'u. I don't know what y'u've done, but y'u ain't safe a minute. Of course I know y'u hurt brother Loge's hand, but it ain't that, an' there's another man more dangerous than him, an' a—third man more dangerous than both. There wus eyes on y'u yisterd'y. Ther' ain't none on y'u this mornin'—n'r on me, an' that's why I could slip away—but ther' will be. Stay out o' the woods, an' don't show a light at night, an' don't come out if anybody calls y'u"—she involuntarily glanced up the hollow, shivered, wrung her hands—"an' please, please, don't breathe a word about seein' me! They'd—kill me if they knowed—not even brother Loge could withstand 'em."

"You Don't Chance t' Be Mr. Big Jack?"

She was talking fast, in low and hurried whispers. Apparently she fancied that her words were not making the full impression she wished, for she drew still nearer—so close that Jack could hear the quick purr of her breath.

"You ain't skeered—?" She stopped; stood studying him: "But, of course, I don't reckon y'u would be—a man like you. But please b'lieve me, an' heed me. The woods has eyes; the night has knives." She bent her head; she seemed struggling with some inner thought. "That—third man," she muttered, "he waits, an' bides his time, an' when he strikes, he—kills."

She whirled on the instant, like some startled creature of the woods, and was gone. He strode a surprised step after her, even called softly. There came back to him only the low swish of the bushes and the soft fall of receding steps.

Like a shadow the girl—a far wanderer from the Kentucky mountains—had come; like a shadow gone. One moment the swaying bushes had flared forth her face, with its startled eyes, the next moment had swallowed it up.

The woodsman came back to the edge of the road and stood pondering her message—her warning; felt over in his careful way each hurried word; tried to cast them up and arrive at the exact sum total of them. The thought crossed his mind that she might have been wrought up over an imaginary danger; but no, it was real enough that she had dared personal harm to warn him—and her eyes were honest.

That the man who had glowered at him over the log was in some way associated with Loge Belden he had already surmised from the fact that the man had taken up Belden's quarrel at the schoolhouse—besides, his trail had led that way. But the utmost of their combined grievance could hardly warrant such a threat as the mountain girl had plainly hinted. There must be something back of it all—something that cut deeper than gashed hands and sore jaws.

The girl's last muttered [illegible]—"that third man" that "waits an' bides his time an' when he strikes he kills"—suddenly assumed a deeper meaning. He darted a quick look down the hollow—a deep scar winding like the trail of a dragon between the hills—where more than a mile away, hidden from view by the dense woods the village lay like some hapless creature that had barely escaped the dragon's jaws; then frowned toward the narrow valley's head where the weather-blackened roof of a squalid cabin could barely be seen through the trees. A slow sternness crawled into his eyes; he dropped the butt of the shotgun to the leaves; leaned upon it and stood staring down at the road.

Gradually, as he stared, there grew upon him the consciousness of an outline of a single footprint at the other side of the road—detached, alone, apparently with no mark of any kind leading either to it or from it. The singular fact of its seemingly perfect isolation slowly reached him, and won a place among the troop of thoughts that gripped him.

He studied it closely a moment, grunted and then grinned.

"Uncle Nick," he muttered. "Heel deepest—he's jumped—where from?"

He glanced at the other side of the road where the take-off must have been to land a leap just there and after a short search found where the old man's boot had scraped the moss a little in making the spring.

"Almin' f'r that slab of sandstone," he chuckled, his eyes losing a mite of their hardness, "fell a bit shy and landed in the soft dirt—mighty good jump, at that, f'r a man with eighty-odd years on 'is back."

Stooping again over the isolated footprint, he examined it with closest attention, trying at the same time to call up all the lore of the trail that the old ranger had taken such pride in teaching him—the wise and wonderful ways of woodcraft that he had taken an equal pride in learning, until, next to Uncle Nick himself, he was known to be the most skillful woodsman along the Wabash. As he looked, a grass stem that had been bent down and slightly hung in the soil suddenly loosed and straightened.

"Hot trail, ol' scoutmaster," he muttered, in the half spoken soliloquy that nature sometimes teaches her favorites. "And there y'u go, pickin' y'ur steps so's t' hit the hard spots and miss the soft ones."

A sudden thoughtfulness crossed his face. "I wonder why y'u're so p'tic'lar t' hide y'ur trail, though—there ain't no Pottawattomies t' find it no more. Mebbe the woods jist filled y'u s' full this wonderful morning, like they have me, that y'u can't help playin' a while at the ol' war game of the trail. Well, I'll play with y'u—and I'll run y'u down b'fore the shadow of the bluffs climbs out of the crick."

After a searching glance in every direction, so keen and critical that it appeared to handle with minuteness every bush and tree within range of his eye, and a further moment spent in sounding the woods for any false note they might carry, he threw the shotgun into the hollow of his well arm and took up the trail.

It led across the two or three rods of broken ground between the road and the little stream, which, at that point, sparkled along over a shallow riffle. Once, as his old friend had sprung from stone to stone in crossing, his boot had slipped and gone into the water. After that every alternate stone on which he had stepped, was still damp from the wet boot.

Jack had followed to a point well within sight of Loge Belden's cabin when, barely a hundred yards ahead, he caught a glimpse of a man stealing from cover to cover—just a flash as he flitted from one hazel thicket to another, but that was enough. That tall form, erect as an Indian, those iron-gray locks, falling loosely from under the quaint old cap of hand dressed coonskin, could belong to but one man in the world—Uncle Nick.

Jack instantly darted to cover and began stalking the old ranger. Barely fifty yards separated them when, as he peeped from behind an oak, he saw the old man steal out from a dense thicket of wild grape-vines, dart across an open space and throw himself flat behind a decaying log.

Crawling up behind a huge sugar maple that stood barely more than a rod from the log, Jack rose to his feet, a grin spreading over his face as he thought of the surprise he was about to spring upon his old friend.

He was just bracing himself for the rush when a hand fell upon his shoulder, and, whirling with sudden startlement, he found himself looking with foolish vacancy into the quizzically twinkling eyes of Uncle Nick.

At sight of his young friend's bewildered face the shoulders of the old hunter shook with merriment, though not a sound passed his lips—the silent laughter that long years in the woods, when they were dangerous, had taught him.

Washington Note Sells for $1,575

A LETTER written by George Washington, regarded as most interesting, changed hands recently at a sale in the Anderson galleries of autographs from the library of the late Henry Cady Sturges of New York city. The price paid for the letter was $1,575. This is the letter in which Washington said he was not inclined to accept the presidency. The missive was addressed to Jonathan Trumbull.

The letter reads:

"Mount Vernon, Dec. 4th, 1788.

"My dear Sir: It is sometime since I had the pleasure to receive your favor of the 28th of October—but as I had nothing particular to send in return, I postponed writing until the present time to see whether anything new would turn up.—Nothing of importance has occurred.—But in the meantime, I was extremely happy to find that your State was going on so well as to federal affairs; and you will permit me to say that I have not been a little pleased with observing that your name stood so high in the nomination for Representatives to Congress.—

"In general the appointments to the Senate seem to have been very happy. —Much will depend upon having disinterested and respectable characters in both Houses.—For if the New Congress should be composed of characters in whom the citizens will naturally place a confidence, it will be a most fortunate circumstance for conciliating their good will to the government—and then, if the government can be carried on without touching the purses of the people too deeply, I think it will not be in the power of the adversaries of it, to throw everything into confusion, by effecting premature amendments.—A few months will, however, show what we are to expect.

"I believe you know me sufficiently well, my dear Trumbull, to conceive that I am very much perplexed & distressed in my own mind, respecting the subject to which you allude.

"If I should (unluckily for me), be reduced to the necessity of giving an answer to the question, which you suppose will certainly be put to me, I would fain do what was in all respects best.—But how can I know what is best, or on what shall I determine? May Heaven assist me in forming a judgment; for at present, I see nothing but clouds and darkness before me.—Thus much I may safely say to you in confidence; if ever I should, from apparent necessity, be induced to go from home in a public character again—it will certainly be the greatest sacrifice of feeling & happiness that ever was or ever can be made by him, who will have in all situations, the pleasure to profess himself, with sentiments of real esteem.

"Your affecte friend and obedt Servant,

(Signed) "G. WASHINGTON."

WASHINGTON ON NATURE

"A GREAT deal of rain fell last night and the heaviest sleet I ever recollect to have seen. The boughs of all the trees were incrusted by tubes of ice quite round, at least half an inch thick—the weight of which was so great that my late transplantations in many instances sunk under it, bending the bodies of young trees and breaking the limbs."

"A great hoar frost and ice at least one eighth of an inch thick—what injury this may have done to the fruit and vegetation will soon be seen. The buds of every kind of tree and shrub are swelling the tender leaves of many had unfolded the apricot blossoms were putting forth the peaches and cherries were upon the point of doing the same. The leaves of the apple trees were coming out, those of the weeping willow and the lilac had been out many days and were the first to show themselves. The sassafras was ready to open the red bud had begun to open but not to make any show; the dogwood had swelled into buttons. The service tree was showing its leaf, and the maple had been full in bloom ten days or a fortnight. Of this tree, I observed great difference in the colour of the blossoms; some being of a deep scarlet bordering upon crimson, others of a pale red, approaching yellow."

"Found what is called the spice bush (a fragrant aromatic shrub) in bloom—perceived this to be the case on Monday, also as I returned from Alexandria and supposed it had been blown two or three days. It is a small greenish flower growing round the twigs and branches and will look well in a shrubbery."

"Its light and airy foliage, crimson and variegated flowers presented a gay and mirthful appearance; continually whilst in bloom visited by the brilliant thundering humming bird."—Quotations from Washington in James H. Penniman's "George Washington as a Man of Letters."

CABINET CHANGES RUMORS PERSIST

Daugherty and Denby Both Deny They Have Resigned---Lenroot Grills Publisher

Washington.—Persistent but unsuccessful effofts of Chairman Lenroot to force from Frederick G. Bonfils, publisher of the Denver Colo. Post, an admission that Harry F. Sinclair had purchased the silence of his newspaper in connection with the Teapot Dome lease were made Saturday at another dramatic session of the senate oil committee.

Mr. Bonfils was emphatic in his denials, charged that his enemies in Denver had inspired the question, and and declared thta the contract which Sinclair entered into with the publisher and J. Leo Stack, a Denver oil man, whereby he was to pay them $1,000,000 was in settlement of a liability under contracts which Stack had with Standard Oil subsidiaries whose claims in Teapot Dome Sinclair previously had purchased for $1,000,000.

Senate Discusses Denby.

While the gruelling cross examination of the publisher by the Wisconsin senator proceeded, the senate renewed its debate on the Denby resignation resolution and finally reached an agreement to shut off all discussion at 5 P. M. Monday and begin voting on all pending amendments and finally on the resolution itself. Adoption of the measure in one or another form was forecast.

Simultaneous with these events at the capitol rumors of impending cabinet changes were revived, but they were without any verification. Attorney General Daugherty, whose name frequently has been drawn into the oil discussion on the senate floor, returned from Florida and immediately conferred with President Coolidge.

Upon leaving the White House Mr. Daughterty said the oil lease investigation had entered largely into the discussion with the executive. He denied he had tendered his resignation and refused to talk about details of the oil inquiry.

By completing the examination of Mr. Bonfils, the oil committee cleared the way to hear William G. McAdoo, with reference to his professional services with the Doheny oil company. Mr. McAdoo who is a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, will appear at his own request.

GOLD BASIS FOR NEW BANK

Committee Formulates a Project to Stabilize Germany.

Berlin.—Definite plans for the establishment of new German bank of issue on gold basis have been formulated and submitted to Dr. Schacht, head of the reichsbank, by the first committee of experts which is studying the German currency situation. The projected bank will exchange its own notes against those of the rentenbank and the reichsbank.

The committee will inform the reparation commission that, in its opinion, the plan it proposes should be put into prompt operation. The members of the committee will have a further conference with Dr. Schacht in Paris on the nineteenth instant.

Details Kept Secret

No public announcement regarding the fundamental principles on which the projected bank will be established will be made until the entire project has been canvassed with the reparation commission and given final consideration by the German officials.

HERRIN UNDER MARTIAL LAW

Ten Companies Ordered to County—Take Over Police Powers.

Herrin, Ill.—Restricted martial law prevails in this city having been proclaimed by Colonel Albert Culbertson in charge of state militiamen sent here after disturbances Saturday between "wet and dry" elements.

Decision to apply restricted martial law was reached after Colonel Culbertson had been in communication with Adjutant General Black at Springfield, who ordered the dispatch of ten additional companies of national guard to the county. Colonel Culbertson said the situation was not as satisfactory as desired.

The militia has taken over the police powers of the city and visitors were instructed to refrain from entering the city over Sunday and Monday. The courts will be permitted to function with civilians in charge, Colonel Culbertson said. He added that full martial law would not be proclaimed in the county.

[illegible] Released [illegible] $500 [illegible]

Fargo, N. D.—Lars John, charged with second degree manslaughter as a result of the death Thursday night of Mrs. Marian Gray, who was killed when a motorcycle driven by John struck a street car here, was released from custody under bonds of $500 after he had been instructed by Judge A. T. Cole, before whom he was arraigned, to enter a plea of not guilty to the charge. The manslaughter charge is based on alleged culpable negligence in the operation of the motorcycle by John.

Origin of Honeydew Melon.

The original seed of the honeydew melon is said to have been obtained from a melon shipped from Africa to New York city. The seed was planted at Rocky Ford, Colo., and crossed with other varieties for two or three seasons. The so-called honey-dew melon is the result. As yet this melon has not been brought into a stable condition of reproduction.

Saturday Feb. 23

Saturday Feb. 23 The Red River Valley 20th Anniversary Pageant film will be shown at the Holt consolidated school under the auspices of the Holt Commercial Club. The picture shows the progress made since the early pioneer days. This is an opportunity the people in and around Holt should take advantage of. The pageant was written and directed by Supt. Selvig of Agri. School at Crookston, given the first time at R. R. Valley Dairymen's convention last November. A large number of our people saw the pageant and we hope they will pass the news along.

As a large crowd is expected, the picture will be shown twice that night. First show at 7:15, which the town people are requested to attend, as farmers and their families must be admitted first at 2nd show.

Be there when the gong sounds, everything is free, so dont disappoint us.

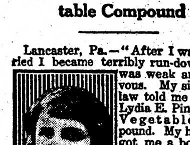
RUN-DOWN WEAK, NERVOUS

Benefited by First Bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound



Lancaster, Pa.—"After I was married I became terribly run-down and was weak and nervous. My sister-in-law told me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. My husband got me a bottle at once, and it did me so much good that I kept on taking it. I began to feel well and strong again and was able to do my housework up to the time my baby was born—a nice fat little girl in the best of health. I surely am recommending the Vegetable Compound to my friends when they have troubles like mine, and I am perfectly willing for you to use these facts as a testimonial." —Mrs. FRANK H. GRIMM, 533 Locust Street, Lancaster, Pa.

Women should heed such symptoms as pains, backache, nervousness, a run-down condition and irregularity, as they indicate some form of female trouble.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a dependable medicine for all these troubles. For sale by druggists everywhere.

DAIRY FACTS

LIKELY CAUSES FOR LAPSE OF APPETITE

Dairy cows sometimes suddenly stop eating for no apparent reason, and feeding steers may be similarly affected. More commonly, however, appetite gradually lessens until eating stops. Chewing the cud, or rumination, is also suppressed in these cases. It seems possible that the cow becomes tired of her ration if no change has been made for some time. Lack of succulent or laxative feed may also be a contributing cause. Anyhow, the liver seems to be torpid and little if any muscular motion (peristalsis) can be heard when the ear is placed against the animal's side. Lack of exercise, insufficient drinking water, an inadequate or irregular supply of salt, chill, fright or discomfort are other possible causes, and total lack of appetite is also a symptom of many serious diseases.

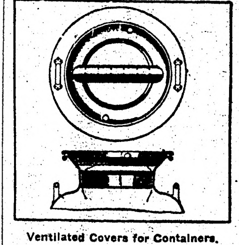
When disease is not present, try the effects of a change of feed. Apples or roots sometimes are relished. Raw potatoes may stimulate the appetite. A cow will sometimes eat whole oats when she refuses other feed. Salt placed in her mouth or salt dissolved in the drinking water may improve the appetite. Also offer alfalfa or clover hay, if timothy, prairie or swale hay has formed the roughage. Meal placed in the mouth may also coax the appetite.

In my experience fluid extracts of nux vomica and gentian root have proved, with acetic acid, the most effective medicines. Two ounces of dilute acetic acid well diluted with water given night and morning for a few days sometimes starts the animal to eating. If it does not succeed, give twenty to thirty drops of fluid extract of nux vomica and one to two drams of fluid extract of gentian root in some flaxseed tea every six or eight hours, and if necessary gradually increase the dose of nux. Make the animal take active outdoor exercise every day. Take the chill off the drinking water. Supply rock salt or block salt. Protect the animal against cold drafts and wet weather.—A. S. A. in Successful Farming.

Ventilating Cover for Containers Is Invented

The Scientific American, in illustrating and describing a ventilating cover for containers, the invention of G. T. Morris of Missoula, Mont., says:

The invention relates more particularly to containers employed for transporting milk, cream and the like. One of the primary objects is to provide a container in which the interior will be at all times in communication with the exterior, to afford proper ventilation of the contents. It is a further object to so construct the cover for milk containers that the gases generated within the container may be discharged therefrom.



Ventilated Covers for Containers.

Safe Practice to Feed Dairy Cattle Roughage

Feed the dairy cow all the roughage she will eat. Under ordinary conditions, this is safe advice, says E. S. Savage, authority on dairy rations at the New York State College of Agriculture at Ithaca. Silage and legume hay seem the best combination. The silage should be fed at the rate of about three or four pounds a day for each hundred pounds of live weight. This will usually mean the cow will then consume about a pound and a half of hay every day for each ten pounds of live weight.

Silage's chief value is its succulence. One should avoid feeding too much of it, since it is bulky and contains a low percentage of digestible nutrients.

To make the grain ration palatable, at least three different grains should be included. Jerseys will probably need about one pound of the mixture daily for each 3 to 3½ pounds of milk produced, Holsteins and other large-typed cows will need one pound of the mixture for each 3½ to 4 pounds of milk.

Feed Heifer Generously in First Milking Year

A heifer should be fed generously the first milking year to get her into the habit of milking generously and to develop her milk giving functions. Possibly her second breeding time should be extended a little so she may be milked a long time the first milking year in the hope of creating the habit of being persistent. Kindness and gentleness have much to do with the development of the dairy calf.

Strawberry Best for Home Garden

New Plants for Spring Setting Can Be Purchased at Very Small Expense.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Strawberries are so easily handled and require so little room that if only one of the small fruits can be grown in the home garden they should have the preference. New plants for setting out this spring can be purchased at small cost from a nurseryman, or perhaps may be obtained free from a neighbor. They may be transplanted from nearby at any time in the season if surrounded by a ball of earth, moved carefully and watered well. In either case, says the United States Department of Agriculture, the bed should contain some plants known as a perfect-blossom variety, otherwise the plants of the imperfect-blossom variety in the bed will not be pollinated and consequently will not bear fruit.

Two Kinds of Blossoms.

Strawberry blossoms are of two kinds. One kind is called perfect, staminate, or male, and the other kind imperfect, pistillate, or female. Some varieties have perfect blossoms and other varieties have imperfect blossoms. Those with perfect blossoms produce pollen which will fertilize both perfect and imperfect blossoms and enable them to bear fruit. The varieties with imperfect blossoms cannot set fruit without receiving pollen from perfect blossoms.

If both kinds are planted there should be at least one row of the perfect-blossom variety to four rows with imperfect blossoms. The nurseryman's catalogue will specify the kind of blossoms. Set the plants early in the spring, if possible, so they will get the benefit of the spring rains and make a strong growth. Trim off the dead leaves and all but one or two live ones and cut the roots to four or five inches long. Spread the roots somewhat and set the plants the same depth in the soil as they were before they were dug. Be especially careful not to set them deeper and not to get earth over the growing crowns, for this will probably kill the plants.

Set Close Together.

The plants may be grown in hills or in narrow or wide matted rows. For very small areas, plants set in hills close together will no doubt produce the most and largest fruit, but will require more care than matted rows. For hill growing, set the plants one foot apart in the row and have the rows just far enough apart to cultivate easily, say from two to three feet; or set two rows a foot apart in double rows and have a space of two or three feet between the double rows. Keep all runners cut off and give good cultivation, so as to make extra strong plants.

Vaccination Against Hog Cholera Is Wisest Plan

As there seems to be a considerable outbreak of hog cholera in the eastern part of Colorado, a reiteration of some of the well-known facts of this disease may not be amiss.

Cholera is the most serious disease of hogs which we have and the only one that causes unusually large losses in all aged animals. It is hardly conceivable that 50 or 75 per cent of a herd of hogs of various ages would be lost from any other disease. In spite of this there seems to be much uncertainty as to the diagnosis, one regarding it as pneumonia, another as necrotic enteritis, and various other diseases.

Vaccination of herds in which the disease is already widespread is often disappointing, but vaccination as a preventive measure is almost absolute and will be found profitable. This procedure is the greatest boon to the hog raiser which has ever been discovered, but unless it is used it cannot be expected to be very helpful. Everyone owning hogs in a district where the disease is known to exist should immediately vaccinate rather than wait until the disease attacks the herd. This will be found excellent and profitable insurance.—I. E. Newsom, department of pathology, Colorado Agricultural college.

Care of Farm Machinery Should Interest Farmer

Farm folks no doubt tire of reading about the care of farm machinery. It seems to be the open season on this subject at this time of the year, but there is just one thing that should bring the subject closer home right now than ever before and that is that it is now that farm folks are complaining most about the cost of producing farm crops and the wide difference in price levels of farm products and manufactured products. Now is the time to cut down the overhead and the item of depreciation on farm equipment.

Soy Beans Are Excellent With Corn for Silage

To be grown with corn for hogging down or to be pastured down with sheep or to be cut with corn for silage, there is no question but soy beans should be more extensively raised in every state of the Union. We should also grow more soy beans for grain to be used for cattle and hogs in balancing feeding rations. The man who grows his own protein need not buy so much expensive tankage and other products rich in the muscle forming elements.

Care of Leather in Wet Weather Urged

Especially True in Late Winter and Spring Months.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

"The care of your leather equipment at all times, but especially during the wet winter and spring months," is the recommendation of the leather experts of the bureau of chemistry, United States Department of Agriculture. Farmers are the largest users of leather and they are vitally concerned in lengthening its life. Harness, for instance, of the proper weight and grade for the work required, should last fifteen to twenty-five years if it is not allowed to become hard or harsh, but is kept smooth and flexible by frequent washing and oiling, and has been known to last forty years.

The specialists recommend that harness be washed with tepid water and castile soap, rinsed in tepid water, and hung up to dry. While still moist it should be oiled well with neat's-foot oil or castor oil with a mixture of either with wool grease. Driving belts, machine belts and other leather articles used by the farmer will also respond to this preservative treatment with increased serviceability and money will be saved that would otherwise have to be spent in replacing them if neglected.

Grease the children's shoes and waterproof the soles so that dampness cannot enter. Then it will no longer be necessary to deny children the pleasures of outdoor life during winter and spring because of the possible danger of colds from wet feet. Formulas for making boots and shoes water resistant have been prepared by the department.

Substantial Fence Post Brace Always Desirable

The diagonal rod shown in the illustration has one end bearing against a metal seat near the top of the post and the other against a block of concrete. It acts as a brace and is held in place by the horizontal tie rod.

Pure-Bred Sires of One Breed Give Best Results

No hard and fast rules can be laid down as to how and where to buy good herd sires. It is a good plan for the beginner to get the advice and assistance of an experienced judge before making a purchase. Not every pure bred or registered sire is a good one; culls appear in the best herds. Most county agents and high school agricultural teachers are good stock judges, or at least have sufficient knowledge of breeds and herds to enable them to render valuable assistance in selecting stock. The better class of breeders will assist a new man to get a start by giving him good value for his money.

Pure bred sires give best results when always of one breed. Judicious cross-breeding may give good results for market feeding, but when cross-bred females are saved for breeding purposes their offspring do not have that uniformity of type and form that is so desirable in market stock. This is only obtained by continuing one line of breeding.

Tomato Fertilizer Tests Give Convincing Results

Results of three years' work with fertilizers on tomatoes have just been published by the New Jersey experiment station. Yields produced with 21 different complete fertilizers, each containing a total of over 16 per cent plant food (ammonia, phosphoric acid and potash) were compared with each other and with yields of unfertilized tomatoes. The fertilizer was applied at the rate of 1,000 pounds per acre, 400 pounds several days before planting and the balance three weeks after planting.

During the three-year period, the combined average yield of the seven highest yielding plots was 12 tons of tomatoes per acre, 4.8 tons more than the average yield of the unfertilized tomatoes. All things considered, a 2-8-6 fertilizer proved the most economical under the conditions governing the test.

Soy Beans Not Superior to Alfalfa as Hay Crop

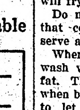
While soy beans should not be considered superior to alfalfa for hay, they may be regarded as a most excellent catch crop to be seeded in the spring in places where clover or alfalfa have winterkilled, or to be grown where other legumes have not been seeded the year before. Then, too, soy beans will grow on land that is slightly sour and not well adapted for the legumes that are especially susceptible to soil acidity.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

(©, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

"To grow and keep in person as attractive as possible should be not only everyone's pleasure but should be also everyone's duty."

HOUSEHOLD HINTS



An alarm clock is a fine thing to set in the kitchen when baking cake, pudding, bread or in fact any kind of food. One is so apt to forget how long the bread has been baking. Set it at the time one is to start getting dinner, too.

A cheap little slate with a crayon or pencil hung on the kitchen wall will help in doing the ordering. When any staple is getting low a note to that effect will call it to mind. A good reminder for work to do or engagements that might be neglected is thus handy.

If the hands are rubbed with a mixture of salt and cornmeal after peeling onions or handling fish, then washed in cold water the odor will be removed.

To remove obstinate mason jar covers on canned fruit dip them in boiling water for a minute or two, then unscrew easily.

Melt butter and heat milk when adding to mashed potato—then they will beat up light and fluffy.

Cornmeal mush will not become lumpy when cooking if the water is boiling and the cornmeal is mixed with a little cold water to pour into the boiling water. Stir until well-mixed and cook until thoroughly done. Add a tablespoonful of butter to the hot mush—it improves the flavor and it will fry better.

Do not put the dressing on salads that contain lettuce until ready to serve as it loses its crispness.

When baking potatoes clip the ends, wash well, then rub with any sweet fat. The skin will be thin and edible when baked. Roll the potato and crack to let the steam escape—this will make a mealy potato.

Newspapers laid around the stove when frying cakes or broiling steaks will save many a spot on the floor. The papers may be gathered up and burned and much work be saved.

When cooking steak add the seasoning after the steak has been well seared over on both sides. Salt draws out the juices of the meat if added before it is cooked.

Potato peelings put into the furnace or kitchen stove will keep the flues clean.

Dry, hot bran is a good cleaner of furs. Rub it in well then brush and hang the furs out to air.

A pretty salad may be made of small tomatoes. Peel and cut down to resemble a flower, fill the center with a spoonful of dressing and serve on lettuce.

"The sky is always blue,
The clouds are only passing vapors, floating,
Like sorrows brooding o'er you, dark and gloating,
Beyond them heaven is smiling tender, true.

GOOD THINGS FOR THE TABLE

For a change from the ordinary bread the following will be liked:

Southern Grist Bread.—Mash until smooth one cupful of cold, well-cooked hominy. Into this stir one well-beaten egg, one tablespoonful of lard, a little salt, one cupful of milk, and lastly one pint of uncooked hominy. Spread this in a well-greased baking pan and bake half an hour. Cut into squares and serve hot with butter.

Apple Sauce Cake.—Take one cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of butter, one cupful of thick unsweetened apple sauce, one cupful of raisins, one and one-half cupfuls of flour, one teaspoonful of cinnamon, one-half teaspoonful of cloves, a teaspoonful of soda and one-fourth teaspoonful of grated nutmeg. Mix and bake slowly in a moderate oven.

Sponge Bananas.—Cover the bottom of a baking dish with small sponge cakes or with pieces of cake, cover with a layer of bananas, sprinkle with sugar, the juice of an orange, chopped nuts or coconut. Bake fifteen minutes, serve with a custard or thick cream.

Chicken, Mississippi Style.—Pass through a meat chopper one-fourth of a pound each of fresh veal and pork, two slices of bacon, the liver of a chicken, half a green pepper, two sprigs of parsley, a teaspoonful of scraped onion, a tablespoonful of worcestershire sauce, half a teaspoonful of salt, a dash of cayenne; mix all well and use to stuff a chicken. Baste often and cook in a hot oven until tender. Serve with sweet potatoes.

Cranberry Bavarian Cream.—Wash a quart of cranberries and put to cook; while hot press through a sieve. To one pint of pulp add one-half cupful of sugar. Soak a quarter of a box of gelatin in one-quarter of a cupful of water and dissolve over hot water, then add to the berries. Turn into a bowl and beat until cold and beginning to thicken, then add one-half cupful of rich milk and beat again. Lastly add one cupful of thick whipped cream. Beat well and mold.

Why You May Need—

for Economical Transportation
CHEVROLET

There are three main groups of prospective buyers of Chevrolet automobiles and commercial cars.

First, are all who know from comparisons or through the experiences of friends that Chevrolet provides the utmost dollar value in modern, economical transportation of people or merchandise.

Second, the large group of people with modest incomes who have the false impression that so good a car as Chevrolet is beyond their means.

They do not realize that due to engineering excellence and full modern equipment, Chevrolet operating and maintenance costs average so low that during the life of the car, it delivers modern, comfortable, fast transportation at the lowest cost per mile, including the purchase price.

Third, the smaller but very important group of car owners of ample means, only a small percentage of whom as yet realize that Chevrolet as an extra car virtually costs them nothing, due to the reduction in their transportation expenses effected by it.

We respectfully suggest consideration, investigation and comparison of Chevrolet with any other car at any price.

African Ruler Devises Language of His Own

A few years ago Njoya, king of Foumban, in the Cameroons, became jealous of the particularly good set of secret languages of neighboring tribes, and invented from French, English and German words a code tongue of his own which is reserved for the exclusive use of the "cabinet" and upper administrative officials.

The interesting feature of this state language, which was discovered and studied by a Frenchman, Lieutenant Clapot, is that, instead of meaning their usual equivalent, the European words have entirely different code significations, "La mission," for instance, means "to see," and "franc" means "the king," "Ordnung" means "we," "savant" means "an egg," "lemon" means "a hill," "left" means "which," and "English" means "a head."—Manchester Guardian.

"Dark" Stars

The United States naval observatory says: "A dark star is an invisible or very feebly luminous star. As it is impossible to estimate the proportion of stars that are 'dark,' it is conceivable that these may greatly outnumber the visible ones. That many dark stars do exist, however, is shown by their effects on the orbits and on the light of certain luminous ones, and by the appearance of novas."

To Ripen Bananas

The best way to ripen bananas is to hang them in a dark room at about 70 degrees Fahrenheit, well ventilated and kept at a high humidity. Humidity should be at about 85 to 90 percent. There are many variations to this practice.

Origin of Honeydew Melon.

The original seed of the honeydew melon is said to have been obtained from a melon shipped from Africa to New York city. The seed was planted at Rocky Ford, Colo., and crossed with other varieties for two or three seasons. The so-called honey-dew melon is the result. As yet this melon has not been brought into a stable condition of reproduction.

In King Tut's Time.

Folks in King Tut's time were not so slow. Carl Mitman, in cataloguing the ship models in his department of the Smithsonian Institution, points out that Egyptians built boat hulls of the correct form for speed nearly 4,000 years before modern scientific designers arrived at the same conclusions. Vikings had the right idea and Malay pirates had the waveline theory of construction down to perfection when English and American sailboats were clumsy tubs.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale

Notice is hereby given, that default has been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage containing a Power of Sale, by reason of which default said Power of Sale has become operative and the Assignee of the Mortgagee hereinafter named is authorized to and does hereby declare the whole sum secured by said mortgage to be due and payable and exercises the Power of Sale aforesaid; that said mortgage was executed by Clarence Larson and Bertha Larson, his wife, and Engebret S. Moe, a single man, Mortgagors to Holt State Bank, a Minnesota corporation, Mortgagee, and dated October 2nd, 1919 and filed for record in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County, Minnesota on the 22nd day of October, A. D. 1919 at 8 o'clock A. M. and was then and there duly recorded in Book 93 of Mortgages, on page 381,

Which mortgage was by the said Holt State Bank duly assigned to Deposit Bank of Winona, a Minnesota corporation, by written assignment dated October 28th, 1919 and which assignment was filed for record in the office of the Register of Deeds, in said County of Marshall on the 26th day of November, A. D. 1919 at 1 o'clock P. M. and was then and there duly recorded in Book 90 of Mortgages, on page 594;

And which mortgage was duly assigned by Deposit Bank of Winona, a Minnesota corporation, to Deposit Bank & Trust Company, a Minnesota corporation, by written assignment dated July 30th, 1923, which assignment was filed for record in the office of the Register of Deeds in said Marshall County on the 26th day of January, A. D. 1924 at 11 o'clock A. M. and duly recorded in Book 110 of Mortgages, on page 233.

That the amount claimed to be due and which is due on said mortgage at this date is Three Thousand Three Hundred Sixty and no-100 Dollars, with interest on $3180.00 thereof from the 2nd day of October 1922 and interest on $180.00 thereof from the 2nd day of October 1923 at six per cent per annum; that the premises described in and covered by said mortgage are situated in the County of Marshall and State of Minnesota and described as follows, viz:

The East Half of the Southeast Quarter (E1-2SE1-4) of Section Thirty three (33) in Township One Hundred Fifty six (156) North of Range Forty two (42) West of the Fifth Principal Meridian, Lot Four (4) of Section Three (3), Lots One and Two of Section Four (4), and Lot Five (5) of Section Three (3) in Township One Hundred Fifty five (155) North of Range Forty two [42] West of the Fifth Principal Meridian.

That by virtue of the Power of Sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be foreclosed by the sale of said described premises at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash by the Sheriff of said County of Marshall, at the Front door of the County Court House, in the City of Warren, in said County, on Tuesday the 1st day of April 1924 at 2:30 o'clock P. Breadfruit.

The breadfruit, with the cocoanut and banana, furnishes the chief food of the natives of the Pacific Islands. That is why we call it "breadfruit," because, for them, it takes the place of bread. Apart from its fruit, the tree itself is a very useful one, for, when beaten out, the inner bark forms a fine white cloth called tapa cloth.

The house had been sold out when the police arrived, took the operators from their booths and turned off the electric switches. The complaint alleged the showing of the picture was in violation of the statute forbidding performances tending to foment class or race hatred.

Dayton, Ohio—McCook field officials received the approval of the war department at Washington for additional flights by Lieutenant R. L. Maughan, who will attempt to cross the continent on the famous dawn to dusk flights. Maughan will make his efforts some time next June, the date not yet being definitely fixed. It will be as close to June 21, the longest day in the year, as possible, McCook officials said.

Oklahoma City—Seven indictments against J. C. Walton, deposed governor, charging felonies, were thrown out of state district court here by Judge C. C. Smith, who sustained Walton's motion to quash them. The court's action was based on the grounds that the grand jury that returned the indictments was not legally drawn.

Menominee, Mich. — Thirty persons were injured, none of them seriously, in a head on collision between southbound Chicago & North Western passenger train No. 224 and a northbound freight No. 25, at Kloman, near Powers, Mich.

Sports

Minneapolis—Fred Fulton of Minneapolis scored a technical knockout over Joe McCann of Newark, N. J., in the fourth round of their scheduled 10-round fight at the Kenwood Armory the Eastern heavyweight's chief second, Joe Jacobs, tossing a towel into the ring as a token of defeat after McCann had been floored three times in that session.

New York—Abolishment of the system of granting bonuses to players for batting, pitching or fielding excellence, and approval of a plan to select annually the league's most valuable star, were decided upon by club owners of the National league. The 1924 schedule of 154 games, opening April 15, and closing September 29, was adopted. A proposal to limit the number of coaches any club might have was voted down.

Eveleth—Minneapolis lost to Eveleth in a United States Amateur Hockey league game here, 2 to 1. Eveleth's old hero, Ching Johnson, was given a royal reception at the hippodrome when hundreds of fans saw him in action for the first time since he left the Hill Top city, and cheered him to the echo when he rang up the first score for Minneapolis.

Foreign

Rome—Former Premier and Foreign Minister Orlando yielded to the request that he run on the fascist ticket, headed by Premier Mussolini, in the coming elections.

Berlin—Every day at 10 a. m. prices for standard foodstuffs are communicated by radio in Berlin for the benefit of housekeepers who have been annoyed by the lack of uniformity in prices.

Copenhagen — The Danish government is planning to issue a new loan to Sweden of 17,000,00 kroner (about $2,850,000) for the purpoes of stabilizing the exchange, which is dropping daily.

London — Arthur Ponsonby, under secretary for foreign affairs, denied that England has any idea of ceding Jamaica to the United States in connection with a settlement of the French debt.

Copenhagen—Denmark never has experienced such a terrific winter as at present. It is continually 10 degrees below zero. In the last three months the ice has held in Danish archipelago, which is closed to communication with Sweden.

Tokio — Incontrovertible evidence has been uncovered in Tokio and other cities that a communist society among the professors of a nongovernment university of Tokio is spreading communist propaganda. The plot was discovered in time to nip it in the bud.

Manila—Governor General Leonard Wood vetoed items of the annual appropriations bill, passed during the last session of the insular legislature, providing funds for the executive, treasury and commerce and communications departments. The rest of the bill was approved.

Sofia—A Bulgarian "White Book," just issued in reply to the accusations of the Russian soviet government that Bulgaria hindered the Russian Red Cross missions in their work of repatriating Russians, alleges that the red agitation in Bulgaria was similar to the practices exposed by Secretary of State C. E. Hughes.

Berlin — Whenever "Deutschland Uber Alles" is broadcast by radio in Germany "someone, somewhere butts in," according to German newspaper paragraphers. There is a growing suspicion, the writers say, that the interfering waves "come from somewhere in the direction of the Eifel tower in Paris."

Paris—Memorial services for Woodrow Wilson were conducted in the American churches here. Among those present were representatives of President Millerand and Premier Poincare, Myron T. Herrick, the American ambassador, and members of the embassy staff and of the consulate, most of the diplomatic corps and many Americans attended the ceremony.

Paris—Jules Tantot, the most prosperous theater owner in Amiens, who died, willed that his body be accompanied to the cemetery by the Amiens brass band playing a recent popular tune. Tantot was carried to his resting place to the tune of, "Yes, We Have No Bananas." The movie and music hall owner's will declared that he had made his money by popular tunes and he would not let funeral music escort him to the grave.

Paris—Louis Marin, president of the parliamentary committee on economies, submitted a proposition calling upon the government to regulate bread consumption by reviving the wartime bread card system. With Premier Poincare fighting the fight of his life to get parliament to pass 6,000,000,000 francs ($300,000,000) additional taxation and authorize the government to suppress ministries and departments to make up another 1,000,000,000 francs ($50,000,000) by economies, the French political leaders are faced with another crisis in the increased price of flour and the decline of the franc.

Laon, France — Raoul Marchand, aged 20, has been convicted of murder and sentenced to death for the second time. He was condemned first in August, 1923, for the slaying of a girl. While in prison awaiting an appeal to Millerand, Marchand killed a prison attendant in an attempt to escape. Marchand again was arraigned before a jury, found guilty and sentenced to death.

Port Au Prince, Tahiti—The United States navy transport Henderson arrived here with 80 American newspaper publishers, who are guests of Secretary Edwin Denby.

McClenahan here on behalf of the woman, whose husband died in the Crosby disaster, and on his decision rests her right to collect insurance under the workmen's com-

DENBY TENDERS HIS RESIGNATION

First Break in Harding Cabinet Follows Recent Action of Senate

Washington.—Edwin B. Denby has resigned as secretary of the navy and his resignation has been accepted.

It is expected that the effective date of his resignation will be March 10.

After repeatedly declaring he never would quit the cabinet under the fire of those who have criticised his part in the oil leasing program, the secretary notified President Coolidge Monday morning that he was ready to step out.

His decision followed a telephone consultation between the president and Mr. Denby in which all of the latest aspects of the situation were talked over in the light of information passed on to the White House by Republican leaders in the senate.

Recently a number of the secretary's friends also have been consulted by Mr. Coolidge, and they are understood to have advised the president that they fully understood the embarrassment that might result in retaining Mr. Denby in the cabinet while the oil annulment suits are in progress.

Not only is he a party to the oil leases, having affixed his signature along with that of Albert B. Fall, but he repeatedly has defended his part in the proceedings and has declared publicly since the present controversy arose that he believed the contracts legal and would be willing to pursue the same course again.

It has been pointed out to the president that it might appear inconsistent to have a member of the administration holding these views remain in office while the administration itself, through its counsel, was moving in the courts to annul the leases on the grounds that they were made without authority of law.

ELITE ARE WORST OFFENDERS

Haynes, in Address, Scores Influential Citizens for Violations.

Chicago.—A plea for greater co-operation of law enforcement agencies in administering the Volstead act and for strict observance on the part of the people, especially the "well-to-do and influential citizens," as an example to others and to aliens was made by Prohibition Commissioner Haynes in an address here Monday before the citizenship conference.

Mr. Haynes referred to the action of Mayor Dever in cleaning up the "wet" spots in Chicago as a demonstration of "the efficacy of proper corelation of local and federal officials," and declared the work done in Chicago and Philadelphia "is but an illustration of what can be done in the most difficult sections when an honest, sincere, co-operative effort at enforcement is made."

Mr. Haynes characterized "the well to do and influential" citizens as the "more dangerous" of the nonobservers and he was not so much concerned, he said, about the problem of liquor consumption among the other classes, since the "bootleggers boast that their clientele is from among the elite," if these "so-called leaders" feel themselves above the law, he added, "they become just as dangerous to the life of the nation as most undesirable types which burrow from beneath and seek to undermine it from below."

TO RESUME EXPLORATIONS

Carter Settles Differences With the Egyptian Government.

London.—As a result of consultations with legal advisors on the situation arising from Howard Carter's cessation of work on Tut-ankh-Amen's tomb the Egyptian government has decided that Mr. Carter will be permitted to continue his explorations provided that he accepts conditions formulated by the government, according to a Cairo dispatch to The Evening News.

These conditions stipulate that the work shall be carried out directly under control and direction of the government. The expense of continuing and completing the work is to be borne entirely by the government, the entire news service in connection with the tomb is to be undertaken by the government and distributed to the Egyptian and foreign press through a press bureau, and in the event that Mr. Carter refuses to agree to these conditions, the tomb is to be re-opened independently of him and he would then be free to take any legal action.

It is added that there is no legal obstacle to the opening of the tomb by the government as Mr. Carter, having broken his agreement, the government is held to be released from its obligations in the matter.

Nine Moosejaw Police Accused.

Winnipeg.—Nine members of the police force of Moosejaw, Sask., have been arrested and are being held in connection with wholesale thefts from stores and garages at Moosejaw. All members of the force have been called off their beats. Authorities assert that search of the homes of the arrested policemen has revealed goods alleged to have been stolen and valued at several thousands of dollars. Besides this, enormous quantities of goods are reported stolen at Moosejaw of which no trace can be found.

INSURGENTS MAY JOIN DEMOCRATS

Offer To Compromise With Republican Organization In Tax Fight

Washington.—Republican insurgents who hold the balance of power in the house tax fight, offered to compromise with organization leaders on a 40 per cent surtax maximum provided normal income tax rates are cut in half.

The offer, which remained unaccepted after two conferences, was accompanied by a threat that if turned down the insurgents' bloc would support the Democratic platform for a 44 per cent surtax maximum. This, leaders agreed, would give the Garner plan a majority when a vote comes next week on the income tax provisions of the Mellon bill.

The stumbling block appears to be the insistence of the insurgents that the present normal income tax rate of 8 and 4 per cent to be cut in half, a provision also carried in the Garner plan.

Representative Longworth, Republican leader, who initiated Saturday's get-together with the insurgents, declared he was flatly opposed to such a decrease. He contended it would alter fundamental principles of the Mellon bill which calls for a 25 per cent reduction in normal rates and a maximum surtax of 25 per cent.

As the negotiations between the two Republican groups proceeded, the house devoted a third day to general debate on the revenue bill. After seven hours' discussion, marked at times by sharp exchanges between the Democrats and Republicans, a dinner recess was taken after which the house plunged into a night meeting, the first of the session.

BRITISH STRIKE IS SERIOUS

London.—A strike involving 120,000 well organized dockmen which started automatically at noon Saturday, will arrest the port work of the whole nation and if it continues for any considerable time, may also make idle another million or more men concerned in auxiliary waterside work and dependent trades and industries.

This dockers' walkout is likely to prove much more inconvenient to the public than the recent railway strike and any prolonged hesitation of work at the docks would prevent the unloading of incoming food and raw materials—a matter almost impossible for even the most willing government to remedy.

The minister of labor tried his hardest to prevent the strike materializing, but owing to the obduracy of the employers, especially those connected with the port of London, without success.

Having had ample notice of the strike, the port authorities have been able to speed up the unloading of vessels and make other arrangements to meet the situation, so there is not likely to be any immediate shortage of food but eventually there will be heavy losses from perishable goods should the strike last very long, and there is certain to be a speedy rise in the necessaries of life.

Port of London employers have announced that the wages of all men employed on London docks will from Monday be raised by one shilling daily together with the restoration of the same piece work rates as were current in June, 1923, and that work is offered to men on this basis.

JOHNSON PETITIONS FILED

Names of Delegate Candidates and Committeemen Not Announced.

Bismarck, N. D.—Petitions to place his name on the March 18 presidential primary ballot were filed in Bismarck by the state campaign headquarters for Senator Hiram W. Johnson, candidate for the Republican nomination for president. It was announced that petitions for a slate of 13 delegates to the national convention and a state national committeeman will be filed by March 1, as required by law.

The names of the candidates to delegates and national committeeman have not been made public by the state headquarters. It was said yesterday that these candidates have all been selected and these have also agreed to serve.

Coolidge petitions were filed by L. B. Hanna, state campaign manager for the president, almost two weeks ago. Candidates for delegates and national committeeman were selected at the state convention held at Bismarck last Thursday.

Supreme Court Denies Appeal.

Bismarck, N. D.—The North Dakota supreme court Saturday affirmed the conviction of William Gummer, alleged murderer of Marie Wick whose slain body was found on the morning of June 7, 1921. The verdict was a composite opinion with Associate Justice W. L. Nuessle dissenting. The decision of the highest North Dakota court shuts off the last possible chance for Gummer's escape from the sentence of life imprisonment, which he is now serving in the North Dakota penitentiary.

THE RED LOCK

A Tale of the Flatwoods

By DAVID ANDERSON

Author of "The Blue Moon"

—14—

"An' did y'u think t' take the ol' man by su'prise? Did y'u, lad?"

He opened his mouth in another upheaval of silent merriment, his still sinewy shoulders heaving up and down and jostling his iron-gray locks about his ears.

"Jist bracin' y'urself f'r the rush, werdn't y'u?"

"I—I—thought y'u was b'hind the log."

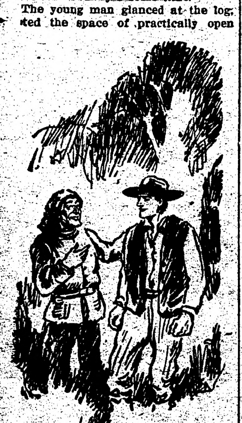
"I wus."

"Yes—but how?—w'y I had m' eyes on that log every second."

"Egzac'ly"—the sinewy shoulders heaved up and down again—"calc'lated y'u would. 'Stid o' keepin' y'ur eye on the log, y'u ort 'a' kep' it on the pass to the nighest cover—ol' Injin trick—show y'u some time."

The young man glanced at the log, noted the space of practically open ground that must have been crossed in order to reach the nearest cover, and turned to his aged companion in frank admiration.



"An' Did Y'u Think t' Take the Ol' Man by Su'prise? Did Y'u, Lad?"

"Wonder if I ever will be as handy as you?"

"Tain't likely—y'ur life don't depend on it, like mine use'n to sixty years ago. Y'u're far handier a'ready than any other man in the woods. But woodcraft will never ag'in be what it once't wus. People even kinda look down on it, now'days. They're s' wrapped up in book l'arnin' an' lan' grabbin' an' money graspin' that they think it's a kind of disgrace—some of 'em—t' even l'arn t' shoot. No, no, woodcraft will never ag'in be what it once't wus—never ag'in."

A faint suspicion of bitterness, of homesickness for scenes long gone—for the stimulating uncertainties of the perilous trail—quavered in the old man's tones. He stooped, plucked off a tender shoot from a sassafras sprout and stood chewing it meditatively.

"Yes, an' y'u ort' 'a' picked it up long b'fore. Y'u crossed it twice't b'fore ever y'u come down the bluffs—once't about a hundred yards west o' the pheasant's nest, an' ag'in a leetle no'th of whar y'u stood lookin' down at Hen Spencer's ol' cabin. Y'u didn't hardly act like y'urse'f this mornin'—y'u acted kinda keerless an' fur away, like—so I left the trail open a leetle thar at the road an' at the crick."

The young man turned away and stood gazing out across the brush-tangled hollow.

"And me thinkin' t' take by su'prise the famous ranger that found the trail of the great Tecumseh, when it was hid from the best of the runners," he said warmly—"and you was jist playin' with me."

At reference to the far-famed achievement of his younger days, the shoulders of the old hunter seemed to grow a little more erect, while his dark eyes glowed with a faint suggestion of the fire that in his prime had made them the hardest pair of eyes on the border to pass unseen.

"Well, not jist playin', nuther." He chewed hard on the sassafras sprout a moment. "You must 'a' purt nigh run into that gal a leetle bit ago?"

A statement with the force of a question—the young man started, but hid the movement by fumbling with his sore shoulder. The terrified face of the mountain girl freshened in his mind, with the dread of discovery in her startled eyes. He hitched the blouse loose from his shoulder and glanced out across the hollow without meeting his old friend's look.

"What gal?"

The old man jerked a hand toward the opposite bluff.

"Aw, I jist glimpsed one a-peakin' along through the brush yonder an' 'lowed mebbe y'u might 'a' run acrosst 'er."

He stood chewing the sassafras shoot and looking away down the hollow in the direction of Black rock. The young man breathed easier—the girl's secret was safe. The hawklike eyes had missed the chance meeting—seemingly the one thing they had missed, as his next words half startlingly disclosed.

"What did y'u make o' them tracks y'u foller'd yisterd'y—f'om them bushes on the edge o' the cliff back o' y'ur cabin an' past the ol' log? I see'd y'u'd be'n foller'n' 'em as I crossed the trail m'se'f this mornin'."

"I got a look at the man that made 'em," was his slow answer, "while he laid b'hind that log a-watchin' me straighten up the fence. I don't think he knows I saw 'im, but I did—it was the feller that stirred up all that rumpus at the schoolhouse night b'fore last."

The old man threw away his sassafras shoot; an eager seriousness crossed his face.

"That wus Black Bogus."

The younger man stared.

"No!"

"Hit were."

The woodsman fell suddenly thoughtful; glanced away across the hollow toward where the double trail led through the woods. The old man studied him curiously. It may be each was thinking the same thought—that strange resemblance that had so puzzled them both—but neither let fall any inkling of it to the other.

"Al knows 'im," Uncle Nick went on after a moment. "He's a friend of Loge Belden's—an' he thinks mebbe he's harborin' up thar with 'im."

"Anyhow, I thought I'd p'int m' nose up the crick an' kinda throw an eye on Loge's cabin t' see if 'e is."

"An' if 'e is—?" the other questioned, having caught the curious look.

The caution of a lifetime in the woods prompted the old hunter to look guardedly in every direction before answering.

"Don't let on y'u know it"—he came a step nearer—"but Al says Belden b'longs t' the same gang o' cutthroats down Vincennes way that Black Bogus does, an' he thinks more 'n likely they're plottin' t' crack ol' Sime Colin's safe."

The hardness that had come at the mountain girl's warning crept again into the woodsman's eyes, but he made no comment.

"I 'low y'u nee'n' t' be told they ain't neither one got much time f'r you, after what happened at the post office an' at the schoolhouse—an' they're the kind that won't stay licked, an' the kind that strikes in the dark."

Jack picked up the heavy shotgun from where he had laid it aside when about to rush upon his old friend, thoughtfully blew a dead grass blade out from between the hammer and the lock, but offered no word. The old man again bent his furtive look upon him and went on.

"Black Bogus—they's fifty sheriffs a-lookin' f'r him, an' a standin' reward of five thousan' dollars, dead 'r alive—"

The young man flinched, looked keenly at the other.

"Uncle Nick—y'u wouldn't—!"

"No, I wouldn't," the old man replied with instant readiness to the half-implied imputation. "I've shot men in my time. I never sold one."

He stepped around the great sugar maple, motioned for the other to follow, and stole away along the brow of the bluff, quite obviously in serious earnest.

The young woodsman fell into the trail. Steeped in the caution that came from much living alone, he said nothing, but it was the one thing that had brought him to the woods that morning—to have a look at Loge Belden's cabin.

Reaching a point, at length, a short distance below where the suspected cabin squatted, they crept down the bed of a dry wash-out and through some thickets of brier and hazel until they lay within less than a hundred yards of its crude and mud daubed walls.

There seemed to be no one about except the comely mountain girl, who came to the open door a time or two to look out, as if she expected some one—some one that she would rather not see, to judge by the troubled expression of her face—a face whose tragic sadness had so impressed the woodsman at that strained and hurried interview.

It was late in the forenoon when, above them on the hillside, they heard the swish of a brush swinging back into place after having been dragged aside. Uncle Nick held up a cautious finger, and they crouched lower in the cover.

There came the snap of a dry stick; a man emerged from the swaying bushes and stole toward the back door of the cabin, passing within a dozen steps of where they lay. There could be no mistaking the powerful form and truculent face with its stubble of beard—it was Black Bogus.

CHAPTER XII

Ashes of the Past.

It was little enough that the red-roofed cottage saw of the young preacher—breakfast by candle light; supper the same; an hour of twilight with Texie on the rustic seat at Whispering spring. The rest of the day he spent in the study at the parsonage, where, at the insistence of the venerable widow, he lunched. He proved to be a very studious man. It was a rare thing indeed to see him in daylight when his peering eyes were not poring over a book, with another usually tucked under his arm.

Jack Warhope had not yet climbed the bluffs to the woods on the morning of that eventful day that flared forth the startled face of the mountain girl with her hurried warning; its dawn still clung to cliff and scar, and many candles were still alight in the village, when the preacher left the parlor bedroom and came out on the porch.

Texie was already on the lawn, flitting about among the flowers and gathering a bouquet for the breakfast table.

She was like them—the flowers; as much a part of the rich life of the lawn as they. Life—it radiated from every curve of her pliant body; it was the one thought that came first to mind when looking on her. There were butterflies in the mellow glow already arched above the rim of the east and sifting in through the cool trees adrip with dew, but she was more alive than they.

At sight of her, a-tiptoe by a lilac bush and reaching up for one of its choicest blossoms, the studious concentration left the face of the man on the porch and there came over his features a curious sadness—a sadness touched with fire, as if within him had suddenly flared up some desperate battle of the soul.

The girl had heard the step on the porch. With the coveted blossom in her hand at last, she placed it with the others, and turned with a smile of sensible frankness.

The precise and studious concentration instantly returned to the eyes behind the spectacles, the stoop came back to the capable shoulders, and, with the quick, mincing step that was as much a part of him as the frock coat and neck stock, he came down off the porch and joined her.

With the stately and somewhat ponderous courtesy of seventy years ago, he had taken the shears, begging to be allowed to cut the flowers, when the slam of a gate drew their eyes to the back of the yard. The old banker was just coming from the barn, his step leaving the rumpled trail in the gray dew of the lawn, his rugged face apparently full of its accustomed strength and color.

"W'y, father, I expected you'd stay in bed a while this morning yet, after that—fainty spell the other night."

"Bed! No place f'r a well man after daylight"—he pulled himself up to the last inch of his gaunt height; stretched up his arms; filled his chest with the dew-washed air; expelled it with an explosive exclamation that scared a couple of blackbirds in the branches above; and the crags and battlements of his grim old face smoothed themselves out into an expression as near as they could come to a smile—"an' I am a well man—fit as a fiddle."

"But, father, you don't think of goin' to the—office t'day?"

"Aw, I reckon y'u'd all r'ar up if I did."

"I'm so glad—and won't it be nice t' have y'u at home all day ag'in! I wish y'u never would go back t' that horrid ol' office ag'in."

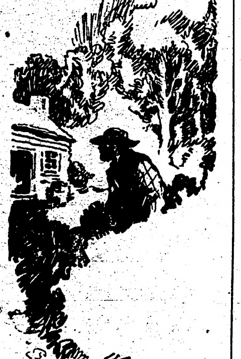
"You're a good gal, Texie. I dunno what y'ur ol' father would do without y'u, now that—that—"

He stopped; let his eyes stray up the river and far into the east, all flushed and spangled with the close coming of the sun; the girl bent her head; the preacher stood fumbling the shears in his hand.



A Man Emerged From the Swaying Bushes and Stole Toward the Back Door of the Cabin.

"Mebbe I will quit the office one o' these days."

His eyes were still lost in the east; he spoke as if his heart was there. His daughter raised her head and searched his face.

"You alw'ys say that, but y'u never do."

"I dunno, better walk out than be carried out, they say, an' I've come almighty nigh that very thing a time 'r two—heap nigher"—he brought his eyes back out of the east, noticed the hurt on his daughter's face and patted her shoulder.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

SERIOUS FACTS

WHEN we mortals turn from the beaten track and find that we are at a place where we must pause and meditate upon the serious facts confronting us, we are frequently inclined to become ill-humored and illogical.

A sort of mental strabismus darkens our vision and numbs our bodies, caused in a large measure by our disinclination to touch upon anything of a serious nature. We dislike to go afield among the dark shadows where the ghosts of the past are lurking.

The open sunshine is always preferable for the reason that it dissipates doubt and permits us to see clearly without effort.

Indeed, the great majority of our relatives, and ourselves included, prefer the frivolous to the profound. We incline to touch lightly, to grasping with all our strength.

We fall at once into the state of the school boy when the trees are budding and the air is soft and warm. He tosses a dependable coin to decide whether he shall take his place in the classroom among serious teachers, and still more serious books.

He returns home at night with a string of fish, a new freckle or two, and goes early to bed, brooding over the seriousness of his plight. He will remember for life when he is told on the morrow that it is the serious men and women who do things. He will tell you that had Sir Isaac Newton not been the serious-minded man he was, the fall of an apple would not have revealed to him the law of gravitation.

What the thoughtless term "good luck," if you will look into the matter deeply, may be traced to serious thought. You may con your Greek verbs, or play hide and seek with your Latin, but if you are not really serious in your studies you can never master them.

To move forward day by day in your sphere of endeavor requires the quality of seriousness that made Washington so dearly beloved by his armies, and gave to Lincoln an enduring name.

To the serious-minded, earnest persons, the world is indebted for its greatest inventions and loftiest achievements.

We want a little more seriousness in our work, and decidedly less dejection, and when we get it, paradoxical though it may seem, we shall be more cheerful and infinitely happier.

THE ROMANCE OF WORDS

"ENGINE"

READERS of Chaucer who are none too familiar with the medieval meaning of the word "engine" have naturally been puzzled over the statement by the English writer that "Man hath sapiences thre: memorie, engin and intellect."

But it should be remembered that this word, formed from the Greek gignere, "to beget," and the Latin ingenium, was understood as late as the Eighteenth century to mean talent or wit—practically a synonym for "ingenuity" which is derived from the same word-root. So, for example, in Puttenham, we come across the line "Such made most of their works by translation, few of their own engine," while the additional meaning of "temper" is apparent from the quotation from Fairfax's Tasso, "His fell ingine his grayer age did somewhat mitigate."

About the Sixteenth century the word began to take on the sense of the product of one's ingenuity, rather than the skill itself and was widely applied to any appliance or machine used in warfare, hunting, the commercial arts or torture. Thus a catapult, a cross-bow, a spinning wheel and a rack were all generically referred to as "engines" and it was not until the early part of the last century that the word was used in the currently accepted sense.

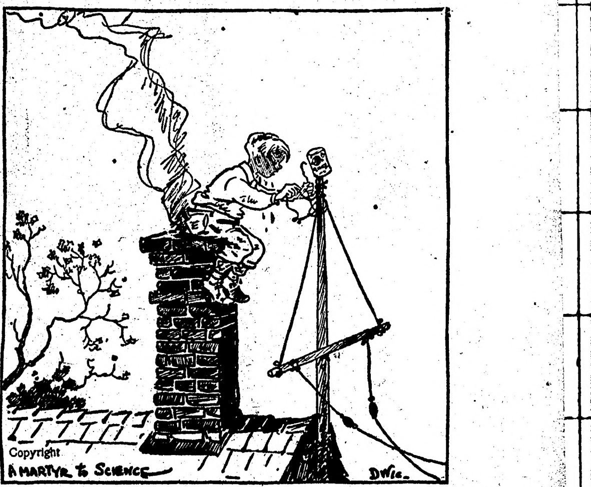
SCHOOL DAYS



THE MORE THE DISHES

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

MY MOTHER'S mother when she got
A dinner up was glad to do it;
She liked to entertain a lot,
And plenty came, for plenty knew it.
A Sunday meal, a Christmas Day,
Were right according to her wishes,
And yet she always used to say,
"The more the meal, the more the dishes."

She didn't say it to complain
But more to stop the rest complaining;
When they were tired enough to faint,
With still the kitchen things remaining,
"This ain't," she nearly always said,
"No miracle of loaves and fishes;
And, if you want to have a spread,
The more the meal, the more the dishes."

And I have noticed all along
Through life that wealth is like a dinner;
You've got to labor good and strong,
You've got to work to be a winner;
And, after you have got your gold,
Man seldom finds the ease he wishes;
You've got to work your wealth to hold—
The more the meal, the more the dishes.

Mother's Cook Book

There is no mystery about happiness whatever. Put in the right ingredients and it must come out.

We may encourage others by our faith and cheer, but we have no right to dishearten them by doubt and gloom.

FOOD FOR THE FAMILY

THERE are all sorts of bread puddings and when well prepared are delicious. Here is:

Another Bread Pudding.

Take two cupfuls of bread crumbs, a cupful of sugar, a cupful of molasses, a half cupful of raisins, a dash of cinnamon and two cupfuls of sweet milk. Bake half an hour, stirring often, then add four cupfuls of milk and bake two hours longer. Serve hot.

Pineapple Salad.

Mix diced pineapple with equal parts of diced celery and half the quantity of shredded almonds. Serve in nests of head lettuce with mayonnaise dressing.

Ginger Bread.

Take one cupful of sugar, one cupful of molasses, one-half cupful of melted lard, one teaspoonful of soda in one cupful of boiling water, one egg, three cupfuls of flour. Beat the egg, add the sugar, lard and molasses with a teaspoonful of salt and a tablespoonful of ginger, then add the three cupfuls of flour and when well-mixed add the boiling water and soda. Stir well and pour into a large dripping pan. Bake forty minutes.

Spinach With Cream.

Wash three pounds of spinach and put to cook in a large saucepan; cook, stirring occasionally, twelve minutes; then put through a fine sieve, saving all the liquor; add four tablespoonfuls of butter and pepper and salt to taste, cook for fifteen minutes, then add three tablespoonfuls of cream; mix well and pile in the center of a dish with croutons surrounding the spinach.

Has Anyone Laughed At You Because—

By ETHEL R. PEYSER

You always read the advertisements first?

People have probably pestered you and said you were not literary but "all business." Lackaday! they know little, those laughers! Ads today are really more literary than story-text. More time is taken in their making, more censorship in their publication, more brains (very often) in their building. Ads are nearly always faithfully illustrated where stories have illustrations that may not match their contents. Stick to your ad reading; you will learn about industry, art, prices, costs, inventions, and far more than most stories tell you.

MOTHER-HEART WILL HOLD ALL

By GERTRUDE BURNHAM

(©, 1924, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

THE children's voices came clearly to Edith Vane's ears from the playroom across the hall. The sound of her step-daughter's imperious little treble sent a slight frown over her smooth forehead, and she lost count of the pile of shining linens which she had been sorting and checking. The voice was so like that of the child's dead mother that it brought the latter to Edith's mind. Pretty, extravagant Alice. Her hold even in life had been slight, and now it would seem that she might be irrevocably done with.

Edith knew that behind Austin's first marriage had lain complications of propinquity, loneliness and artful scheming. That was all in the past, but Alice's fragile, porcelain-like beauty lived on in little Barbara. Mentally the child was wholly Austin, and Edith gloried in that fact; but although she had scrupulously fulfilled her duties toward the child, she still winced when she looked into her blue eyes and heard her voice.

There lay between the woman and child a barrier of the spirit which time was rearing higher and stronger. Barbara was most tractable, but at times there lurked in her eyes a curious questioning look which disquieted Edith. The stepmother really wanted to like this straightforward, valiant mite, and the reasoning part of her acknowledged that she was a darling; but another part of her fought that knowledge with unreasoning strength.

Presently the tenor of the conversation in the playroom intruded upon her thought. Two of the neighborhood playmates were visiting Babbie, their chief concern at present being with a heart-shaped box of candies of similar shape.

Babbie was scrupulously dividing the contents of the box. "Five for Ruth, five for Helen and four for me."

"But," objected Helen, "you haven't so many as we."

"I have the box," said Barbara, holding it up. She was suddenly inspired. "Let's name all the hearts!" she cried.

The children seized upon the suggestion gleefully. "You first, Ruth," said Helen.

"No, let Babbie do it first, because she thought of it." And so it was settled.

Barbara began, pointing with an eloquent finger as she named. "Father, Mother Edith, Aunt Francis, Cousin Anne." Then she held the box up and announced impressively, "And this is my Mother-Heart."

"You named one for your mother before," said literal Ruth.

"No, I didn't. That was for Mother Edith, but this is for my truly mother."

"Your own mother is dead," Helen stated an undeniable fact.

"Yes, I know," answered Babbie soberly. "She's my Heaven-Mother, waiting there for me, while Mother Edith is my Earth-Mother, taking care of me here. Mother Edith told me all about it and she is as nice as she can be."

Edith felt a throb of gratification. She had scrupulously kept green in the child's mind all memory of her mother, teaching her love and reverence. She listened absorbedly to the conversation, quite unashamed of eavesdropping.

"Well, I don't think your Mother Edith is so very nice to you sometimes," remarked Ruth. "She wouldn't let you have that dress for the party when you asked her."

Barbara's voice trembled as she answered this all-too-true statement. "I know it, and I asked her just as nice as ever I could and I've been pretty good lately. She prob'ly had a good reason though," she ended loyally.

The play ran briskly on to less personal allusions and Edith became ruefully conscious of the fact that she had accomplished practically nothing that afternoon. She was starting downstairs when Barbara's voice arrested her again.

"I'm not going to eat my hearts now. The Mother-Heart will hold them all until I want them. There's a lot of room in it."

Standing with a foot poised over the stair, Edith Vane learned the greatest lesson of her life from the lips of a child. The true Mother-Heart was always large enough to "hold them all," those little hearts. Poor, loyal Babbie had mutely asked for a place in it and had been refused. With a sudden rush of tenderness Edith knew that things were to be far different in the future.

That night after she had tucked Babbie into bed she did not peck coolly at her cheek before snapping off the light, according to her usual custom. Instead, she knelt beside the bed and smoothed back the child's soft hair.

"Tomorrow, dear," she said softly, "after school we will go to look for the new party dress. Mother Edith saw one the other day that was all soft net and rosebuds. Will you like that?"

Childhood does not long remember past hurts, and Babbie answered with the warm light in her eyes and the pressure of her little arms. In that instant Edith felt that the hateful barrier of misunderstanding and jealousy swept away. Presently Barbara drew from under her pillow something which she tendered sleepily, but lovingly, to her stepmother. As Edith took it from the small, moist palm, she saw that it was the Mother-Heart box, symbol of that true Mother-Heart, long-repressed and denied which had at last come into its own.

Chapter 223 Sec. 7, Session Laws of Minnesota for 1917

Reconsideration upon complaint-appeal-

Upon complaint being made to the county attorney by a taxpayer of the county that any person is unlawfully receiving an allowance out of the county funds on account of an alleged dependent child it shall be the duty of the county attorney to investigate such complaint and if he finds it to have probable cause to bring it to the attention of the court by appropriate proceedings. The Court shall hear such evidence and argument as shall be offered and shall thereupon make its order confirming, modifying or setting aside the order complained of, from which decision an appeal may be taken as in a civil action.

Come out to-night and cheer for your men's basket ball team.

The Newfolden basket ball team are coming to Holt to-night to play our men's team and everyone should turn out as a good game is assured.

The creamery officials and buttermaker went to Thief River Falls Wednesday to attend a convention of the co-operative creameries of the 14th. district.

I have for sale the Frank Coppay place near Holt. Will sell on easy terms, or give liberal discount for cash. Address G. B. K., W. 513 Sixth ave, Spokane, Wash.

The Holt basket ball girls played a good game with the Badger girls last Thursday night. The game was well played all through and was hard fought from start to finish. The score was 2 to 6 in favor of the visitors. Prof. Haun refereed the game to the satisfaction of everyone.

A big crowd attended the entertainment given by the commercial club Saturday night and it was necessary to show the pictures twice to accomodate all who wished to see them. They did not prove to be all that was expected of them as they did not contain all of the pageant as given at Crookston. The singing and music was fine and was enjoyed by all.

If you like to see a red hot game of basket ball, dont fail to see the game to-night, in the hall, between the men's team of Holt and Newfolden.

A big crowd attended the play Friday night given by the Newfolden Dramatic Club. Everyone seemed well pleased with the play and we are quite sure that our people will be looking forward for their next one. Each person was well trained and seemed particularly fitted to play their respective parts. Much credit is due Prof. Haun for his painstaking work as coach for the players.

We have the agency for the Model Steam Laundry and we are in a position to take care of all your laundry. All laundry must be in by Wednesday noon. Basket returns on Saturday. O. E. Sovde, the Barber.

The 1922 patrons listed as delivering more than a thousand lbs of butterfat numbered 37, with an average of 1416 pounds of butterfat. This year the number increased to 45 patrons with an average of 1615 pounds of butterfat. This average increase of approximately 200 lbs., is most significant, for the reason that it has come through better breeding, feeding and care of the cow, and not so much in increasing the number of cows.

We have the number of cows to produce twice as much butterfat, but the big thing to do now is to find out what cows are boarders, and not giving you any profit, and get rid of them, then breed up the herd you have and dont forget the feed and care that goes with it in order to make your best cow pay you a profit. We have the names of patrons listed above that have cows giving 250 lbs and more of butterfat for the year. These are the kind of cows that will give you a profit above all cost of feed and labor. Why not feed a good cow and take care of her? It takes almost as much time to take care of a poor cow that never pays for her feed.

A Strong Bank Made Stronger

THE GOVERNMENT of this bank and the MANAGEMENT of its affairs is vested in a Board of Five Directors consisting of two dirt farmers, two bankers, and the manager of the local creamery.

We are pleased to announce to our People the addition of three new members to our Board of Directors, namely: Louis Wegge, P. L. Anderson and Fred D. Voth. These men are well known to all of you as conservative, capable and successful men. They need no introduction. They understand thoroughly the needs of the people and the advice and management which they are capable of giving is most valuable to our institution.

SAFETY to our DEPOSITORS is the first consideration in the management of this bank. Loans and Discounts, which constitute the "back bone" of the bank, are carefully examined once every month. Officers and directors are at all times in close touch with the affairs of their institution.

The Public is invited to feel at home with us. Make this bank your Financial Headquarters. We ask for your confidence and support. Your Welfare is our Welfare.

Our Business System

For the benefit of all our patrons, it should be of interest to them to know our method and system of doing business.

We pay according to quality, 3 cents more per pound for the butterfat in first grade cream. All shareholders receive an 8 per cent dividend on shares of $25 00, which means $2.00 every year for each share. Besides the dividend, shareholders receive one-half cent more per pound for butterfat than non-shareholdes, regardless of whether they are monthly or cash patrons. To illustrate what this amounts to, let us figure what the amount would be on our largest patron for 1923. His total pounds of butterfat was 3593, times one-half cent equcals $17.96, plus a $2 00 dividend would make the extra amount, by being a shareholder, the neat sum of $19.96. Shareholders are part owners of the creamery, have a vote and something to say at the annual meetings, can hold office and help all the rest of the shareholders in making this the best creamery in the northwest. We are the biggest in the county, let us hold our own. It is advertising of this kind that shows others what is being done in the vicinity of Holt.

100,000 PEOPLE PRAISE TANLAC FOR ITS MERIT

World's Greatest Tonic Is Endorsed by People Grateful for the Relief It Has Given Them.

Actuated by a deep sense of gratitude and desire to help their suffering neighbors, more than 100,000 well-known men and women have offered their personal experiences as proof of the wonderful health-giving powers of TANLAC, the World's Greatest Tonic.

Throughout each and every one of this long list of testimonials rings the spirit of earnest sincerity which charterizes the following excerpts:

Mrs. D. J. Pritchard, Cleveland, Ohio: "People wanting to know what TANLAC will do may communicate with me. It increased my weight 32 lbs. and brought me the very help I longed for."

J. H. Taylor, Memphis, Tenn.: "To me TANLAC was just like a good friend—gave me help when I needed help most."

Mrs. Mary Schumaker, Racine, Wis.: "Every year at the change of seasons a course of TANLAC makes me eat with a relish, restores my strength and leaves me in splendid health."

Judge George P. Wagnes, Police Magistrate, Belleville, Ill.: "That I am enjoying such fine health now I can attribute only to the help I received from TANLAC."

Mrs. C. K. Sellers, Springfield, Mo.: "Since taking TANLAC I enjoy the blessing of perfect health and have the complexion of a schoolgirl."

V. E. Ferry, age 73, Seattle, Wash.: "TANLAC built my weight up 21 lbs., rid me of fifteen years' stomach trouble, and left me feeling many years younger."

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

THE THOROUGH MAN

WE WHO by habit are inclined to fritter away our time should give close attention to the thorough man and strive to emulate his worthy efforts. Give heed to him as he confronts his task in the morning, whether it be at the anvil, behind the counter, at the desk or at the head of a great industry.

Observe the decisive directness with which he makes his approach, equipped mentally and physically to drive ahead at a gait that is maintained until the close of the day.

He knows what he wants to do and does it without hesitation.

He is every inch a thorough man. He knows it and those about him know it. He untangles obstinate skeins, settles disputes and goes through stone walls without bluster. He permits nothing to annoy or disconcert him. His "yes" and "no" cut to the core, but they never exhibit anger.

About the only emotion he shows is his intensity of purpose, which in some subtle manner stirs the most phlegmatic soul within his presence to renewed activity.

He weighs his acts before he sends them out to do his bidding, having as a result no listless fear of the outcome.

Never disinclined to learn he is ever studying new ideas, getting new slants on old problems, shortening distances between starting points and the goal he visualizes in the distance.

At his first shot he may miss the mark, but he comes back with a larger quiver of arrows, a stronger bow and keeps shooting until he scores a clean hit.

He does not scold wrongdoers when they frankly repent, but rather praises the moral courage that admits the truth. This is the thorough man who knows his duty to himself and others, who achieves and attains while the irresolute look on abashed. If you ask him, he will tell you that his willpower and patience and endurance are given him by "faith in the substance of things hoped for, and the evidence of things not seen."

THE ONE WHO WON

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

TWO there were upon a quest:
One went east, and one went west;
One was rich, and one was poor,
One the highroad, one the moor.

One of them (no matter which,
Maybe poor, or maybe rich,
One with wealth, or one with not,
Road or moor, no matter what).

One of them, who trudged along,
As he traveled, sang a song,
Smiled to see the sun again,
Played with snow, and laughed at rain.

One of them found many things
All along to give him wings,
Morning-glory, whippoorwill,
Often helped him up the hill.

One of them, I'm sad to say,
Traveled quite another way,
Cursed the rocks, and cursed the road,
Ev'ry labor, ev'ry load.

One of them, (no matter whom,
Man of gladness, man of gloom,
Man of wealth, or man of naught),
Found at last the thing he sought.

One of them (no matter which,
On the highroad, in the ditch)
Found the thing he sought, although
Which it was I do not know.

One of them, I know at least,
Found work fun, and life a feast,
If he won, or if he lost,
Found the journey worth the cost.

Two there were. Whichever came,
Wealth or want, or failure, fame,
Good or bad, or right or wrong,
One at least had had the song.

THE ROMANCE OF WORDS

"FRANK"

WHEN we say that a person is "frank" we are understood as meaning that he is candid, open in his manner and straightforward in his dealings, a meaning which, at least, in its metaphorical sense, goes back to the powerful German tribe of the Franks, the word meaning "free" or "unconquered."

The Franks were the ruling people, honorably distinguished from the Gauls and the degenerate Romans of their time by their independence, their love of freedom and their scorn of duplicity. In short, they possessed the virtues which belong to a conquering and dominant race in the midst of an inferior and conquered one. It was for this reason that the word "frank" came by degrees to mean not merely a national but a moral distinction. A man who was frank did not necessarily belong to the Teutonic tribes bearing that name, but he was one who possessed certain moral qualities—the words "franchise" and "enfranchisement" being derived from the same root, as is the verb "to frank," meaning to send matter through the mail free of charge.

ROAD BUILDING

GEOLOGISTS REDUCE ROAD-BUILDING COSTS

How the cost of building Wisconsin state trunk highways is being materially reduced by the field investigations made by geologists, especially through the hunting out and using of local materials, is pointed out by E. F. Bean, assistant state geologist and former professor in the University of Wisconsin, in an article on "Economic Geology and Highway Construction," which has been published as a reprint from Economic Geology.

The increased use of local materials which has been developed by the geologists' road-material investigations has not only reduced the cost of construction materially but has greatly decreased the use of railway cars for hauling road materials, he points out.

Many university geology students have devoted their summers to the geological end of highway work and this, he points out, greatly extended the scope of this work. From the students' point of view, summer field work in connection with highway building has furnished a wide range of field experience.

The first step in the geologist's investigation is to determine what types of road material are available locally for that particular project. He then recommends such local material as may be used to save freight charges or truck haul. Detailed reports are made on the results of the investigations, and estimates are also furnished on the quantity of material available, conditions of quarrying rock or getting out gravel and transportation problems. The aim of such studies is to furnish good road construction at the lowest cost possible without sacrificing service and efficiency.

"In addition to the financial saving, the use of local material has a direct bearing on the problem of rail transportation," Mr. Bean writes. "The use of local road materials relieves the railroad of this additional load and liberates cars for the use of coal and other commodities, and in addition prevents expensive delays in highway construction."

Construction of Modern Automobile Roads Gains

That the construction of modern automobile roads and paved streets in this country is gaining in volume year by year is shown by statistics just announced by Highways Information Service, New York. The figures show also that highway contracts awarded during the second half of the year average in volume only about 25 per cent less than those let during the first half and that there is not a month of the year in which a large amount of construction is not under contract.

In 1920 a total of $530,848,000 in new road construction was awarded in this country. In 1921 the amount was $630,712,000, an increase of $99,864,000 over 1920. Last year contracts were awarded to the amount of $669,428,000, an increase of $38,716,000 over 1921 and $138,280,000 over 1920. From January 1 to June 1, this year, a total of $384,774,000 was placed under contract. At this rate new highways for which contracts will be let during 1923 will cost approximately $794,000,000, a gain of about $125,000,000 over 1922.

Highway System to Meet Big Demands of Traffic

The federal highway system is indicative of the determination of the American people to have a highway system consistent with the demands of the traffic. The system will include nearly 180,000 miles of the most important roads of the United States, so located as to form a complete network of main interstate and intercounty roads. When completed it will tie together practically every city and town of 5,000 population or greater, and a ten-mile zone on each side of the roads will include the homes of 90 per cent of the population of the United States. To encourage the early completion of this system, all federal appropriations will hereafter be spent only on roads which form a part of the system.

Pan-American Study of Good Road Construction

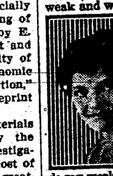
Each of the Latin-American republics is to be invited to send a representative to study the road building and transportation system of the United Sates. This was decided on at a meeting in Washington of officials of the Departments of Commerce and Agriculture, the Pan-American Union and Inter-American High commission and representatives of the motor industry. The investigation is preliminary to a Pan-American motor road conference.

Good Highways Develop Peru Mines and Farms

"The touring car and auto truck are rapidly replacing the burro and pack mule which have for centuries carried supplies from the sea coast up, and products of the Sierra down, reducing the cost of transportation by more than half," says the West Coast Leader, Lima, Peru. "The recently improved Trujillo-Quiruvilca highway is developing the region between these two cities in mining and agriculture."

ALL WOMEN WHO WORK

Should Know how this Worker was Made Strong and Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound



Zahl, N. Dakota.—"I was nervous and weak and was not regular. I also had pains frequently. I was sickly for seven years and finally had a nervous breakdown following an operation. I am a dressmaker and milliner, and a lady I work for told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I am taking it and it has made me well and able to do my work again. I have even helped take care of a sick neighbor recently, so you can see how fit I am. I highly praise your medicine and you may use my letter as you see fit. I hope it will help some other woman."—Mrs. OLE NORDLEIN, Box 23, Zahl, North Dakota.

Over 121,000 women have so far replied to our question, "Have you received benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?"

98 per cent. of these replies answer "Yes."

This means that 98 out of every 100 women taking this medicine for ailments for which it is recommended are benefited by it. For sale by all druggists.

Blood Stain Lasts Ages

How long will a blood stain last? A British scientist has discovered the fossil remains of a mammoth buried untold ages ago. The sand under the fossil was stained black and was cemented together with iron, forming a dark patch which did not extend far beyond the limits of the bone. He suggests that the stain was due to iron in blood which oozed out of the meat and bone of the defunct mammoth.

Okapi a Rare Animal

The "okapi," to obtain a specimen of which an American expedition is now on its way to Africa, is a very rare animal, first discovered in Uganda by the explorer Sir Harry Johnston. The animal is about the size of a large ox. The coloration is, perhaps unique among animals. The body is of a reddish color, the hair is short and the appearance of the hide is extremely glossy. The hind quarters and legs are of a cream color and striped like those of the zebra.

THE SPRINGTIME GREENS

IT IS well to be forehanded in planning for the early spring vegetables and greens. Too often the season is past before we realize how much we have missed by not serving often the common weeds and greens of the wayside. The piquant appetizing watercress may be found all winter on the banks of running brooks. One should eat freely of this splendid green; its peppery flavor makes it very tasty served with lamb chops and eaten with just a dash of salt. As a salad with a sliced radish and onion and a highly-seasoned French dressing it is especially well liked.

Dandelion greens are well known. Those who have tried them have found such tender morsels under protecting boards or hidden from the light—the white bleached dandelions—which, served with chopped onion and any kind of salad dressing are truly worth while.

Another dressing to be used over the fresh uncooked greens is:

Dutch Dressing.

Wash and drain one pint of tender greens, cut into two-inch pieces. Cut two ounces of bacon into small cubes and fry until crisp and brown. Beat one egg until light; add two tablespoonfuls of sugar, one-quarter of a tablespoonful of salt, one-third of a cupful of water, one-quarter of a cupful of vinegar. Pour this mixture into a frying pan with the bacon; mix well, stirring constantly until thickened. It should be about of the consistency of cream. Pour hot over the greens and serve at once.

The tender onions, the multipliers, are early, full of mineral salts and vitamines which are needed to keep the body in good health.

The poke in the South, the milkweed stalks in the North, cooked just as they first come up, are tender, nicely flavored and as tasty a dish as much of the early asparagus.

Dock and wild mustard make very good cooked greens, as well as the sheep sorrel and ragweed so common in the field. Lamb's quarters cooked with dandelion greens have flavor as well as variety.

Asparagus With Buttered Crumbs.

Boil a bunch of asparagus. Place on a platter. In a saucepan put four tablespoonfuls of butter, one-half cupful of fresh bread crumbs; fry a deep brown. Sprinkle over the asparagus, with salt, pepper and minced parsley. Garnish with sliced, hard-cooked eggs. Serve with melted butter.

Cause of Losses to Pea Canners

Seed of Right Variety Is One of Most Important Considerations.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

One of the most important considerations in the commercial growing of peas for canning is seed of the right variety, as a few plants of the wrong kind may ruin the entire pack, says the United States Department of Agriculture. The Alaska variety, which is the basis of a very large percentage of the acreage used for canning purposes, must be kept reasonably pure if the crop is to be grown at a profit, and no matter how good the seed is otherwise, if there is a small percentage of peas known as Bangalias, the crop will be undesirable for canning because of the discoloration produced by this variety.

Test Samples of Seed.

During the past two years the department has collected samples of seed of canning peas on the open market and grown them side by side in trial grounds; some surprising facts regarding the quality of the seed have been brought out. In 1923 the growing tests of Alaska peas comprised 219 samples, and of these 11 proved to be true to name with no off-type plants. Sixteen samples were off-type only in the slightly greater length of vine, while the production and character of the pods would admit them for canning purposes; 67 samples showed less than 10 plants per rod of row of off-type peas and vines. Of the remainder there were 51 samples which showed from 10 to 25 plants per rod having long vines not characteristic of the Alaska variety. The samples which had more than 25 plants per rod of long vines numbered 39, while 35 samples were either not Alaskas or were so-called "wild Alaskas" or field peas. Of all the 219 samples, 4.6 per cent were high-grade Alaskas, 7.4 per cent showed only off-type vines, and 81.1 per cent had less than 10 plants per rod off-type in character. Of these samples, 94 could be used for canning purposes, but 125 were such decided departures that they could not be successfully handled in commercial plantings.

Results of 1923 Tests.

The results of the tests in 1923 paralleled those of 1922 and it is believed these tests give a good index of the character of the seed being offered to the trade by many seedsmen. The requirements of the commercial growers are very much more exacting than those of the market gardener or home gardener. The planting of extensive acreages of spurious or off-type Alaska peas has resulted in great losses in the eastern part of the canning area. In some cases the pack has been absolutely ruined by the presence of a small percentage of Bangalias, which discolor the liquid in the cans.

The only insurance against such losses is high-grade seed true to varietal type.

Eradication of Cattle Tuberculosis Costs Less

In the eradication of cattle tuberculosis it is now possible to get better use out of the money expended than ever before, according to the experience of the veterinarians carrying on the campaign for the United States Department of Agriculture. During the past year the average cost per head of testing cattle under government supervision was 35 cents, a reduction of 11 cents from the figure of the preceding year. This reduction, which was brought about largely through the spread of the area testing plan, makes it possible to advance much more rapidly with the eradication work. Most of the areas in which all of the cattle have been tested at one time are counties, and counties free of cattle tuberculosis may now be found in nearly all parts of the country from the Atlantic to the Pacific to the Gulf. Every one of the four corners of the country has at least one free county or one in which a campaign is now being carried on. Up near the extremity of Maine is Piscataquis county; in southwestern Arizona is Maricopa county; Island county, Wash., is free; and work is just starting to make the final clean-up in Dade county, Fla.

Planted in Spring Hairy Vetch Acts as Biennial

Winter vetch is a name sometimes applied by American seedsmen to hairy vetch. The term winter vetch, however, should not be applied to hairy vetch, as it is properly applied to the winter strains of common vetch.

If planted in the spring hairy vetch acts as a biennial and does not mature seed the first season. If the crop is to be kept on the land two seasons spring seeding is advised in the northern states. From 20 to 25 pounds to the acre is a heavy seeding. As a rule only 3 to 5 bushels of seed to the acre are secured, though occasionally yields as high as 10 to 11 bushels have been reported.

Hogging Down Soy Beans

In recent years there has been quite an increase in the acreage of soy beans for hay, for seed, and for hogging down purposes. It is grown much more extensively for hogging down purposes than for hay or grain, but its popularity as a hay plant is increasing as farmers become better acquainted with it.

Origin of Honeydew Melon.

The original seed of the honeydew melon is said to have been obtained from a melon shipped from Africa to New York city. The seed was planted at Rocky Ford, Colo., and crossed with other varieties for two or three seasons. The so-called honey-dew melon is the result. As yet this melon has not been brought into a stable condition of reproduction.

Which said mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said Holt State Bank, Mortgagee to Deposit Bank of Winona, by written assignment dated March 1st, 1921, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County, Minnesota on the 2nd day of March, 1921, at 8 o'clock A. M., in Book 98 of Mortgages, on page 300.

Which said mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said Deposit Bank of Winona to Samuel Dilliard, by written assignment dated January 3rd, 1920, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County, Minnesota, on the 31st day of January, 1924, at 11 o'clock A. M., in Book 110 of Mortgages, on page 234,

And whereas, the said Samuel Dilliard, the assignee and holder of said mortgage has duly elected and does hereby elect to declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice, under the terms and conditions of said mortgage and the Power of Sale therein contained, and whereas there is actually due and claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of Forty-five Hundred ($4500.00) Dollars, with accumulated interest from the 22nd day of October, 1920, at the rate of six and one-half per cent per annum; and whereas, the said Power of Sale has become operative and no action or proceedings having been instituted at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

NOW, THEREFORE, Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the Power of Sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and covered by said mortgage, viz:

The East Half of Northeast Quarter, Section Thirty-three and Northwest Quarter of Section Thirty-four, in Township One Hundred Fifty-six North, of Range Forty-two West of the Fifth Principal Meridian, in Marshall County and State of Minnesota.

Which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Marshall County at the Front door of the County Court House, in the City of Warren, in said County and State on the 25th day of March, 1924, at 11 o'clock A. M. of that day at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash, to pay the amount then due on said mortgage and interest and all delinquent taxes, together with the costs and disbursements of such sale and Seventy-five Dollars attorney's fees stipulated in said mortgage, in case of foreclosure.

Dated February 5, 1924.

In King Tut's Time.

Folks in King Tut's time were not so slow. Carl Mitman, in cataloguing the ship models in his department of the Smithsonian Institution, points out that Egyptians built boat hulls of the correct form for speed nearly 4000 years before modern scientific designers arrived at the same conclusions. Vikings had the right idea and Malay pirates had the waveline theory of construction down to perfection when English and American sailboats were clumsy tubs.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale

Notice is hereby given, that default has been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage containing a Power of Sale, by reason of which default said Power of Sale has become operative and the Assignee of the Mortgagee hereinafter named is authorised to and does hereby declare the whole sum secured by said mortgage to be due and payable and exercises the Power of Sale aforesaid; that said mortgage was executed by Clarence Larson and Bertha Larson, his wife, and Engebret S. Moe, a single man, Mortgagors to Holt State Bank, a Minnesota corporation, Mortgagee, and dated October 2nd, 1919 and filed for record in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County, Minnesota on the 22nd day of October, A. D. 1919 at 8 o'clock A. M. and was then and there duly recorded in Book 93 of Mortgages, on page 381,

Which mortgage was by the said Holt State Bank duly assigned to Deposit Bank of Winona, a Minnesota corporation, by written assignment dated October 28th, 1919 and which assignment was filed for record in the office of the Register of Deeds, in said County of Marshall on the 26th day of November, A. D. 1919 at 1 o'clock P. M. and was then and there duly recorded in Book 90 of Mortgages, on page 594;

And which mortgage was duly assigned by Deposit Bank of Winona, a Minnesota corporation, to Deposit Bank & Trust Company, a Minnesota corporation, by written assignment dated July 30th, 1923, which assignment was filed for record in the office of the Register of Deeds in said Marshall County on the 26th day of January, A. D. 1924 at 11 o'clock A. M. and duly recorded in Book 110 of Mortgages, on page 233.

That the amount claimed to be due and which is due on said mortgage at this date is Three Thousand Three Hundred Sixty and no-100 Dollars, with interest on $3180.00 thereof from the 2nd day of October 1922 and interest on $180.00 thereof from the 2nd day of October 1923 at six per cent per annum; that the premises described in and covered by said mortgage are situated in the County of Marshall and State of Minnesota and described as follows, viz:

The East Half of the Southeast Quarter (E1-2SE1-4) of Section Thirty three (33) in Township One Hundred Fifty six (156) North of Range Forty two (42) West of the Fifth Principal Meridian, Lot Four (4) of Section Three (3), Lots One and Two of Section Four (4), and Lot Five (5) of Section Three (3) in Township One Hundred Fifty five (155) North of Range Forty two [42] West of the Fifth Principal Meridian.

That by virtue of the Power of Sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be foreclosed by the sale of said described premises at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash by the Sheriff of said County of Marshall, at the Front door of the County Court House, in the City of Warren, in said County, on Tuesday the 1st day of April 1924 at 2:30 o'clock P. M. to satisfy the amount then due on said mortgage and Five Hundred Six and 33-100 Dollars for taxes paid on said described premises, with interest thereon from the 2nd day of February 1924 at six per cent per annum, together with the costs of such sale and Seventy-five Dollars attorneys fees stipulated in said mortgage.

Breadfruit.

The breadfruit, with the coconut and banana, furnishes the chief food of the natives of the Pacific islands. That is why we call it "breadfruit," because, for them, it takes the place of bread. Apart from its fruit, the tree itself is a very useful one, for, when beaten out, the inner bark forms a fine white cloth called tapa cloth.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of Four Hundred Twenty-nine Dollars ($429.00), which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain Mortgage duly executed and delivered by Alfred Larson and Lillie Larson, his wife, Mortgagors, to Deposit Trust and Savings Bank, Mortgagee, bearing date the 3rd day of November, 1920, and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Marshall and State of Minnesota on the 12th day of November, 1920, at 8:00 o'clock A. M., in Book 97 of Mortgages, on page 629; which said Mortgage together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said Deposit Trust and Savings Bank, Mortgagee, to Mrs. Julia B. Witherbee by written assignment dated the 14th day of January, 1921, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds, on the 12th day of January, 1924, at 8:00 o'clock A. M., in Book 110 of Mortgages, on page 215;

And Whereas, The said Mrs. Julia B. Witherbee, the Assignee and Holder of said Mortgage, has duly elected and does hereby elect to declare the whole principal sum of said Mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice, under the terms and conditions of said Mortgage and the power of sale therein contained; and whereas there is actually due and claimed to be due and payable at the date of this notice the sum of Two Thousand Nine Hundred Seventy-seven and 46-100 Dollars ($2,077.46); which said amount includes the sum of Two Hundred Ninety-one and 13-100 Dollars ($291.13) paid by said Mrs. Julia B. Witherbee to the County Treasurer of Marshall County, on the 13th day of December, 1923, for taxes for the years 1920, 1921, and 1922, including penalty and interest, against the mortgaged property, together with the interest on said payment, from the 13th day of December, 1923, to the date of this notice which last mentioned interest amounts to the sum of Ninety-seven Cents ($.97); and whereas the said power of sale has become operative, and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said Mortgage, or any part thereof;

Now, Therefore, Notice Is Hereby Given, That by virtue of the power of sale contained in said Mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said Mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said Mortgage, viz:

The Northeast Quarter of Section Thirty-three (33) in Township One Hundred Fifty-six (156) North of Range Forty-one (41) West of the Fifth Principal Meridian, in Marshall County and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances; which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Marshall County, at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Warren, in said County and State, on the 3rd day of March, 1924, at two o'clock P. M., of that day, at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt of Two Thousand Nine Hundred Seventy-seven and 46-100 Dollars ($2,077.46), and interest, and the taxes, if any, on said premises, and Fifty Dollars ($50.00) Attorney's fees as stipulated in and by said Mortgage in case of foreclosure and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

MOST IMPORTANT NEWS OF WORLD

Big Happenings of the Week Condensed for the Benefit of Busy Readers.

Washington

Washington—Henry R. Fletcher, of Pennsylvania, now ambassador to Belgium, has been selected by President Coolidge to be ambassador to Italy. He will succeed Richard Washburn Child, who retired recently.

Washington—Early action by congress on soldiers' bonus legislation was demanded in the house by Representative A. P. Andrew, (rep., Mass.) who declared "this belated settlement cannot and will not be much longer delayed."

Washington—Repairs to the airship Shenandoah will require 10 weeks to complete and cost $78,000, according to a report of the board of inquiry which investigated the recent escape of the big dirigible from its mooring mast at Lakehurst, N. J. The question of responsibility for the accident was not taken up by the board.

Washington — The "shake down" cruise of the new light cruiser Trenton, which will be commissioned about April 1, at Philadelphia, will carry the ship from that port to New York and thence to Trinidad, Capetown, Zanzibar, Alexandria, Naples, Gibraltar, Maderia and back to New York about Sept. 1.

Domestic

Lansing, Mich. — Nominating petitions to place the name of President Coolidge on the republican ballot in the presidential primary April 7, were filed with the secretary of state.

New York—After postponements, rumors and reconciliations, Peggy Wood at last has married John V. A. Weaver. Miss Wood is an actress and was last seen in "The Clinging Vine." Weaver is a poet and literary editor of the Brooklyn Eagle.

New York—Failure to obtain a third of the $10,000,000 sought, due, it is suggested, to lack of confidence of former contributors in the west because of current religious controversy, will force the Presbyterian church to curtail its foreign mission work drastically, starting April 1.

St. Louis—The police crime campaign to clean up St. Louis has resulted in arrest and detention of 1,600 persons with a new day's record of 670 persons apprehended within a 15 hour period and 76 saloons, poolrooms, dives and resorts raided.

Quincy, Ill.—Mrs. Martin of Pittsfield, Ill., aged 29, has probably the distinction of being the youngest grandmother in many states. Her daughter, Mrs. William Van Buskirk, aged 13, of Hull, Ill., is the mother of a baby girl. Mrs. Martin was married at 15 and her daughter became a wife at the age of 12.

Baltimore — William F. Cochran, leader in reform movements, and recently elected a member of the board of directors of the Antisaloon League of America, acknowledged a gift of $5,000 to William H. Anderson, former superintendent of the Antisaloon league of New York, under sentence for third degree forgery.

Chicago—Eddie Collins is to be the new manager of the White Sox if Frank Chance, who is ill at his Pacific coast home, is unable to go through with the contract he has with Comiskey. The announcement of the appointment of Collins may come or it may ride along for a time until Chance is better able to gauge the extent of his illness.

Marion, Ill.—Attempts to work out means for an effective civil government in Williamson county were reported to be proceeding satisfactorily after the latest meeting of the citizens' committee of 100 neutral civic leaders who stayed aloof from the turmoil of the district.

Los Angeles—Seventy-seven children were spanked by public school teachers here last semester, according to a report to the board of education by Mrs. Susan M. Dorsey, city superintendent of schools. A state law requires teachers to report to the superintendent all cases of corporal punishment as they occur.

Chicago—Eugene V. Debs, socialist leader, has been nominated by Victor Berger of Milwaukee as a candidate for the Nobel peace prize, it was announced from national socialist party headquarters. In his letter of nomination Representative Berger said his suggestion was made in recognition of Debs' "long service for international peace."

New Haven, Conn.—An oddly shaped gold ring, thought to have been owned by British royalty and tallying in detail with one which disappeared from the English court in 1610, was found by Charles Burns in the sand near Thimble islands in Long Island sound, off the Connecticut shore. Thimble islands are noted as having been a rendezvous of the famous Captain Kidd.

Newton, Mass.—John W. McGrath, 31 years old, private secretary to the late Theodore Roosevelt from 1912 to 1916, is dead.

St. Louis—In an intensive "clean up the city" campaign, started early last week under the personal supervision of Colonel Philip H. Breckman, president of the city board of police commissioners, police arrested a total of 2,027 men and women in a period of four days. Of this number, 400 arrests were for traffic violations. Many were released after a confinement of 20 hours, while others were docketed in the city courts.

Sports

Buenos Aires—Louis Angel Firpo knocked out "Farmer" Lodge in the fifth round of what was to have been a 15-round bout. The knockout blow was a terrific right to the body, preceded by a left to the jaw. Lodge had to be carried to his corner.

St. Paul—Dave Shade of California outpointed Billy Wells of England by a clear margin in their 10-round fight at the Auditorium, the American carrying off the honors in six rounds, three going to the Britisher and one being even.

Foreign

Honolulu—Fire did damage estimated at $65,000 to the Elks clubhouse at Waikiki.

Rome—The Rome newspapers announce that M. Yourenev has been appointed soviet ambassador to Italy. M. Yourenev formerly was minister of public works. Lately, he has been Russian representative in Latvia.

Paris—A decree prohibiting exportation from France of cotton and wool has just been published. Most of the combed wool produced here is sold abroad, and it is feared a number of factories will be forced to close.

Havanna—Fires in four sugar plantations in Camaguey province have caused an estimated loss of 11,0000,000 pounds of sugar cane as it stood in the fields. Investigations are being made on the theory that some of these fires were of incendiary origin.

Tokio—More than 10,000 Japanese, at a mass meeting adopted resolutions demanding at once the resignations of members of the Kiyoura ministry, and then paraded the streets, passing before the Peers club. Police reserves were called out, but the demonstration was orderly.

Paris—The shah of Persia is on the Riviera trying to sell $1,000,000 worth of crown jewels, according to reports from there. This balance of gems was left to the youthful ruler after the Teheran government decided to sell all the royal baubles to get funds to build railways in Persia.

London—Regulations have been issued in the Province of Constantinople according to the Daily Mail, making a medical examination compulsory in the cases of all persons intending to marry. The physician's report must be accepted by the municipal authorities before marriage will be allowed.

New York—Criminal charges will be filed against Tex Rickard if during the impending investigation of the charges made by Tom O'Rourke any evidence is found that the government was defrauded of tax money by the alleged speculation in tickets for the Dempsey-Firpo fight last summer.

Paris—The librarian of the National library in Paris, while rummaging through some books, discovered a casket containing the heart of Voltaire. It had been in the library evidently since 1864, completely forgotten. The key is missing. The casket will be opened and verified in the presence of the minister of public instruction.

Vienna—After a demonstration in the Rinkstrasse, 10,000 bank employees discontented with the salaries, voted a partial strike against four great Viennese banks. The association of bankers announced that if the strike is not over in three days they will dismiss all employees and attempt to maintain service by havign officials do the work of the strikers.

Warsaw—A conference of the Baltic foreign ministers, called to settle points in dispute between the various states, ended with no concrete results reached. None of the three principal questions were settled. As regards an arbitration treaty, M. Enkell, Finland, said he had no authority to sign such a convention. Poland made numerous reservations on the subject of co-operation with the League of Nations.

Paris—Jules Tantot, the most prosperous theater owner in Amiens, who died, willed that his body be accompanied to the cemetery by the Amiens brass band playing a recent popular tune. Tantot was carried to his resting place to the tune of, "Yes, We Have No Bananas." The movie and music hall owner's will declared that he had made his money by popular tunes and he would not let funeral music escort him to the grave.

Paris—The German merchant's remarkable faculty in marking up prices as the mark fell taught the French retailers the tricks of the trade. The newspapers and the public are complaining that many stores already have anticipated Premier Poincare's as yet unvoted 20 per cent increase in taxes, and, instead of raising prices from 2 to 5 per cent, as the economists say is justified, they are shoving up the selling figures from 10 to 50 per cent.

Paris—The length of skirts worn by fashionable women this spring will depend somewhat on personal preference, judging from styles exhibited at the opening of the racing season at Longchamps Sunday. Some of the models who paraded in the bitter breezes wore skirts falling only three or four inches below the knee, while others were about the same distance from the ground. It was remarked that the new short skirts are a little wider than when the vogue was at its height.

Budapest—The fall of the Hungarian crown 20 per cent below the Austrian crown, or to 90,000 for the dollar, is creating something of a panic.

Paris—Colette, French novelist says that women must paint the inside of their lips and their tongues if they use lipstick at all. "If a woman has no rouge on the inside of her lips, it gives an ugly effect when she talks or smiles, as the inside of the lips appear gray in vivid contrast to the scarlet of the outside of the lips. Women should not use yellow and ochre powders, as they give them a jaundiced appearance.

News Briefs from All the State

St. Paul — Minnesota automobile owners will pay $500,000 into the state treasury in 1924 because they put off paying their license fees. That was the estimate made by Mike Holm, secretary of state, when it became evident that 260,000 car-owners will have to pay penalties ranging from 25 cents to $14 for late payment of the state tax.

COMMITTEE ON TRAIL OF LOAN

Bank Officials Called To Tell Oil Investigalion Body of McLean Account

Washington.—The senate oil committee opened another bag of surprises when it resumed hearings Monday after a 10 day recess.

Taking up the trail of the $100,000 loan made to A. B. Fall by Edward B. McLean, publisher of the Washington Post, the committee was told by officials of two Washington banks that Mr. McLean's checking balance in neither of them was more than $10,000 in December, 1921. The publisher has informed the committee he gave Fall checks aggregating $100,000 on the two banks during that period but they were returned uncashed.

Slemp Questioned.

G. Bascom Slemp, secretary to President Coolidge, was questioned about a visit he made to Palm Beach while McLean and Fall were there last December and January. The secretary declared he talked with Fall several times, asked him for the truth about the oil charges, and advised him to tell everything. Mr. Fall replied, he said, that he had nothing more to tell.

The president's secretary said Mr. McLean and Fall were at Palm Beach at the time he was there in December and January and that he had conversations with them but they were not "private, confidential" talks.

The witness said he would have to "treat as confidential any reports he made to the White House on McLean's testimony at Palm Beach.

"I want the committee to know," he said, "that I was not down there on any mission for anybody, but for my health and recreation."

Slemp testified that the oil matter was not discussed generally at his meetings with Fall and McLean, but he did ask the former interior secretary what the facts were.

"Young man, read the record," Slemp quoted Fall as replying. "I have said all I have to say on the subject."

Slemp said that after Senator Walsh was at Palm Beach he advised Fall to tell the committee "all."

Slemp asserted also that he had not talked to any member of the oil committee "about this case."

He said he never had met Harry F. Sinclair or E. L. Doheny and never had any communication directly or indirectly with either of them.

FILE DEMOCRATIC PETITIONS

M. O. Grangaard of Minneapolis, Is Vice President for North Dakota.

Minneapolis.—Arthur P. Kemp, vice president and treasurer of an Auburn, Ind., automobile company was elected head of the agricultural credit corporation, at an organization meeting of the directors held Monday.

Other officers of the $10,000,000 corporation, which has been formed to aid the farmers of the Northwest include the following vice presidents: Alexander Legge, Chicago; J. R. Howard, former president of the American Farm Bureau federation, Clemmons, Iowa; M. O. Grandgaard, Minneapolis, vice president for North Dakota, and F. B. Stiles, Minneapolis, vice president for South Dakota.

R. S. Shume, assistant cashier of the Northwestern National bank, Minneapolis, was chosen secretary and treasurer.

In announcing the election of Mr. Kemp, C. T. Jaffray, chairman of the board of directors said that the new president already has moved to Minneapolis and assumes his direction of the corporation immediately.

CREDIT OFFICERS ELECTED

State Democrat Chairman In Fargo on Way to Bismarck With List.

Fargo, N. D.—G. S. Wooledge of Minot, chairman of the North Dakota, was in Fargo Monday completing arrangements for filing petitions nominating a national committeeman candidate and candidates for delegates to national convention in New York and presidential electors. Mr. Wooledge left in the evening for Bismarck with the petitions.

Those for whom petitions will be filed are:

National committeeman, H. H. Perry, Ellendale.

Denies He Barred Democrats.

Bismarck, N. D.—Secretary of State Thomas Hall denied a report carried in a Fargo newspaper Sunday to the effect that he had refused to accept the Democratic delegate petitions for filing for the March 18 primary on the ground that there is no such a thing as the Democratic party in the state. "There is nothing to it," he said, explaining that while his office had held that the Democratic party was entitled to ballot, an opinion had been asked of Attorney General Shafer to clear up the point.

EXCESS PROFITS TAX IS DEFEATED

Bonus Question Enters Into Consideration of Bill--G.O.P. Divided Agein

Washington.—The revenue bill withstood successfully all assaults in the house, the most determined attack in the form of an amendment proposing a restoration of the excess profits tax, being defeated 157 to 74.

A stubborn fight for the amendment which would have re-enacted the law repealed in 1921 with slightly different rates so prolonged consideration of the measure that leaders predicted a final vote on it could not now be expected before the latter part of this week.

Representative Frear, Republican insurgent, Wisconsin, submitted the amendment and was supported in debate by Representative Oldfield, Democrat, Arkansas. Democrats, however, divided on the question, only about half of those present voting with the Republican insurgents for it.

Plans of Republican organization leaders for an attempt they contemplate to throw out the Democratic income rate schedules in the bill when it comes up for a final vote were further complicated by a development which it was feared might lessen the probabilities of several insurgent Republicans joining at that time with the party organization on the vote for a compromise between the Mellon and Garner plans.

Not Enough for Bonus.

Representative La Guardia, Republican insurgent, New York, who had asked Secretary Mellon for his views on a compromise schedule providing for a 40 per cent surtax rate and a normal rate of 5 per cent on incomes above $4,000 instead of 6 per cent as carried in the organization measure, was informed by the secretary that this plan would not provide sufficient revenue for a bonus. Mr. La Guardia, who voted for the Democratic income rates, had been counted among those expected by the organization to support a compromise.

However, Mr. Mellon declared that neither the Garner schedule now in the bill, the original Mellon rates or those including miscellaneous tax changes, reported by the ways and means committee, would raise sufficient revenue for a bonus.

PROBE EVERY ANGLE--URGED

Telegrams to Be Presented for Committee Inspection.

Washington.—A thorough investigation as to what communication administration officials may have had with persons involved in the oil scandal was determined upon by Democrats on the oil committee.

C. Bascom Slemp, secretary to President Coolidge, who accepted an invitation of Senator Walsh of Montana to appear before the committee the first of the week, was the first witness in this line of inquiry.

H. F. Taff, Washington manager of the Western Union Telegraph company, and Thomas P. Dowd, Washington manager of the Postal Telegraph company, will be additional witnesses.

They will be required to present copies of any telegrams which were sent from Washington to Albert B. Fall, and Edward B. McLean, publisher of the Washington, at Palm Beach, Fla., between December 20, 1923, and January 20, 1924.

Copies of telegrams sent to Fall at New Orleans also will be called for, and in addition records of any long distance calls made by government officials to Palm Beach, while Fall and McLean were there, may be sought.

ROLLA MAN WINS AT CHESS

1925 Chess Tournament Will Be Held at Fargo.

Michigan, N. D.—Winning nine games and losing none, W. H. Widmeyer of Rolla, N. D., won the state chess championship of North Dakota at Michigan Saturday. Widmeyer drew two games. Edgar Anderson of Crary and Rev. Wolsberg of Michigan tied for second place. Hans Klimmek of Fargo, former champion, won five, lost four, and drew one. Louis Wag of Petersburg, Dr. N. Tronnes of Fargo, George Hoenck of Fargo, and J. P. Garber of Fargo finished in the order named. Rev. O. Davis of Michigan was elected president and George Hoenck of Fargo secretary-treasurer. The next tournament will be held in Fargo, February 22, 1925.

Entitled to Place on Ballot.

Bismarck, N. D.—The Democratic party is entitled to a place on the ballot in the March 18 primary, Attorney General George Shafer has ruled. Secretary of State Hall asked the opinion of the attorney general, who found that the law provided specifically that the Republican and Democratic parties shall have a ballot and other parties created by casting of 5 per cent or more of the total votes for its candidate for governor at preceding general election also should have a place on the ballot.

THE RED LOCK

A Tale of the Flatwoods

By DAVID ANDERSON

—15—

The sitting-room door opened, and the portly form of the housekeeper appeared on the porch.

She was the life of the little group that assembled a few minutes later in the gloomy old dining-room, with the candles flickering over its bare walls and waging a losing battle with the shadows lurking in the corners. Only for her, the scene and setting might have been somber enough—the stark walls, stiff old furniture, decorations and ornamentation severely in keeping with the taste of a day long gone; the grim gray figure that presided at the head of the table.

Banker Colin was a man out of whom life had squeezed most of the finer sensibilities and coined them into gold. The dreams of boyhood, the romance of youth, the glory of manhood—gone—bargained away for a price. Sitting there at his gloomy breakfast table, a disappointed, weary old man, his soul cried out to rue the bargain; to trade back with fate. But none had learned the lesson better than he that fate trades not back; that there he was doomed to sit, a hopeless mourner over the dead ashes of the might-have-been.

The forenoon he spent in the small room, busy with his papers, or in meeting people who came to pay him money—or borrow it.

In the afternoon he tried to take a nap, but so long had his mind been set to its daily grind that it now ran on in spite of him—a sort of mental engine whose clutch could no longer be released.

Rest; a quiet nap—they were no longer his. He had sold them—part of the price he had paid for—what?—the privilege to pocket interest money; to collect rents; to write his check. Cheated again. The devil never loses in a trade.

It would be a hopeless task to trace his thoughts as he thrashed about over the bed and fidgeted the hours away. His business; the farms; his squandered years all passed in review. And what was left? To sit by a musty window and pile up wealth—for somebody else to spend. He couldn't spend it himself. He didn't know how. He had toiled so hard to make it that he had never learned how to spend it—an infinitely finer thing to know.

Sleep—he was never wider awake in his life. He floundered off the bed at last, less rested than when he lay down, and stormed out to the porch—only to stand drumming a restless tattoo upon a post with his long bony fingers.

The voices of Texie and the preacher were borne to him from the rustic seat under the giant maple at Whispering spring. He mildly wondered at it; reflected that the genial day had probably for once lured the young man from his studies, and sauntered back to his easy chair in the sitting-room.

As he sat there, with the pulse and purr of the wonderful May day borne in through the open door, his mind groping back over the distant past, a memory held him in far-flung retrospection. Minutes long it held him; until it smoothed the lines on his face and softened his hard old eyes.

He rose from the chair at last; paced back and forth across the floor a time or two; went into the small west room to his safe, unlocked it; with a noticeable effort swung the heavy door open; fumbled inside and drew out a large envelope of stout manila paper; unsealed; fumbled deeper and brought out a small locket of gold; closed the safe, without locking it, and went back to his easy chair.

A long time he sat, with his elbow propped up on the chair-arm, his chin in his palm; finally with fingers that trembled, he pressed in the catch of the locket. It sprang open. There were two pictures inside—a woman and a man. But the face of the woman was not the face over the mantel in the sitting room; it was the face of the woman beneath the draped flag in the cabin under the crimson rambler—what it had been in her girlhood. And the face of the man in the locket was not the upstanding soldier above the sword and spurs, in the uniform of a colonel of Mounted Rangers; it was the face of Simon Colin—what it had been in the days of his young manhood.

The old man gazed at the beautiful, highborn face of the woman in the locket; again and again laid it to his grim old lips, held it close against his breast—suddenly, with a gasp, snapped the locket shut.

A mighty spasm of pain had gripped his side. He clutched it with his hands; fought for breath. When it was over and he was able to breathe again, his lips were blue, and clammy sweat stood heavy on his craggy brow.

Still clutching his side, he opened the locket, with its secret, trying not to see the beautiful face, lest it turn him from his purpose; took out both pictures; struck a match, set them alight and watched them burn to ashes.

As he sat staring, gradually he seemed to grow aware of the envelope lying in his lap. He picked it up and gazed at it absently, as if his mind still dwelt with the dead ashes of the past—the past with its disappointments, its misunderstandings, its tragedy.

In a bold hand that wavered slightly—unmistakably the hand of an old man—the big envelope was addressed, curiously enough, to Jack Warhope, with the legend—"Not to be opened until his twenty-first birthday."

After a moment the old man fumbled some legal-looking papers out of the envelope; read them through with great care; replaced them; sealed the envelope and put it in his pocket. Then he walked to the safe; dropped the empty locket behind some papers at the very back of it; closed the door; locked it and strayed aimlessly out to the porch again.

The shadows of the fine old trees in the yard were creeping well eastward. The preacher, still a truant from his studies, was with Texie at the spring. Just over the brink of the decline where the yard dipped to the park-like orchard, he could see them—the girl on the rustic seat, the tall form of the young minister lounging against a fork of the huge maple.

The drone of their voices carried up to the lonesome old man, at a loss how to spend the hours of his enforced idleness, and the splintered ruins of what had once been a smile for a moment chased the weariness from his craggy old battlement of a face. He dragged a chair to a sunny spot of the porch and sat down.

The girl, hearing the scrape of the chair, sprang up.

"Father!" she cried. "He's up."

Springing over the gnarled, exposed roots of the great maple, she hurried up the yard, half laughing back over her shoulder at the preacher's mincing steps as he followed.

She flew to the porch, and in a moment her arms were around the weary gray figure in the chair.

"F'rgive me, father—I didn't know y'u was up 'r I'd 'a' come sooner."

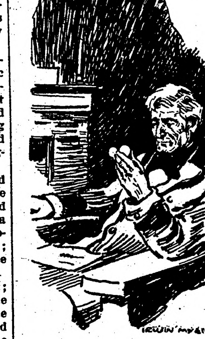
"No, no! Not waste." She smoothed his hair. "I'm so sorry I f'rgot—your good day at home, too."

The old man patted her face and reassured her, in a voice that the people who borrowed his money had never heard.



The Old Man Gazed at the Beautiful, Highborn Face of the Woman in the Locket.

"W'y, child, I got up only a little bit ago, an' thought I'd jist set out on the porch a while. It's kinda—lonesome in the house."

"And do y'u feel better after y'ur nap?" the girl asked, glowingly happy at his endearments—endearments that had been all too rare.

"Oceans," was his answer, with a grimace at the idea of the nap—a grimace that he suppressed just in time to keep her from seeing. "Good as new. I be'n wonderin' why y'u never tuck Mr. Hopkins hossback ridin'. Y'u ain't even showed 'im y'ur new saddle hoss, have y'u?"

"Brownie? F'r a wonder, I hain't. But this is the first time he's ever be'n here, except at night—and he's traveled s' much and knows s' much that I didn't 'low he'd care about hosses. We've jist be'n talking about —Ken—"

The old banker bent his head and fumbled with a loosened screw of the chair-arm. The girl gazed out across the wide bottoms to the river. The preacher took out his handkerchief; nervously brushed away a speck of dust from his coat sleeve; put it back.

"Brownie," the girl repeated after a time, her eyes turning back from the river to the piously pensive face of the preacher, "would y'u care t' see 'er?"

"It would give me the greatest pleasure," was his answer, in the studied and faultless though somewhat stilted diction of the period.

"I could talk y'u t' death about 'er."

"I should die happy," he answered.

The girl was so artless and unspoiled that the flattery, trite as it was, half pleased her. The native cheerfulness, subdued for a moment by thoughts of her hapless brother, brightened again in her eyes. She threw her arm about her father, dragged him up out of the chair and led the way to the barn.

Brownie, a beautiful dark sorrel, with a single small patch of white in her forehead, hearing the girl's voice, came trotting up out of the pasture lot—the same through which Jack had trailed the unknown prowler the night before. A tall, clean-limbed gelding, bright bay, with one white hind foot, followed her almost up to the gate, where he stood back and half jealously watched the girl caress his mate.

"Come, Rex," the girl called, reaching out her hand and coaxing the tall bay. But the horse kept his distance. It was only after the two men had drawn back a few steps that he came up to the gate and put his nose against her face.

"Do you ride, Mr. Hopkins?" she called over her shoulder.

"Not especially well," he answered, "though I do like a good horse. You ride, of course?"

"Everybody rides in the Flatwoods—you must learn."

"W'y, yes," chimed in the old banker, "there's Rex jist sp'ilin' f'r work, now that I don't ride any more sence these blasted fainty spells got t' comin'. Ther's nothin' t' hender y'u from takin' a ride every day—I reckon we've still got my saddle an' things ain't we, daughter?"

"Saddle and bridle and all," she answered. "And it will be such a pleasure," she went on, turning to the young preacher, "t' show y'u around over our beautiful Flatwoods."

"With such a guide, I am impatient to go the earliest moment possible," the preacher exclaimed effusively, "this afternoon—now—if you will."

The girl glanced at her father.

"Why not?" he nodded.

"I don't like to leave—you."

The old man tossed up his hand and laughed—a raspy sort of laugh—all that the years had left him.

The girl turned back to the preacher.

"W'y, yes—if you wish," she said—"only you must promise not t' run away from me; Rex is ever s' much faster than Brownie."

The preacher turned to look again at the tall bay, standing a few feet back from the gate, where he had withdrawn step by step as the minister advanced.

"He certainly appears to possess great speed."

"Speed!" the old banker repeated, a note in his voice common to the throat of every man in the Flatwoods when speaking of his horse or dog, "next t' Jack's Graylock at the homestead yonder, he's the fastest in the Flatwoods."

"Scarce as hen's teeth, his breed," the old man returned warmly. "I'm doubtin' if ther's anybody along the Wabash that knows the woods like he does, unless it might be ol' Nick Wiffles. I've alw'ys be'n glad he tuck to 'em the way 'e did, and I've encouraged 'im. Ther's nothin' like the woods t' make a man of a feller."

"Some pr'fessors came up her f'om down the river t' study what they called 'Native Flora' on the homestead last year—y'u know, ther's two thousand acres of it, most of it layin' jist as the Indians left it, and he keeps coaxin' me not t' 'low an ax laid to a single sound tree. There'll be a fortune in that oak and walnut some day. Jack, he'd be'n writin' to' these pr'fessors, and they'd be'n sendin' 'im books—anyhow, they come up and tramped around f'r nigh a week.

"One day one of 'em was talkin' t' me, and he said Jack knowed more about the woods than all the rest of 'em put together. Well, that's him, every time. I never did know 'im t' try anything but what he got it down about as fine as the next one."

"Well, if y'u're goin', y'u better be startin'."

Long years of active business life had taught Banker Colin the value of promptness and decision—had so ground these traits into his nature that they had come to function automatically.

Talking as volubly about the relative merits of Rex and Brownie as if he were an agent trying to sell them, and rubbing his bony hands in delight at having his restless mind set once more to a definite task, he led the way to the lot and turned the horses into the barn.

The saddle and bridle were somewhat stiffened from disuse when he tried them on Rex, but he had them limbered up and came leading out the horse almost as soon as Texie had Brownie ready.

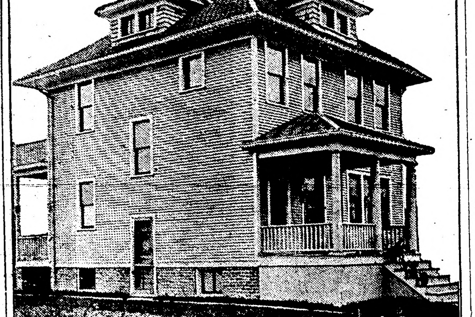
Carrier Pigeons.

Carrier pigeons normally fly at the rate of about thirty to thirty-six miles an hour, but when "homing" they can reach a speed of sixty miles an hour or more.

Rubber Balls Flatten.

Rubber balls dropped to the ground flatten almost into a hemisphere at the moment of impact, but do it so quickly the eye cannot see it.

Exceptionally Large Home Designed for Small Lot

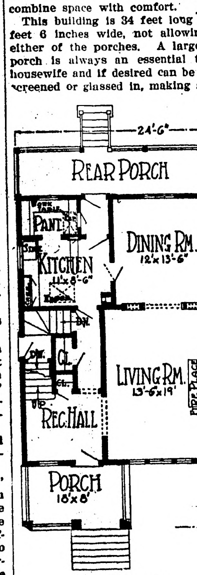


By WILLIAM A. RADFORD

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1827 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

So many people have complained of the small space of the home on a 30-foot lot that this design should be very appealing. In this large homey structure light and room have been the chief factors considered in an effort to combine space with comfort.

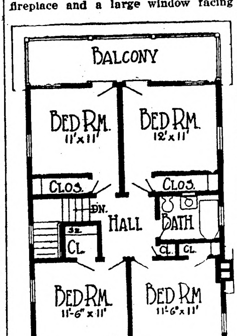
This building is 34 feet long by 24 feet 6 inches wide, not allowing for either of the porches. A large rear porch is always an essential to the housewife and if desired can be either screened or glassed in, making an additional room. The balcony above may be used in a countless number of ways as doors from the two rear bedrooms provide an accessible means to make practical this additional space.



First Floor Plan.

The entrance to the front leads into a fairly large reception hall provided with a suitable clothes closet. Doors leading from this hall to the large living room and directly to the kitchen and dining room save many steps.

What is more cozy than a large living room with a fine fireplace, homey decorations and bookcases? The living room of this residence is well lighted with two windows on each side of the fireplace and a large window facing the front. The fireplace is [illegible] may be very tastefully decorated [illegible] quaint andirons and the usual fire place fixtures. Bookcases built into the corners add to the homey interior. The dining room opens from the living room and may be separated by either removable doors or by a colonnade opening such as is shown in the drawing. The kitchen is easily accessible.



Second Floor Pl...

The kitchen is very well balanced. The sink is well lighted and the kitchen cabinet is placed so as to make its constant use convenient. A work table is placed in the pantry and is well lighted.

From the plan of the second floor it will be seen that four large bedrooms, all about 11 feet by 11 feet, furnish ample space for the average family. The bathroom is located so as to be accessible to the bedrooms, all of which have well-spaced, large closets. All bedrooms are well lighted and well ventilated. The attic is sufficiently lighted to be used as a playroom for the children or may be used as a storeroom for trunks.

The foundation of the building is built of brick and the size of the basement allows plenty of room for a storeroom or a cool, protected room for preserves and jellies. Adequate space is allowed for bins for coal and wood. As you will see from the photographs, a side door is provided accessible to either the basement or the first floor.

In style, this house is of the two-story, square, hip-roof pattern, having dormer windows to break the monotony of the roof, and is a style exceedingly popular in the suburbs of the big city or located in the small town.

Use Sugar Cane Fiber to Make New Wallboard

Out of sugar cane fiber is now being manufactured a new kind of so-called "insulating lumber." It is used as sheathing, and the manufacturers claim it is stronger than wood so used.

Besides sheathing, this product—which looks like wallboard—is used for stucco and plaster base, instead of lath, roof insulation, sound deadening, interior and exterior finish. As insulation "it has the value of cord." It is further described as "a rugged manufactured board that nails direct to studs and rafters. Weather or rough usage does not readily harm it.

"The result is a strong house—warm in winter, cool in summer—and 25 per cent to 35 per cent of the fuel bill is saved." It comes in stock sizes, ⅞ of an inch thick, and 4 feet wide. There are various lengths from 8 to 12 feet. It weighs about sixty pounds per 100 square feet.

Waterproofed Stucco Is Durable Material

The home built of permanently waterproofed stucco leaves little to be desired. It is durable and offers beauty and variety in its finishes, tones and color schemes, is lasting in body strength and requires very little for maintenance. In the choice of this material it is well for the builder to carefully investigate and build with a stucco known to be thoroughly waterproof, a feature of utmost importance in determining the merit of this material.

Stucco can be applied to concrete, tile, wood or metal lath—if the latter is used it is well to back-plaster to guard against rust or corrosion.

New Building Material Made of Waste Paper

A new building material made from waste paper and designed for ceilings and wall linings has been perfected by a Swedish engineer, and production on a large scale soon will be undertaken.

The raw materials are ordinary waste paper such as accumulates in cities, clay, and sulphate lye, the cheapness of which warrants an inexpensive finished product.

The covering is said to be fireproof and durable; can be applied by unskilled labor, will take paper, paint or stain, and can even be polished. It is a good nonconductor, and does not respond to the changes in temperature.

Choice of Contractor

Too much care cannot be taken in the selection of a contractor to build your home. The fact that he has constructed many homes is not necessarily a favorable recommendation. Good will and consequent recommendations of satisfied customers is a builder's best asset, and to that end it is well to examine some of the buildings which he has built, preferably homes which have been constructed for over two or three years, as this length of time will show up faulty construction.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

(©, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

My fairest child, I have no song to give you;
No lark could pipe to skies so dull and gray;
Yet, ere we part, one lesson I can give you
For every day:
Be good, sweet maid, and let who will be clever;
Do noble things, not dream them
all day long;
And so make life, death and that vast forever
One grand sweet song.

OUT OF THE ORDINARY

Use the sirup left from pickled peaches or pears to baste the roast. It imparts a delightful flavor to veal and lamb. Then use some of the sirup to add to the mincemeat pie. It also makes a delicious pudding sauce for a plain unflavored cottage pudding.

The tender young turnips that come into the markets now may be made into baskets—hollowed out to form cups and filled with creamed peas, diced carrots, creamed celery or in fact any creamed vegetable. The bits that are hollowed out may be minced and added to the vegetable soup for the next day or the day following.

Carrots With Lemon Butter.—Cook carrots cut with a vegetable shredder into lattice-shaped pieces in very little water until tender; let them steam on the back of the stove in two or three tablespoonfuls of water to a pint of carrots. Season with salt, a dash of cayenne and the juice of half a lemon; keep hot and add two tablespoonfuls of butter shortly before the time for serving.

New Beets.—Cook beets without peeling until tender. Drop into cold water and skin them. Reheat after chopping in the chopping bowl, add plenty of butter, salt and pepper. If olive oil is liked that may be used instead of butter, and add a dash of lemon juice.

Eggs Stuffed With Anchovies.—Cook as many eggs as are needed until hard cooked to the center. Remove the shells and cut into halves lengthwise. Take out the yolks and pound them with as many skinned and boned anchovies as there are eggs, season with pepper, nutmeg, salt and a little softened butter. Fill each half of egg with the mixture, put them when very hot on oval pieces of hot buttered bread or toast. This makes a nice hot supper dish. One may serve the eggs with a seasoned sauce if desired.

Let me laugh for the pure joy of living,
Let me laugh like a child at his play,
And the heart of the race will reserve me a place
And be glad that I traveled this way. —Biddell.

HOMELY EVERYDAY DISHES.

A hot soup is ever welcome for dinner, luncheon or supper. Here is one that is rich and savory:

Onion Soup With Eggs.—Cut up six white onions very thin and fry in tablespoonful of butter until brown. Add a quart of water and a pint of milk, season with one teaspoonful of salt, a dash of cayenne, four beaten egg yolks, a bit of mace and a teaspoonful of sugar. Cook slowly for an hour and strain, add a cupful of cream and a tablespoonful of flour mixed with the cream; cook until the starch is well cooked. Add the egg yolks at the last just before serving

Eggs De Lesseps.—Saute the eggs in a pan with a small amount of butter, taking care not to break the egg yolks. Place them on a hot platter and dust with salt; brown butter in a frying pan, adding a teaspoonful of vinegar to four eggs and one teaspoonful of parsley finely minced. Serve with boiled calves' brains sauted in butter, then pour the sauce over the eggs and brains.

Chicken Baked in Milk.—Take a nice fat fowl one year old, cut up as for frying, season well, roll in seasoned flour and put into a hot frying pan with sweet fat to brown. Turn every piece until nicely browned now place in a deep baking pan and cover with fresh milk. Place in a slow oven and cook until the chicken is tender and the milk and flour cooked down to a rich white sauce. If liked a bit of onion may be added for additional flavor.

Savory Toast.—Chicken gravy poured over nicely browned, buttered toast makes a fine supper dish. Serve with a crisp lettuce salad and a cupful of hot cocoa.

Prune Pie.—Soak three-fourths of a pound of prunes in cold water, stew until tender in the same water, stone and cool. Line a pie plate with pastry, add the prunes with sugar to taste, the juice of half a lemon and its grated rind, two tablespoonfuls of butter and flour well-blended, all well mixed, and cover with a top crust or with a meringue. Nutmeg may be used in place of the lemon rind if preferred.

St. Paul — Minnesota automobile owners will pay $500,000 into the state treasury in 1924 because they put off paying their license fees. That was the estimate made by Mike Holm, secretary of state, when it became evident that 260,000 car owners will have to pay penalties ranging from 25 cents to $14 for late payment of the state tax.

COMMITTEE ON TRAIL OF LOAN

Bank Officials Called To Tell Oil Investigalion Body of McLean Account

Washington.—The senate oil committee opened another bag of surprises when it resumed hearings Monday after a 10 day recess.

Taking up the trail of the $100,000 loan made to A. B. Fall by Edward B. McLean, publisher of the Washington Post, the committee was told by officials of two Washington banks that Mr. McLean's checking balance in neither of them was more than $10,000 in December, 1921. The publisher has informed the committee he gave Fall checks aggregating $100,000 on the two banks during that period but they were returned uncashed.

Slemp Questioned.

G. Bascom Slemp, secretary to President Coolidge, was questioned about a visit he made to Palm Beach while McLean and Fall were there last December and January. The secretary declared he talked with Fall several times, asked him for the truth about the oil charges, and advised him to tell everything. Mr. Fall replied, he said, that he had nothing more to tell.

The president's secretary said Mr. McLean and Fall were at Palm Beach at the time he was there in December and January and that he had conversations with them but they were not "private, confidential" talks.

The witness said he would have to "treat as confidential any reports he made to the White House on McLean's testimony at Palm Beach.

"I want the committee to know," he said, "that I was not down there on any mission for anybody, but for my health and recreation."

Slemp testified that the oil matter was not discussed generally at his meetings with Fall and McLean, but he did ask the former interior secretary what the facts were.

"Young man, read the record," Slemp quoted Fall as replying. "I have said all I have to say on the subject."

Slemp said that after Senator Walsh was at Palm Beach he advised Fall to tell the committee "all."

Slemp asserted also that he had not talked to any member of the oil committee "about this case."

He said he never had met Harry F. Sinclair or E. L. Doheny and never had any communication directly or indirectly with either of them.

FILE DEMOCRATIC PETITIONS

M. O. Grangaard of Minneapolis, Is Vice President for North Dakota.

Minneapolis.—Arthur P. Kemp, vice president and treasurer of an Auburn, Ind., automobile company was elected head of the agricultural credit corporation, at an organization meeting of the directors held Monday.

Other officers of the $10,000,000 corporation, which has been formed to aid the farmers of the Northwest include the following vice presidents: Alexander Legge, Chicago; J. R. Howard, former president of the American Farm Bureau federation, Clemmons, Iowa; M. O. Grandgaard, Minneapolis, vice president for North Dakota, and F. B. Stiles, Minneapolis, vice president for South Dakota.

R. S. Shume, assistant cashier of the Northwestern National bank, Minneapolis, was chosen secretary and treasurer.

In announcing the election of Mr. Kemp, C. T. Jaffray, chairman of the board of directors said that the new president already has moved to Minneapolis and assumes his direction of the corporation immediately.

CREDIT OFFICERS ELECTED

State Democrat Chairman In Fargo on Way to Bismarck With List.

Fargo, N. D.—G. S. Wooledge of Minot, chairman of the North Dakota, was in Fargo Monday completing arrangements for filing petitions nominating a national committeeman candidate and candidates for delegates to national convention in New York and presidential electors. Mr. Wooledge left in the evening for Bismarck with the petitions.

Those for whom petitions will be filed are:

National committeeman, H. H. Perry, Ellendale.

Denies He Barred Democrats.

Bismarck, N. D.—Secretary of State Thomas Hall denied a report carried in a Fargo newspaper Sunday to the affect that he had refused to accept the Democratic delegate petitions for filing for the March 18 primary on the ground that there is no such a thing as the Democratic party in the state. "There is nothing to it," he said, explaining that while his office had held that the Democratic party was entitled to ballot, an opinion had been asked of Attorney General Shafer to clear up the point.

EXCESS PROFITS TAX IS DEFEATED

Washington.—The revenue bill withstood successfully all assaults in the house, the most determined attack in the form of an amendment proposing a restoration of the excess profits tax, being defeated 157 to 74.

A stubborn fight for the amendment which would have re-enacted the law repealed in 1921 with slightly different rates so prolonged consideration of the measure that leaders predicted a final vote on it could not now be expected before the latter part of this week.

Representative Frear, Republican insurgent, Wisconsin, submitted the amendment and was supported in debate by Representative Oldfield, Democrat, Arkansas. Democrats, however, divided on the question, only about half of those present voting with the Republican insurgents for it.

Plans of Republican organization leaders for an attempt they contemplate to throw out the Democratic income rate schedules in the bill when it comes up for a final vote were further complicated by a development which it was feared might lessen the probabilities of several insurgent Republicans joining at that time with the party organization on the vote for a compromise between the Mellon and Garner plans.

Not Enough for Bonus.

Representative La Guardia, Republican insurgent, New York, who had asked Secretary Mellon for his views on a compromise schedule providing for a 40 per cent surtax rate and a normal rate of 5 per cent on incomes above $4,000 instead of 6 per cent as carried in the organization measure, was informed by the secretary that this plan would not provide sufficient revenue for a bonus. Mr. La Guardia, who voted for the Democratic income rates, had been counted among those expected by the organization to support a compromise.

However, Mr. Mellon declared that neither the Garner schedule now in the bill, the original Mellon rates or those including miscellaneous tax changes, reported by the ways and means committee, would raise sufficient revenue for a bonus.

PROBE EVERY ANGLE--URGED

Telegrams to Be Presented for Committee Inspection.

Washington.—A thorough investigation as to what communication administration officials may have had with persons involved in the oil scandal was determined upon by Democrats on the oil committee.

C. Bascom Slemp, secretary to President Coolidge, who accepted an invitation of Senator Walsh of Montana to appear before the committee the first of the week, was the first witness in this line of inquiry.

H. F. Taff, Washington manager of the Western Union Telegraph company, and Thomas P. Dowd, Washington manager of the Postal Telegraph company, will be additional witnesses.

They will be required to present copies of any telegrams which were sent from Washington to Albert B. Fall, and Edward B. McLean, publisher of the Washington, at Palm Beach, Fla., between December 20, 1923, and January 20, 1924.

Copies of telegrams sent to Fall at New Orleans also will be called for, and in addition records of any long distance calls made by government officials to Palm Beach, while Fall and McLean were there, may be sought.

ROLLA MAN WINS AT CHESS

1925 Chess Tournament Will Be Held at Fargo.

Michigan, N. D.—Winning nine games and losing none, W. H. Widmeyer of Rolla, N. D., won the state chess championship of North Dakota at Michigan Saturday. Widmeyer drew two games. Edgar Anderson of Crary and Rev. Wolsberg of Michigan tied for second place. Hans Klimmek of Fargo, former champion, won five, lost four, and drew one. Louis Wag of Petersburg, Dr. N. Tronnes of Fargo, George Hoenck of Fargo, and J. P. Garber of Fargo finished in the order named. Rev. O. Davis of Michigan was elected president and George Hoenck of Fargo secretary-treasurer. The next tournament will be held in Fargo, February 22, 1925.

Entitled to Place on Ballot.

Bismarck, N. D.—The Democratic party is entitled to a place on the ballot in the March 18 primary, Attorney General George Shafer has ruled. Secretary of State Hall asked the opinion of the attorney general, who found that the law provided specifically that the Republican and Democratic parties shall have a ballot and other parties created by casting of 5 per cent or more of the total votes for its candidate for governor at preceding general election also should have a place on the ballot.

THE RED LOCK

—15—

The sitting-room door opened, and the portly form of the housekeeper appeared on the porch.

She was the life of the little group that assembled a few minutes later in the gloomy old dining-room, with the candles flickering over its bare walls and waging a losing battle with the shadows lurking in the corners. Only for her, the scene and setting might have been somber enough—the stark walls, stiff old furniture, decorations and ornamentation severely in keeping with the taste of a day long gone; the grim gray figure that presided at the head of the table.

Banker Colin was a man out of whom life had squeezed most of the finer sensibilities and coined them into gold. The dreams of boyhood, the romance of youth, the glory of manhood—gone—bargained away for a price. Sitting there at his gloomy breakfast table, a disappointed, weary old man, his soul cried out to rue the bargain; to trade back with fate. But none had learned the lesson better than he that fate trades not back; that there he was doomed to sit, a hopeless mourner over the dead ashes of the might-have-been.

The forenoon he spent in the small room, busy with his papers, or in meeting people who came to pay him money—or borrow it.

In the afternoon he tried to take a nap, but so long had his mind been set to its daily grind that it now ran on in spite of him—a sort of mental engine whose clutch could no longer be released.

Rest; a quiet nap—they were no longer his. He had sold them—part of the price he had paid for—what?—the privilege to pocket interest money; to collect rents; to write his check. Cheated again. The devil never loses in a trade.

It would be a hopeless task to trace his thoughts as he thrashed about over the bed and fidgeted the hours away. His business; the farms; his squandered years all passed in review. And what was left? To sit by a musty window and pile up wealth—for somebody else to spend. He couldn't spend it himself. He didn't know how. He had toiled so hard to make it that he had never learned how to spend it—an infinitely finer thing to know.

Sleep—he was never wider awake in his life. He floundered off the bed at last, less rested than when he lay down, and stormed out to the porch—only to stand drumming a restless tattoo upon a post with his long bony fingers.

The voices of Texie and the preacher were borne to him from the rustic seat under the giant maple at Whispering spring. He mildly wondered at it; reflected that the genial day had probably for once lured the young man from his studies, and sauntered back to his easy chair in the sitting-room.

As he sat there, with the pulse and purr of the wonderful May day borne in through the open door, his mind groping back over the distant past, a memory held him in far-flung retrospection. Minutes long it held him; until it smoothed the lines on his face and softened his hard old eyes.

He rose from the chair at last; paced back and forth across the floor a time or two; went into the small west room to his safe, unlocked it; with a noticeable effort swung the heavy door open; fumbled inside and drew out a large envelope of stout manila paper; unsealed; fumbled deeper and brought out a small locket of gold; closed the safe, without locking it, and went back to his easy chair.

A long time he sat, with his elbow propped up on the chair-arm, his chin in his palm; finally with fingers that trembled, he pressed in the catch of the locket. It sprang open. There were two pictures inside—a woman and a man. But the face of the woman was not the face over the mantel in the sitting room; it was the face of the woman beneath the draped flag in the cabin under the crimson rambler—what it had been in her girlhood. And the face of the man in the locket was not the upstanding soldier above the sword and spurs, in the uniform of a colonel of Mounted Rangers; it was the face of Simon Colin—what it had been in the days of his young manhood.

The old man gazed at the beautiful, highborn face of the woman in the locket; again and again laid it to his grim old lips, held it close against his breast—suddenly, with a gasp, snapped the locket shut.

A mighty spasm of pain had gripped his side. He clutched it with his hands; fought for breath. When it was over and he was able to breathe again, his lips were blue, and clammy sweat stood heavy on his craggy brow.

Still clutching his side, he opened the locket, with its secret, trying not to see the beautiful face, lest it turn him from his purpose; took out both pictures; struck a match, set them alight and watched them burn to ashes.

As he sat staring, gradually he seemed to grow aware of the envelope lying in his lap. He picked it up and gazed at it absently, as if his mind still dwelt with the dead ashes of the past—the past with its disappointments, its misunderstandings, its tragedy.

In a bold hand that wavered slightly—unmistakably the hand of an old man—the big envelope was addressed, curiously enough, to Jack Warhope, with the legend—"Not to be opened until his twenty-first birthday."

After a moment the old man fumbled some legal-looking papers out of the envelope; read them through with great care; replaced them; sealed the envelope and put it in his pocket. Then he walked to the safe; dropped the empty locket behind some papers at the very back of it; closed the door; locked it and strayed aimlessly out to the porch again.

The shadows of the fine old trees in the yard were creeping well eastward. The preacher, still a truant from his studies, was with Texie at the spring. Just over the brink of the decline where the yard dipped to the park-like orchard, he could see them—the girl on the rustic seat, the tall form of the young minister lounging against a fork of the huge maple.

The drone of their voices carried up to the lonesome old man, at a loss how to spend the hours of his enforced idleness, and the splintered ruins of what had once been a smile for a moment chased the weariness from his craggy old battlement of a face. He dragged a chair to a sunny spot of the porch and sat down.

The girl, hearing the scrape of the chair, sprang up.

"Father!" she cried. "He's up."

Springing over the gnarled, exposed roots of the great maple, she hurried up the yard, half laughing back over her shoulder at the preacher's mincing steps as he followed.

She flew to the porch, and in a moment her arms were around the weary gray figure in the chair.

"F'rgive me, father—I didn't know y'u was up 'r I'd 'a' come sooner."

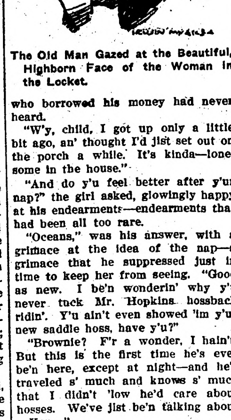
"No, no! Not waste." She smoothed his hair. "I'm so sorry I f'rgot—your good day at home, too."

The old man patted her face and reassured her, in a voice that the people who borrowed his money had never heard.



The Old Man Gazed at the Beautiful, Highborn Face of the Woman in the Locket.

"W'y, child, I got up only a little bit ago, an' thought I'd jist set out on the porch a while. It's kinda—lonesome in the house."

"And do y'u feel better after y'ur nap?" the girl asked, glowingly happy at his endearments—endearments that had been all too rare.

"Oceans," was his answer, with a grimace at the idea of the nap—a grimace that he suppressed just in time to keep her from seeing. "Good as new. I be'n wonderin' why y'u never tuck Mr. Hopkins hossback ridin'. Y'u ain't even showed 'im y'ur new saddle hoss, have y'u?"

"Brownie? F'r a wonder, I hain't. But this is the first time he's ever be'n here, except at night—and he's traveled s' much and knows s' much that I didn't 'low he'd care about hosses. We've jist be'n talking about—Ken—"

The old banker bent his head and fumbled with a loosened screw of the chair-arm. The girl gazed out across the wide bottoms to the river. The preacher took out his handkerchief; nervously brushed away a speck of dust from his coat sleeve; put it back.

"Brownie," the girl repeated after a time, her eyes turning back from the river to the piously pensive face of the preacher, "would y'u care t' see 'er?"

"It would give me the greatest pleasure," was his answer, in the studied and faultless though somewhat stilted diction of the period.

"I could talk y'u t' death about 'er."

"I should die happy," he answered.

The girl was so artless and unspoiled that the flattery, trite as it was, half pleased her. The native cheerfulness, subdued for a moment by thoughts of her hapless brother, brightened again in her eyes. She threw her arm about her father, dragged him up out of the chair and led the way to the barn.

Brownie, a beautiful dark sorrel, with a single small patch of white in her forehead, hearing the girl's voice, came trotting up out of the pasture lot—the same through which Jack had trailed the unknown prowler the night before. A tall, clean-limbed gelding, bright bay, with one white hind foot, followed her almost up to the gate, where he stood back and half jealously watched the girl caress his mate.

"Come, Rex," the girl called, reaching out her hand and coaxing the tall bay. But the horse kept his distance. It was only after the two men had drawn back a few steps that he came up to the gate and put his nose against her face.

"Do you ride, Mr. Hopkins?" she called over her shoulder.

"Not especially well," he answered, "though I do like a good horse. You ride, of course?"

"Everybody rides in the Flatwoods—you must learn."

"W'y, yes," chimed in the old banker, "there's Rex jist sp'ilin' f'r work, now that I don't ride any more sence these blasted fainty spells got t' comin'. Ther's nothin' t' hender y'u from takin' a ride every day—I reckon we've still got my saddle an' things, ain't we, daughter?"

"Saddle and bridle and all," she answered. "And it will be such a pleasure," she went on, turning to the young preacher, "t' show y'u around over our beautiful Flatwoods."

"With such a guide, I am impatient to go the earliest moment possible," the preacher exclaimed effusively, "this afternoon—now—if you will."

The girl glanced at her father.

"Why not?" he nodded.

"I don't like to leave—you."

The old man tossed up his hand and laughed—a raspy sort of laugh—all that the years had left him.

The girl turned back to the preacher.

"W'y, yes—if you wish," she said—"only you must promise not t' run away from me; Rex is ever s' much faster than Brownie."

The preacher turned to look again at the tall bay, standing a few feet back from the gate, where he had withdrawn step by step as the minister advanced.

"He certainly appears to possess great speed."

"Speed!" the old banker repeated, a note in his voice common to the throat of every man in the Flatwoods when speaking of his horse or dog, "next t' Jack's Graylock at the homestead yonder, he's the fastest in the Flatwoods."

"Scarce as hen's teeth, his breed," the old man returned warmly. "I'm doubtin' if ther's anybody along the Wabash that knows the woods like he does, unless it might be ol' Nick Wiffles. I've alw'ys be'n glad he tuck to 'em the way 'e did, and I've encouraged 'im. Ther's nothin' like the woods t' make a man of a feller."

"Some pr'fessors came up her f'om down the river t' study what they called 'Native Flora' on the homestead last year—y'u know, ther's two thousand acres of it, most of it layin' jist as the Indians left it, and he keeps coaxin' me not t' 'low an ax laid to a single sound tree. There'll be a fortune in that oak and walnut some day. Jack, he'd be'n writin' to' these pr'fessors, and they'd be'n sendin' 'im books—anyhow, they come up and tramped around f'r nigh a week.

"One day one of 'em was talkin' t' me, and he said Jack knowed more about the woods than all the rest of 'em put together. Well, that's him, every time. I never did know 'im t' try anything but what he got it down about as fine as the next one."

"Well, if y'u're goin', y'u better be startin'."

Long years of active business life had taught Banker Colin the value of promptness and decision—had so ground these traits into his nature that they had come to function automatically.

Talking as volubly about the relative merits of Rex and Brownie as if he were an agent trying to sell them, and rubbing his bony hands in delight at having his restless mind set once more to a definite task, he led the way to the lot and turned the horses into the barn.

The saddle and bridle were somewhat stiffened from disuse when he tried them on Rex, but he had them limbered up and came leading out the horse almost as soon as Texie had Brownie ready.

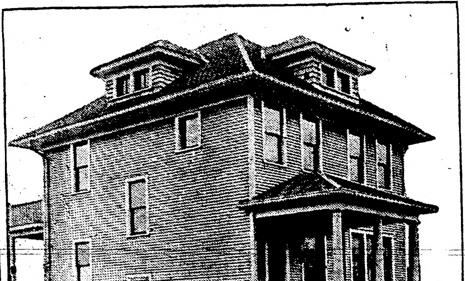
Exceptionally Large Home Designed for Small Lot

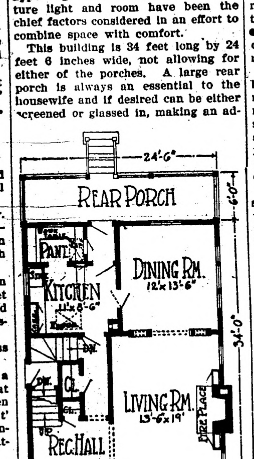


By WILLIAM A. RADFORD

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1827 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

So many people have complained of the small space of the home on a 30-foot lot that this design should be very appealing. In this large homey structure light and room have been the chief factors considered in an effort to combine space with comfort.

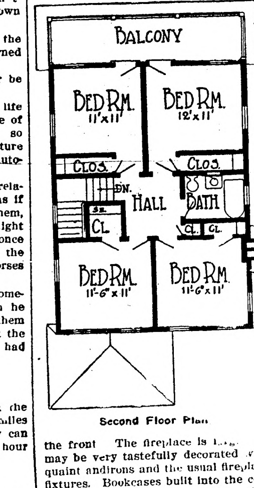
This building is 34 feet long by 24 feet 6 inches wide, not allowing for either of the porches. A large rear porch is always an essential to the housewife and if desired can be either screened or glassed in, making an additional room. The balcony above may be used in a countless number of ways as doors from the two rear bedrooms provide an accessible means to make practical this additional space.



First Floor Plan.

The entrance to the front leads into a fairly large reception hall provided with a suitable clothes closet. Doors leading from this hall to the large living room and directly to the kitchen and dining room save many steps.

What is more cozy than a large living room with a fine fireplace, homey decorations and bookcases? The living room of this residence is well lighted with two windows on each side of the fireplace and a large window facing the front. The fireplace is large and may be very tastefully decorated with quaint andirons and the usual fireplace fixtures. Bookcases built into the corners add to the homey interior. The dining room opens from the living room and may be separated by either removable doors or by a colonnade opening such as is shown in the drawing. The kitchen is easily accessible.



Second Floor Plan.

The kitchen is very well balanced. The sink is well lighted and the kitchen cabinet is placed so as to make its constant use convenient. A work table is placed in the pantry and is well lighted.

From the plan of the second floor it will be seen that four large bedrooms, all about 11 feet by 11 feet, furnish ample space for the average family. The bathroom is located so as to be accessible to the bedrooms, all of which have well-spaced, large closets. All bedrooms are well lighted and well ventilated. The attic is sufficiently lighted to be used as a playroom for the children or may be used as a storeroom for trunks.

The foundation of the building is built of brick and the size of the basement allows plenty of room for a storeroom or a cool, protected room for preserves and jellies. Adequate space is allowed for bins for coal and wood. As you will see from the photographs, a side door is provided accessible to either the basement or the first floor.

In style, this house is of the two-story, square, hip-roof pattern, having dormer windows to break the monotony of the roof, and is a style exceedingly popular in the suburbs of the big city or located in the small town.

Use Sugar Cane Fiber to Make New Wallboard

Out of sugar cane fiber is now being manufactured a new kind of so-called "insulating lumber." It is used as sheathing, and the manufacturers claim it is stronger than wood so used.

Besides sheathing, this product—which looks like wallboard—is used for stucco and plaster base, instead of lath, roof insulation, sound deadening, interior and exterior finish. As insulation "it has the value of cord." It is further described as "a rugged manufactured board that nails direct to studs and rafters. Weather or rough usage does not readily harm it.

"The result is a strong house—warm in winter, cool in summer—and 25 per cent to 35 per cent of the fuel bill is saved." It comes in stock sizes, ⅞ of an inch thick, and 4 feet wide. There are various lengths from 8 to 12 feet. It weighs about sixty pounds per 100 square feet.

Waterproofed Stucco Is Durable Material

The home built of permanently waterproofed stucco leaves little to be desired. It is durable and offers beauty and variety in its finishes, tones and color schemes, is lasting in body strength and requires very little for maintenance. In the choice of this material it is well for the builder to carefully investigate and build with a stucco known to be thoroughly waterproof, a feature of utmost importance in determining the merit of this material.

Stucco can be applied to concrete, tile, wood or metal lath—if the latter is used it is well to back-plaster to guard against rust or corrosion.

New Building Material Made of Waste Paper

A new building material made from waste paper and designed for ceilings and wall linings has been perfected by a Swedish engineer, and production on a large scale soon will be undertaken.

The raw materials are ordinary waste paper such as accumulates in cities, clay, and sulphate lye, the cheapness of which warrants an inexpensive finished product.

The covering is said to be fireproof and durable; can be applied by unskilled labor, will take paper, paint or stain, and can even be polished. It is a good nonconductor, and does not respond to the changes in temperature.

Choice of Contractor

Too much care cannot be taken in the selection of a contractor to build your home. The fact that he has constructed many homes is not necessarily a favorable recommendation. Good will and consequent recommendations of satisfied customers is a builder's best asset, and to that end it is well to examine some of the buildings which he has built, preferably homes which have been constructed for over two or three years, as this length of time will show up faulty construction

THE KITCHEN CABINET

(©, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

My fairest child, I have no song to give you;
No lark could pipe to skies so dull and gray;
Yet, ere we part, one lesson I can give you
For every day:
Be good, sweet maid, and let who will be clever;
Do noble things, not dream them all day long;
And so make life, death and that vast forever
One grand sweet song.

OUT OF THE ORDINARY

Use the sirup left from pickled peaches or pears to baste the roast. It imparts a delightful flavor to veal and lamb. Then use some of the sirup to add to the mincemeat pie. It also makes a delicious pudding sauce for a plain unflavored cottage pudding.

The tender young turnips that come into the markets now may be made into baskets—hollowed out to form cups and filled with creamed peas, diced carrots, creamed celery or in fact any creamed vegetable. The bits that are hollowed out may be minced and added to the vegetable soup for the next day or the day following.

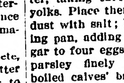
Carrots With Lemon Butter.—Cook carrots cut with a vegetable shredder into lattice-shaped pieces in very little water until tender; let them steam on the back of the stove in two or three tablespoonfuls of water to a pint of carrots. Season with salt, a dash of cayenne and the juice of half a lemon; keep hot and add two tablespoonfuls of butter shortly before the time for serving.

New Beets.—Cook beets without peeling until tender. Drop into cold water and skin them. Reheat after chopping in the chopping bowl, add plenty of butter, salt and pepper. If olive oil is liked that may be used instead of butter, and add a dash of lemon juice.

Eggs Stuffed With Anchovies.—Cook as many eggs as are needed until hard cooked to the center. Remove the shells and cut into halves lengthwise. Take out the yolks and pound them with as many skinned and boned anchovies as there are eggs, season with pepper, nutmeg, salt and a little softened butter. Fill each half of egg with the mixture, put them when very hot on oval pieces of hot buttered bread or toast. This makes a nice hot supper dish. One may serve the eggs with a seasoned sauce if desired.

Let me laugh for the pure joy of living,
Let me laugh like a child at his play,
And the heart of the race will reserve me a place
And be glad that I traveled this way.
—Biddell.

HOMELY EVERYDAY DISHES



A hot soup is ever welcome for dinner, luncheon or supper. Here is one that is rich and savory:

Onion Soup With Eggs.—Cut up six white onions very thin and fry in tablespoonful of butter until brown. Add a quart of water and a pint of milk, season with one teaspoonful of salt, a dash of cayenne, four beaten egg yolks, a bit of mace and a teaspoonful of sugar. Cook slowly for an hour and strain, add a cupful of cream and a tablespoonful of flour mixed with the cream; cook until the starch is well cooked. Add the egg yolks at the last just before serving

Eggs De Lesseps.—Saute the eggs in a pan with a small amount of butter, taking care not to break the egg yolks. Place them on a hot platter and dust with salt; brown butter in a frying pan, adding a teaspoonful of vinegar to four eggs and one teaspoonful of parsley finely minced. Serve with boiled calves' brains sauted in butter, then pour the sauce over the eggs and brains.

Chicken Baked in Milk.—Take a nice fat fowl one year old, cut up as for frying, season well, roll in seasoned flour and put into a hot frying pan with sweet fat to brown. Turn every piece until nicely browned, now place in a deep baking pan and cover with fresh milk. Place in a slow oven and cook until the chicken is tender and the milk and flour cooked down to a rich white sauce. If liked a bit of onion may be added for additional flavor.

Savory Toast.—Chicken gravy poured over nicely browned, buttered toast makes a fine supper dish. Serve with a crisp lettuce salad and a cupful of hot cocoa.

Prune Pie.—Soak three fourths of a pound of prunes in cold water, stew until tender in the same water, stone and cool. Line a pie plate with pastry, add the prunes with sugar to taste, the juice of half a lemon and its grated rind, two tablespoonfuls of butter and flour well-blended, all well mixed, and cover with a top crust or with a meringue. Nutmeg may be used in place of the lemon rind if preferred.

D. 1917, at 8 o'clock A. M., in Book 80 of Mortgages, on page 383,

Which said mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said D. B. Bakke, Mortgagee to Deposit Bank of Winona, Winona, Minnesota, by written assignment dated January 16th, A. D. 1917, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County, Minnesota, on the 24th day of January, 1917, at 8 o'clock A. M., in Book 86 of Mortgages, on page 32.

And which said mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said Deposit Bank of Winona, Winona, Minnesota, to Deposit Bank & Trust Company, a corporation under the laws of the State of Minnesota, by written assignment dated July 30th, A. D. 1923, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County, Minnesota, on the 14th day of February, 1924, at 1 o'clock P. M., in Book 110 of Mortgages, on page 246.

And whereas, the said Deposit Bank & Trust Company, the assignee and holder of said mortgage, on February 14th, 1924, paid delinquent taxes upon the mortgaged property hereinafter described in the sum of One Hundred One and 5-100 Dollars; and whereas, the said Deposit Bank & Trust Company, the assignee and holder of said mortgage, has elected and hereby does elect to declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice, under the terms and conditions of said mortgage and the Power of Sale therein contained; and whereas, there is actually due and claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of Fourteen Hundred ($1400.00) Dollars, with accumulated interest from the 3rd day of January, 1922, at the rate of six per cent per annum; and whereas, the said Power of Sale has become operative and no action or proceedings having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

NOW, THEREFORE, Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the Power of Sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and covered by said mortgage, viz:

The Southwest Quarter (SW¼) of Section Thirty-six (36), in Township One Hundred Fifty-six (156) North, of Range Forty-two (42) West of the Fifth Principal Meridian, in Minnesota, containing 160 acres more or less according to the United States government survey thereof, in Marshall County and State of Minnesota.

Which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Marshall County, at the front door of the County Court House, in the City of Warren, in said County and State on the 15th day of April, 1924, at 10 o'clock A. M. of that day at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash, to pay the amount then due on said mortgage and interest and the sum of $101.05 for taxes paid on said described premises, with interest from date of payment, together with the costs and disbursements of such sale and Fifty Dollars attorney's fees stipulated in said mortgage in case of foreclosure.

Dated February 21, 1924.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default having been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage containing a Power of Sale, by reason of which default said Power of Sale has become operative, and the assignee of the mortgagee hereinafter named is authorized to declare the whole sum due and he hereby does declare said sum due, which mortgage was executed by Svenke G. Svenkeson, a single man, Mortgagor, to Deposit Trust & Savings Bank, Winona, Minnesota, a corporation under the laws of the State of Minnesota, Mortgagee, dated October 23rd, 1920, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County, Minnesota, on the 12th day of November, A. D. 1920, at 8 o'clock A. M., in Book 92 of Mortgages, on page 327,

Which said mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said Deposit Trust & Savings Bank, Winona, Minnesota, Mortgagee, to Jacob Kaldunski, by written assignment dated March 31st, 1921, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County, Minnesota, on the 21st day of January, 1924, at 8 o'clock A. M., in Book 110 of Mortgages, on page 221.

And whereas, the said Jacob Kaldunski, the assignee and holder of said mortgage, has elected and hereby does elect to declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice, under the terms and conditions of said mortgage and the Power of Sale therein contained; and whereas, there is actually due and claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of Thirty-five Hundred ($3500.00) Dollars, with accumulated interest from October 23rd, 1920, at the rate of six and one-half per cent per annum; and whereas, the said Power of Sale has become operative and no action or proceedings having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

NOW, THEREFORE, Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the Power of Sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and covered by said mortgage, viz:

The Southeast Quarter of the Southwest Quarter (SE¼SW¼) and the South Half of the Southeast Quarter (S½SE¼) of Section Eleven (11) and the Northwest Quarter of the Northeast Quarter (NW¼NE¼) of Section Fourteen (14), in Township One Hundred Fifty-six (156) North, of Range Forty-two (42) West of the Fifth Principal Meridian, in Marshall County and State of Minnesota.

Which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Marshall County, at the Front door of the County Court House, in the City of Warren, in said County and State on the 15th day of April, 1924 at 10:30 o'clock A. M. of that day at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash, to pay the amount then due on said mortgage and interest and all delinquent taxes, together with the costs and disbursements of such sale and Seventy-five Dollars attorney's fees stipulated in said mortgage in case of foreclosure.

Dated February 21, 1924.

How the Average Man and Woman May Help Nominate President Coolidge

One of the most remarkable political delevopments of the times is the popularity of President Coolidge among those who, ordinarily, are little interested in politics.

This comes about because it is very apparent that this quiet, modest man, whose endowment with worldly goods is less than that of any man who ever occupied the presidential chair, has during his public career steadfastly used conscience as his guide without considering the effect on his political fortunes. He has confounded many politicians, men who "play the game," because, by doing what he thought was right without compromise or endeavor to placate "both sides" he has won more favor among men and women than those who are prone to straddle and evade.

In the fact that President Coolidge has convictions and the courage of his convictions, and in the further fact that the American people are intelligent and recognize this, lies the almost unanimous desire on the part of the ordinary citizen, who dislikes ordinary political methods, to see him nominated and elected. The average man and woman owes it to himself and herself, and to this country of ours which we ourselves rule, to make it manifest that Coolidge is the real choice of the real people and to allow no possible doubt of this to exist in the minds of the delegates to the conventions.

MAKE YOUR INFLUENCE FELT

The Republican caucuses to select delegates to the County conventions will be held March 3. Be sure you attend the caucus in your voting district and vote for the delegates to the County Convention who are uncompromisingly for Coolidge.

For these delegates in turn will select the delegates to the national convention which meets in Cleveland June 10. The beginnings of the huge Coolidge ratification is in the district caucus.

The County Conventions are to be held March 5, the Congressional Conventions March 7, and the State Convention March 8.

SAVE MARCH 3 AS THE DAY ON WHICH YOU WILL DO SOMETHING FOR YOUR COUNTRY AND YOUR PARTY.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale Notice.

Whereas, default has occurred in the conditions of that certain mortgage made by Andy Miller and Ida Miller, his wife, mortgagors, to Frank L. Heinze, mortgagee, dated the 1st day of November, 1922, and with a power of sale therein contained, recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Marshall and State of Minnesota on the 12th day of December, 1922, at 10 o'clock A. M., in Book 108 of Mortgages on page 460, which said mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said Frank L. Heinze, mortgagee, to Charles L. Heinze and Alma Heinze, by written assignment dated the 4th day of January, 1923, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds on the 5th day of January, 1923, at 1 o'clock P. M., in Book 86 of Mortgages on page 516, such default consisting in the non-payment of interest due and payable upon said mortgage on November 1, 1923, amounting to the sum of two hundred dollars ($200.00), and, whereas, the assignees of said mortgage have declared and do hereby declare the whole sum secured by said mortgage to be due and payable, and, whereas, there is now claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon said mortgage, the sum of five thousand three hundred one dollars ($5301.00), and no action or proceedings having been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

NOW, THEREFORE, Notice is hereby given, That by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, to-wit:

The North half of the Northeast quarter (N½NE¼) and the North half of the Southeast quarter of the Northeast quarter, (N½SE¼NE¼) of Section Thirty-two (32) Township one hundred fifty-six (156) North, of Range Forty-three (43) West of the fifth principal meridian in Minnesota, containing 100 acres more or less according to the government survey thereof in the County of Marshall and State of Minnesota, which sale will be made by the sheriff of Marshall County, at the west front door of the court house, in the city of Warren, in said county and state, on the 12th day of April, 1924, at 10 o'clock A. M., of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt of five thousand three hundred one dollars ($5301.00), and the interest, and taxes, if any, on said premises, and one hundred dollars ($100.00) attorney's fees, and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

Dated February 26th, 1924.

Chapter 223 Sec. 7, Session Laws of Minnesota for 1917

Reconsideration upon complaint-appeal-

Upon complaint being made to the county attorney by a taxpayer of the county that any person is unlawfully receiving an allowance out of the county funds on account of an alleged dependent child it shall be the duty of the county attorney to investigate such complaint and if he finds it to have probable cause to bring it to the attention of the court by appropriate proceedings. The Court shall hear such evidence and argument as shall be offered and shall thereupon make its order confirming, modifying or setting aside the order complained of, from which decision an appeal may be taken as in a civil action.

A Strong Bank Made Stronger

THE GOVERNMENT of this bank and the MANAGEMENT of its affairs is vested in a Board of Five Directors consisting of two dirt farmers, two bankers, and the manager of the local creamery.

We are pleased to announce to our People the addition of three new members to our Board of Directors, namely: Louis Wegge, P. L. Anderson and Fred D. Voth. These men are well known to all of you as conservative, capable and successful men. They need no introduction. They understand thoroughly the needs of the people and the advice and management which they are capable of giving is most valuable to our institution.

SAFETY to our DEPOSITORS is the first consideration in the management of this bank. Loans and Discounts, which constitute the "back bone" of the bank, are carefully examined once every month. Officers and directors are at all times in close touch with the affairs of their institution.

The Public is invited to feel at home with us. Make this bank your Financial Headquarters. We ask for your confidence and support. Your Welfare is our Welfare.

Our Business System

For the benefit of all our patrons, it should be of interest to them to know our method and system of doing business.

We pay according to quality, 3 cents more per pound for the butterfat in first grade cream. All shareholders receive an 8 per cent dividend on shares of $25.00, which means $2.00 every year for each share. Besides the dividend, shareholders receive one-half cent more per pound for butterfat than non-shareholdes, regardless of whether they are monthly or cash patrons. To illustrate what this amounts to, let us figure what the amount would be on our largest patron for 1923. His total pounds of butterfat was 3593, times one-half cent equeals $17.96, plus a $2 00 dividend would make the extra amount, by being a shareholder, the neat sum of $19.96. Shareholders are part owners of the creamery, have a vote and something to say at the annual meetings, can hold office and help all the rest of the shareholders in making this the best creamery in the northwest. We are the biggest in the county, let us hold our own. It is advertising of this kind that shows others what is being done in the vicinity of Holt.

Our service is cream separator Insurance

No doubt you have your house, barns and stock insured. Every business man believes in insurance. Our Authorized De Laval Service is another kind of insurance—cream separator insurance against loss of cream and time, and which will add years of life to the separator.

Bring in your complete separator when you are coming to town, and let our separator service man overhaul it. It may not need a thing—but a thorough overhauling will certainly make it run better, easier and longer.

In the driveway down the yard the girl handed Brownie's rein to her father and ran into the house. When she returned a moment later, she had on a short riding skirt, and was buckling around her waist as she walked the holster of a small and very fancy revolver.

The preacher allowed his eyes to stray over the trim figure and rest on the weapon.

"A present from—Jack," the girl answered to his look, at the same time dropping her fingers to the neat holster—"he trapped mink t' git the money."

"Do they—girls, I mean—carry such —things in the Flatwoods?"

"Sometimes—y'u see, Jack and I ride t'gether, and shoot target s' much—"

"Why, I have one of those—things."

"Have y'u—bring it along and we'll shoot target."

The preacher handed Rex's bridle rein to her and hurried into the house. The old banker, grinning toward his daughter at the eccentric dominie's mincing step, suddenly seemed to remember something, tapped the breast pocket of his faded coat; drew out the formidable letter addressed to Jack Warhope and handed it to the girl, with the request that she deliver it at the first handy opportunity.

Wondering, the girl looked at the letter and put it away in her blouse, just as the preacher returned carrying in one hand the very dependable-looking ivory-handled six-gun that had thudded against the bottom of the skiff on the day of the seining trip. In the other hand he held a very serviceable holster, with its pouch for powder flask, bullets and caps hanging from the belt.

"I bought them just before setting out on my journey for the—West," he explained.

The girl took the beautiful weapon, fully loaded and freshly capped, and looked at it admiringly, while the old banker bent over her shoulder.

"W'y, this gun's be'n shot—a lot," she said, lifting the hammer a trifle and slowly revolving the cylinder.

The preacher dropped a quick look at the weapon.

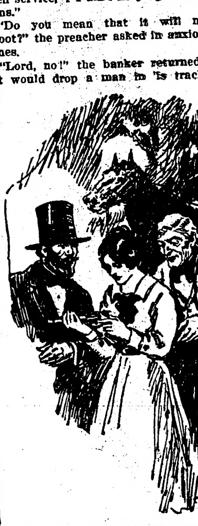
"Gun," he repeated, with a mite of hesitation that escaped the others—"is that what you call them? The man who sold it to me called it a revolver. I do wonder if he sold me a second-hand one."

The old banker laughed—raspy raucous.

"Cheated a-plenty, parson. This Dolly Varden cannon o' your'n has seen service, 'r I ain't no judge of six-guns."

"Do you mean that it will not shoot?" the preacher asked in anxious tones.

"Lord, no!" the banker returned—"it would drop a man in 'ts tracks, but they cheated y'u if they sold it to y'u f'r new."



"W'y, This Gun's Be'n Shot a Lot" She Said.

Texie handed the weapon back to its owner. He thrust it awkwardly into the holster and stood fumbling the belt, wrong side out, around his waist. The girl laughed, showed him how to buckle it on under the somber frock coat, and sprang to the saddle, with an ease and grace that lifted his spectacled eyes.

After two or three unsuccessful attempts he finally succeeded in scrambling to Rex's back and followed her down the drive, where the old banker already had the gate open.

Just through the gate the girl fell suddenly thoughtful.

"Wait—I'll be back in a minute," she said and touching Brownie with the whip, dashed away up the River road. A moment later under the big elm by the barn-lot gate at the Warhope homestead, she drew rein. While Brownie stood prancing, still a mite resentful at the touch of the whip, the girl's head lifted, her throat and lips tightened, and the clear call of a king cardinal made the great elm musical.

A big man with a mighty spread of shoulder, at work in the cattle pens, lifted his head and listened. Next moment Jack Warhope appeared around the corner of a shed, vaulted the fence and came striding down the barn lot.

"Texie! W'y—"

He opened the gate and came out into the road. The girl smiled upon him curiously; fumbled in her blouse; drew out the letter in the formidable manila envelope and handed it to him. He took it; gazed at it, and then looked up at the girl.

"'Not to be opened until his twenty-first birthday,'" he read—"what d' y'u s'pose Pap Simon's up to now?"

"That's what I be'n wonderin'," was the thoughtful answer, "but I reckon we'll have t' wait till—till—"

"Six more days," he finished, as the girl tightened the reins and pulled Brownie's mouth up from the grass.

"How'd y'u like t' go ridin'?"

"Me?"

The dimples flashed at him.

"Mr. Hopkins wants t' go."

"Hopkins?"

He shrugged his great shoulders and glanced down the road where the preacher sat on his horse awkwardly in front of the red-roofed cottage.

"Jack—"

He turned back to her; waited for her to go on.

"Be nice to 'im. He knows s' much, and he was good t' pore—Ken—"

He bent his head in respect for the minor note. The soft purr of the elm twigs came out faintly clear on the drowsy day; the girl sat drawing the cracker of the riding whip up and down between the stirrup and the toe of her shapely small shoe.

"Texie—"

He had looked up; the girl turned her eyes toward him.

"Don't let this—man git no holt on y'u. He ain't no man f'r—you. His ways ain't—our ways—"

"How d' y'u know I'm goin'?"

"Ain't y'u?"

He smoothed the mane on Brownie's neck; half turned toward the gate.

"I am if he is."

"Bring y'ur r'volver—we're goin' t' target shoot."

He wheeled back, for the first time he seemed to notice the holster at her waist.

"I 'low I will!" he muttered.

CHAPTER XIII

A Face at the Smudged Window.

Aunt Liza happened to have "drapped a stitch" in her knitting and had stepped to the window the better to see to "pick it up" when the three riders came up the Eagle Hollow road. She looked up carelessly from her tedious task, but grew instantly attentive with the first glance.

"Come 'ere, Nick—ain't that Big Jack an' Texie an' the new parson?"

"Well, I'll be derned," grunted the old man, coming to the window and looking out, his pipe poised between his fingers—"what d' y'u think o' that?"

"What I think's a-plenty," the primly positive old woman snorted, "out gallantin' around like that, with two beaux a-traipsin' after 'er—an' that preacher in the Flatwoods bar'ly long enough t' git 'is chair warm. I use'n t' think right smart o' Texie, but I cayn't swaller no sich carryin's-on as she's a-havin' with the new parson. He ain't never be'n reg'lar installed, nohow, an' if he keeps on like this, 'e won't be.

"Texie Colin may live t' rue the day she draps a fine lad like Big Jack an' takes up with a teetotal furriner, jist b'cayse 'e happens t' be gallantin' an' full o' p'laver."

"Aw, I dunno," the old man interrupted, turning away from the window as the three riders disappeared behind a bend in the road a little above the house, "jist b'cayse she happens t' go out ridin' with 'im, hit ain't no sign she's a-goin' t' take up with 'im."

"That's jist your way," Aunt Liza retorted, still standing at the window and fussing with the snarled knitting, "alw'ys tryin' t' smoothen things over f'r everybody. Did you look how 'e set 'is hoss, 'longside o' Big Jack?—huh—I wonder the second best hoss in the Flatwoods would put up with sich ridin'. I knowed that preacher wouldn't do t' tie to the minute 'e lit. Hain't no sense in a preacher bein' that good-lookin', nohow—now there's the business of it, I-jeeminy."

Aunt Liza's grim lips twisted into an acid silence. She bent again over the "drapped stitch"; "picked it up" at last and came back to her rocking chair.

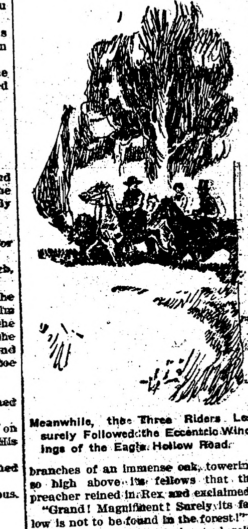
The old man, doubtless glad to rest after his long tramp in the woods that morning, sat with his pipe dangling between his fingers and tapping his chair, his head bent forward, pondering the three-angled drama—the eternal triangle—at that moment being staged within the narrow valley.

The click of the busy knitting needles, the muffled tapping of the pipe, fell at length into a sort of rhythm, which, with the tick of the dull-faced clock on the mantel-shelf, seemed to enhance the silence rather than disturb it, and to bring out the peace and repose of the room.

Meanwhile, the three riders leisurely followed the eccentric windings of the Eagle Hollow road. Seen through the tangle of vine and bush and tree in teasing glimpses on their left, the erratic little stream that inflicted on the road its many turnings, sparkled by in the sunlight. On their right, across a picturesque rail fence, rose the wooded bluffs that led to the uplands of the Warhope homestead.

Cleared only to the width of a wagon, so narrow that the bordering bushes sometimes raked their stirrups, the road itself was a thing to invite the wood fairies. It lay for the most part in checkered shade, the feet of the horses playing almost constantly among a delicate tracery of leaf and branch and stem, flung down by the sun in dancing patches upon the grassy track. The great trees of the bluffs reached their giant arms over it and hovered it in grateful shade, while cliff and scar unwound their successive pictures as the three rode along.

More than a mile up the hollow the road passed under the far-flung branches of an immense oak, towering so high above its fellows that the preacher reined in Rex and exclaimed:



Meanwhile, the Three Riders Leisurely Followed the Eccentric Windings of the Eagle Hollow Road.

"Grand! Magnificent! Surely its fellow is not to be found in the forest!"

"Eagle Oak," the girl observed, reining up Brownie by the side of the taller horse, "the king of the Flatwoods."

"It b'longs to the homestead," she went on. "The line runs right along here at the base of the bluff—that's the line-fence there. Black Rock and Eagle Oak, they're both on the homestead. Jack's—father had the original patent, 'r whatever they call it, made out t' his granfather, and signed by General Andrew Jackson himself. They say—"

The woodsman fidgeted in his saddle; glanced around at her from under the edges of his eyes. She caught the look and paused.

"Ah, it must be fine to have such a holding as that," the preacher commented. "I confess to some such longings myself, sometimes."

The remark not seeming to call for an answer, the girl merely shook the reins on Brownie's neck and they rode on—out from the shade of the great oak; up the narrow ribbon of road, with the picturesquely broken valley unfolding its wonders; the preacher constantly reminded of something he had seen in the Alps, or elsewhere in his travels, and overflowing with effusive exclamations punctuated with a laugh so loud and blarey that it fairly made his horse shy.

The preacher's laugh was the most strikingly odd expression of his strikingly odd personality—a sort of hand-forged laugh that did not seem to come into existence naturally; a kind of sarcastic exclamation point that exploded at untimely and most unexpected intervals in his conversation.

As they passed the spot where the sadly winsome face of the mountain girl had flared forth from the copse that morning and he had picked up Uncle Nick's trail, Jack Warhope, sitting his horse as only a man trained to the saddle can and riding for the most part in silence, darted a quick look into the bushes—a look that quite escaped the others.

The one girl and the two men—a combination of infinite possibilities—had reached the point where the road left the hollow and picked its way through the broken passes of the bluffs to the uplands, when the preacher stopped his horse and sat gazing up and across the narrow valley.

Russian Chemist Makes Strong Wire From Salt

A wonderful discovery has been made by a Russian scientist, who claims to have found a method of making wire stronger than steel out of common rock salt. His discovery is the result of a series of extraordinary experiments in the mutability of metals by structural chemistry.

The scientist found that by submitting the rock salt to high heat pressure before the elementary crystals began to decay he arrested the decay by changing the structural arrangement of the atoms and molecules, and this change increased the durability and ductility of the substance 300 times, says London Tit-Bits. He is continuing his experiments with other metal substances.

If this discovery can be applied to metals it will revolutionize the world. It will mean, amongst other things, trains capable of running 200 miles an hour and turbine steamers that could reach Australia in ten days.

Owners of Coffee Rooms Thrown Into the Sea

Coffee came first out of Arabia and Abyssinia, according to the best information available. The first reference to it in literature was made by Avicenna, a Mohammedan physician, who died in 1037. "It fortifies the members," he wrote; "it cleanses the skin and dries up the humidities that are under it and gives an excellent smell to all the body."

The "kaveh kanes" of Mecca were the first coffee houses. Kair Bey, the governor, discovered that those who met in the coffee houses discussed politics and religion, sometimes critically. So he ordered the kaveh kanes closed. The sultan at Cairo disapproved of the governor's indiscreet zeal and had him executed.

But in Constantinople, where plots against the oppressive government were hatched over the coffee, the public houses were closed and reopening meant that the proprietor was sewed in a sack and thrown into the Bosporus.—Detroit News.

Will Your Family Be Happy This Spring?

If yours is one of the few remaining families lacking an automobile, no doubt you have finally decided to get one within the next four months.

A low-priced modern automobile like the Chevrolet has become indispensable to the family of ordinary income. A million other families can easily prove to you that the better way is with Chevrolet. The beauties of nature, the interesting and educational features of other places and ways of living, remain things to read about or seen dimly in cold photographs until you are free to get to them at your convenience and pleasure.

But, suppose you have definitely decided to buy a Chevrolet this spring. This does not necessarily mean you are going to get it. Anyone posted on conditions in the automobile business will tell you that thousands of families are going to be unable to get cars this spring. This has been true almost every spring for the last ten years. There are just two ways of making sure of getting your Chevrolet for use when the flowers and balmy breezes of spring lure you to the country roads—buy it now or order it now.

If you do not want to pay for it in full at this time, any Chevrolet dealer will arrange terms to suit your convenience. You will be surprised to learn how easy it is to pay for a Chevrolet and use it while you are paying for it.

Please realize these statements are made by us in good faith and we mean just what we say about the possible difficulties of getting a car delivered to you this spring if you wait until then to order it. The only way to be sure of a Chevrolet this Spring is to order it NOW.

FARM AID PLANS ARE COMPLETED

$10,000,000 To Be Thrown Into Northwest To Assist Banks And Farmers

Minneapolis—Immediate assistance for farmers and banks in the Northwest was decided on Saturday at a meeting of officers of the $10,000,000 agricultural credit corporation formed recently by bankers and businessmen to relieve economic distress in some sections.

The corporation officers and some of the directors and executive committee members met in an all day session with 40 bankers, businessmen, and agriculturalists of Minnesota, North and South Dakota, and Montana, and arrived at specific work to be undertaken immediately.

The plans for first work were outlined by C. T. Jaffray, president of the Soo line, who is chairman of the directors of the new corporation, as follows:

To endeavor to furnish capital for reopening of good banks which have been forced to close on account of pressure from depositors.

To furnish additional help by purchase of paper from banks now open and solvent, to strengthen their reserves and put them in position to take care of the usual spring demand.

To assist the farmers in the matter of unpaid taxes.

Bankers, businessmen and farmers from the four northwest states were called into the conference for advice regarding the opening work of the corporation, whose officers seek to give prompt and efficient assistance in relieving the economic distress in certain districts of the northwest.

According to Mr. Jaffray, the corporation will have money available as soon as it is needed and in whatever amounts are required. The executive committee, he said, is expected to meet next week to adopt forms and place funds at the disposal of the corporation for distribution as loans.

Arthur P. Kemp, president of the corporation, and other active officers of the corporation, arranged at the meeting to carry out the policies outlined.

FORBES, THOMPSON INDICTED

Former Director of Veterans' Bureau Says He Welcomes Trial.

Chicago.—A further investigation into transactions reported by the federal grand jury which returned indictments against Charles R. Forbes, former director of the United States Veterans' Bureau, to involve graft by government officers, was indicted by assurance from John W. Crim, special assistant to the attorney general in charge of the prosecutions, that the matters would be laid before Attorney General Daugherty and President Coolidge.

The grand jurors in their special report declared the transactions uncovered by them but not pursued for want of jurisdiction, include payment "of certain sums of money to two members of congress, speculation by one or more government officials where official information was used, acceptance of money by certain individuals for obtaining clemency for prisoners and acceptance of money for obtaining through acquaintance with officials, permits for intoxicating liquor."

John W. Thompson, named with Forbes in indictments charging bribery and conspiracy to defraud the government, surrendered Saturday night to federal officials and was released under $10,000 bond. Elwood Godman, attorney for Thompson, indicated that Colonel Forbes also will probably come to Chicago soon to surrender and give bond for the same amount.

GROESBECK MAY BE NAMED

Coolidge Has Name Under Consideration—Is Well Recommended.

Washington.—Governor Groesbeck of Michigan was added to the list of those understood to be under consideration by President Coolidge for appointment as secretary of the navy in succession to Edwin Denby, who will retire March 10.

The Michigan governor arrived in Washington Saturday and White House officials said it was expected he could confer with the president before leaving the capital. Friends of Governor Groesbeck, including Senator Couzens, Republican, Michigan, who conferred with the president prior to the governor's arrival, professed to have no knowledge as to whether he was being considered for the naval secretaryship or whether he would accept it if it were offered him.

Miner Held in N. D. Mine Fire.

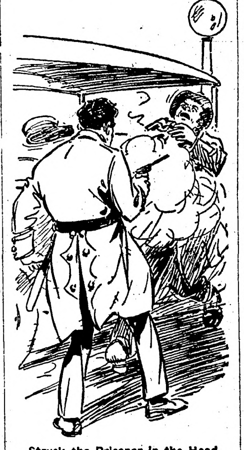
Bismarck, N. D.—One man suspected of having knowledge of the origin of the fire which has been burning for several days in the mine of the Haynes Coal Mining company at Haynes, N. D., has been arrested, according to J. A. Kitchen, member of the state emergency commission, who returned here from Haynes. The fire has been checked, Mr. Kitchen said. The man arrested, he said, is a discharged miner of the Haynes company. He will be given a hearing some time this month, Mr. Kitchen added.

POLICE DEADSHOT KILLS PRISONER IN PISTOL DUEL

Alleged Wife Abuser Fires at Captor Who Was Taking Him to Jail.

New York.—Detective Lieutenant Eugene Dubelbeiss of West Hoboken started practice with a pistol in the Spanish war in Cuba and he has continued it through his years of service. He became one of the fastest men on the draw and one of the surest shots in the police departments of New Jersey, and his years of effort saved his life.

The lieutenant was sent with a warrant to arrest Otto Herring, forty, at 536 Elm street, West Hoboken, who was charged with abusing his wife. Mrs. Herring warned Dubelbeiss that her husband was armed and had threatened to shoot on sight any policeman who tried to arrest him. The lieutenant surprised him and had Herring's hands in the air before he could start anything.



Struck the Prisoner in the Head.

Failed to See Revolver.

A search of Herring and of the house failed to reveal a revolver and Dubelbeiss took his prisoner to an automobile, believing the wife to have exaggerated her husband's dangerous tendencies. With Herring riding on the front seat with him the lieutenant started for the police station.

The automobile was turning the corner at Charles street and Bergentine avenue when Herring suddenly drew a revolver which he had concealed in his clothes. Dubelbeiss did not see the revolver until the first shot was fired. Herring fired again and missed. A third shot went through the lieutenant's collar but did not injure him.

As Dubelbeiss struck the ground Herring was aiming a fourth shot, but the lieutenant's gun came out of his holster and he fired. The first shot struck the prisoner in the head and killed him. Dubelbeiss fired a second time and the second bullet also found its mark.

Says Children of Today Will Live Much Longer

Fort Worth, Tex.—The children of today will live an average of 12 years longer than their grandparents, according to Dr. Allan Craig of Chicago, associate director of the American College of Surgeons, who attended a meeting here recently of the Texas-Oklahoma-New Mexico section of the American College of Surgeons.

Quoting figures to show the modern tendency toward longevity, Doctor Craig said that "if we had the same death rate today we had in 1880, there would have been 750,000 more deaths in the United States than there were." On any given day there are 8,000,000 sick persons in the United States, he said, adding that one-third of this affliction is due to preventable diseases.

"Every man, woman and child should submit to a thorough physical examination at least once a year," he declared. "Only in this way can we determine where our weak spots are."

Device Aids "Sub" Pilot to See While Submerged

Rome.—According to a dispatch from Civitavecchia, Professor Guglielmotti is said to have made a discovery which is destined to revolutionize the physical laws hitherto believed to prevail with respect to the refraction of light through an elastic body, such as water.

The professor asserts that the discovery, which resulted from long research and experiments, will enable the pilots of submarines to see through the water even at great depth.

He declares that, since September, earthquakes have been rumbling through his island like thunder in the summer skies. Akun island lies in the Aleutian chain and its light in summer guides ships through Unimak pass en route to Nome. In winter it is dark on account of ice floes in Bering sea.

Is Your Back Giving Out?

ARE you miserable with an aching back? Do you get up lame and stiff—lag through the day, tired, weak and worn out? Do you wonder why you are so run down? Many times this condition is due to weak kidneys. Winter's colds and chills are hard on the kidneys. The kidneys are apt to slow up in their work of filtering body-poisons from the blood. These poisons accumulate. Then comes backache, with rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness and kidney irregularities.

Don't risk serious kidney trouble! Use Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys. Doan's have helped thousands. They are recommended by many grateful people. Ask your neighbor!

"Use Doan's," Say These Good Folks:

Mrs. John Willey, New Rockford, N. D., says: "I had the flu and it settled on my kidneys, causing them to act irregularly. My back was lame and painful. I was dizzy and had to take hold of something for fear of falling. I decided to try Doan's Pills and it didn't take over two boxes to cure me up in good shape."

Frank Wade, prop. shoe shop, Briggs Ave., Park River, N. D., says: "My kidneys were out of order, giving me some trouble. The kidney secretions passed too frequently at night, causing much annoyance. My back was weak and lame. Hearing so often of Doan's Pills, I began using them. Doan's drove all symptoms of kidney trouble away and they cured me and the trouble hasn't come back."

Origin of Honeydew Melon.

The original seed of the honeydew melon is said to have been obtained from a melon shipped from Africa to New York city. The seed was planted at Rocky Ford, Colo., and crossed with other varieties for two or three seasons. The so-called honey-dew melon is the result. As yet this melon has not been brought into a stable condition of reproduction.

WHY INDUSTRY IS MISUNDERSTOOD

Geo. E. Roberts Tells How Co-operative Character of Corporations Is Obscured.

RADICAL AGITATION RESULTS

Maintenance of Present Industrial System Necessary to Maintain Present Standards of Comfort for All the People, He Says.

The modern industrial system is at bottom a co-operative organization, but this fact is obscured by the complexity of huge enterprises, George E. Roberts, noted authority on business and finance, declared in a recent speech before the American Bankers Association Convention at Atlantic City, N. J.

"The primitive man knew that the harder he worked the more he would have," Mr. Roberts said: "When a man exchanged work with a neighbor he had the whole transaction under his eyes. But when a man works with thousands of others for a great corporation he doesn't see any definite relationship between what he does and what he gets. He doesn't know whether he is getting a fair share of the industrial results or not, and he suspects not.

"The modern industrial system is essentially co-operative, but you cannot have effective co-operation without understanding. Because people do not see the industrial organization as a whole we have the tendency for society to break up into groups and blocs and unions and organizations of one kind and another, many of whom are trying to advance their own interests at the expense of society as a whole. The population of this country today could not be supported in the state of comfort to which it is accustomed without the modern, specialized organization.

Bolshevism in Russia

"The extremity of social disorganization has been seen in Russia, where has been enacted the greatest tragedy in the history of the world. What happened there will happen everywhere unless there is a development of the capacity of people to work together and understand each other.

"In its final form the revolution in Russia was against what is called the capitalistic system, or the private ownership of property and direction of industry. The results of the revolution are so calamitous in Russia as to give a check to revolutionary tendencies in other countries. Yet the economic principles of Bolshevism are influencing public opinion more or less everywhere.

"The motive behind all this agitation is the desire to establish equality. The social struggles of the past have been for political equality. Now the demand is for equality in possessions, equality in incomes, equality in the management of industrial affairs. There is no argument against the aspirations of men for better social conditions, but radical ideas result from certain economic fallacies. One relates to the employment and service of private capital. Men read about vast sums of wealth belonging to individuals, and think of these sums as devoted exclusively to the owners. In fact wealth employed in production for the public market is rendering service to the entire community, no matter who owns it.

"The whole radical argument is like claiming that nobody ever got any benefit from the development of the steam engine but the owners of steam engines. Of course, the theory only needs to be stated for the fallacy to be apparent. The man who works for wages is benefited by every investment of capital which increases and cheapens the supply of the things for which his wages are spent.

The Service of Capital

"It is a fundamental truth that all productive property, although privately owned, is part of the equipment of society, by which its wants are supplied.

"The progress of the past has been accomplished under the individualistic system. The theory of this system is that every one shall have for his own, as nearly as may be, that which results from his own efforts. It is a system calculated to stimulate the initiative, call out the energies and develop the ability of each individual. He is free as to his undertakings: there are no restrictions except that he must seek his own gains by activities that are serviceable to the community as a whole, and he is inspired to labor, not simply by the desire for personal advantage, but by the desire to provide for loved ones, by the impulse to self-expression, to realize and develop his natural abilities, and by the ambition to achieve, to win distinction and to render service.

"It does not promise equality. Unless there is equality in production, in service, in effort, in resolution and in self-denial, why should there be equality in the division of results?

"The justification of individualism, however, is not merely in what it allows to the superior individual, but in the results that inure to all. It is in the interest of all to secure the most effective organization, the most effective management and the largest possible production. These cannot be had by adopting the fiction that all have equal ability for any position, or by any other system than that which judges men by their individual qualifications."

In King Tut's Time.

Folks in King Tut's time were not so slow. Carl Mitman, in cataloguing the ship models in his department of the Smithsonian Institution, points out that Egyptians built boat hulls of the correct form for speed nearly 4,000 years before modern scientific designers arrived at the same conclusions. Vikings had the right idea and Malay pirates had the wavelike theory of construction down to perfection when English and American sailboats were clumsy tubs.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale

Breadfruit.

The breadfruit, with the cocoanut and banana, furnishes the chief food of the natives of the Pacific islands. That is why we call it "breadfruit," because, for them, it takes the place of bread. Apart from its fruit, the tree itself is a very useful one, for, when beaten out, the inner bark forms a fine white cloth called tapa cloth.

MOST IMPORTANT NEWS OF WORLD

Big Happenings of the Week Condensed for the Benefit of Busy Readers.

Washington

Washington—The American dirigible, ZR-3, under construction in Germany, will be completed and ready for acceptance tests in April.

Washington—The house passed a senate bill granting to Edith Bolling Wilson, widow of Woodrow Wilson, the privilege of using the mails without cost.

Washington — William Phillips of Massachusetts, now under secretary of state, was nominated by President Coolidge to be ambassador to Belgium. He succeeds Ambassador Henry P. Fletcher, transferred recently to Rome.

Washington — Sweeping investigations of the national prohibition enforcement unit was provided for in a resolution introduced in the senate by Senator Edward I. Edwards (dem., N. J.), one of the wet leaders in congress.

Washington — Favorable report of a bill by Representative Fish (rep., N. Y.), which would authorize an appropriation of $10,000,000 for purchase in the United States of foodstuffs for relieving starving women and children of Germany was ordered by the house foreign affairs committee.

Washington—Estimates that 125,000 Indians may upon application become American citizens without sacrificing any of their tribal rights, were made by the Indian office in a report on the Snyder bill, recently reported favorably by the house committee on Indian affairs. Two-thirds of the country's Indian population now enjoy American citizenship.

Washington—Better terminal facilities for barge lines on the Mississippi river are needed for their successful operation, Secretary J. W. Weeks declared at a hearing before the house commerce committee on the Denison bill to create a government corporation to supervise inland waterway transportation. He also stressed the necessity of improving equipment used in such service.

Washington—Many people utilize the 1-cent postal cards for their correspondence. The postoffice department is using 1,253,000,000 this year, and is preparing to make almost 1,500,000,000 in 1925. They will cost $815,000 to manufacture and print at the government printing office here. Last year they cost 60 cents a thousand to manufacture; this year they will cost 64 cents a thousand.

Domestic

New York—A boatload of 800 babies and older youngsters, admitted in excess of quota limits as minor children of Italians, who are naturalized citizens and American residents, arrived in New York.

Sterling, Colo.—The death of Domini Cametta, 31, and Joe Notario, 5 years old, at the Sterling hospital brought the death toll of persons stricken following the eating of poisoned sausage to five.

Raleigh, N. C.—A Daniels for President club was organized to put the name of Josephus Daniels, former secretary of the navy, in the running for the democratic nomination for president.

Columbia, S. C.—Woodrow Wilson's birthday, Dec. 28, will be an annual holiday in South Carolina, under a joint resolution of the general assembly sent to Governor McLeod for his signature.

Philadelphia—Police believe they have caught this city's "bobbed hair bandit" in the person of 15 year old Dorothy Rodgers, arrested after an attempted holdup in which her male companion escaped, following an exchange of shots with police. One policeman was wounded seriously.

New York—William Bradley, onetime multimillionaire, builder of most of the Broadway-Seventh avenue subway the Homestead tunnel of the Pennsylvania railroad and the Croton siphon, died at his home here, virtually a pauper, it became known when his will was filed for probate.

Jackson, Miss.—Under a strict interpretation of the law—if a bill introduced in the lower house of the Mississippi legislature becomes a law—a person would not be permitted to take a bath in the privacy of his home unless he was attired in a bathing suit that covered the arms to the elbows and the legs to the knee.

Boston—The steamer Leviathan was found to have suffered serious damage from running aground last September in New York harbor. When the water drained away from the hull in dry dock it was apparent that it had fared worse than had been supposed. The steamer's plates were twisted and torn over an area about 220 feet long and 10 feet wide. In four or five places the hull was pierced through.

Chicago—Chicago dress manufacturers have declined the services of a federal mediator in the differences between them and striking members of the International Ladies Garment Workers union, contending that there is nothing to arbitrate.

Indianapolis—Harry O. Chamberlain, judge of the Marion county circuit court, was asked to act as special judge in the trial of Warren T. McCray, governor of Indiana, on an indictment returned by the county grand jury charging embezzlement of $155,000 of the state board of agriculture's funds.

New York—Charles N. Haskell, former governor of Oklahoma, resigned as chairman of the Middle States Oil corporation on account of illness.

New Orleans — Genevieve Clark Thomson, daughter of the late Champ Clark, formerly speaker of the house of representatives and wife of James M. Thomson, publisher of the New Orleans Item, is being seriously considered as a candidate for congress to serve for the unexpired term of Representative H. Garland Dupre, of the second congressional district, who died last week in Washington, it was learned here.

Sports

St. Paul—Mike Gonzales, St. Paul catcher, bought along with Charlie Dressen, third baseman, by Cincinnati in a deal announced, is going to the Brooklyn club, it developed, when a four-cornered deal involving the St. Paul, Cincinnati, Brooklyn and Philadelphia clubs, became known.

Cumberland, R. I.—The town council of Cumberland voted to grant a license to the Rhode Island department, Veterans of Foreign Wars, for a bout between Jack Dempsey, heavyweight champion, and Harry Wills, Negro challenger, to be held here July 4 or July 12. Attached to the resolution was the proviso that the promoters pay a fee of $10,000 to the town within 10 days.

St. Paul—Gene Tunney, holder of the American light heavyweight championship, and Jimmy Delaney, St. Paul challenger, will meet in the feature attraction of the March 17 fistic card in St. Paul. Jack Reddy, St. Paul matchmaker, announced that Delaney, who has been balking over terms, was in the fold. While Reddy did not disclose the terms it is thought that Mike Gibbons, his manager, and Reddy reached a compromise somewhere between $3,000 and $5,000.

Foreign

Tokio—The government decided to loan 80,000,000 yen to 26 Tokio insurance companies to enable them to pay claims arising from the earthquake and fire of last September.

Manila—Governor General Wood appointed Datu Ira, a Moro chieftain, to be acting governor of Lanao. He is the first of his race to hold such an office.

London—Lord Curzon and Lord Parmoor, discussing the Turkish peace treaty in the house of lords, said American nationals in Turkey would possess no advantage over British nationals as regards capitulations.

Tokio—Prince Regent Hirohito and his bride were greeted by throngs on their return from a week's wedding trip. While away from the capital they visited the national shrines and imperial tombs where, in accordance with the ancient Japanese custom, they formally reported their wedding to the spirits of their ancestors.

WEALTH GAINS 17.5 PERCENT

U. S. Census Figures Show Lack of Inflation in N. D. Real Estate Values

Fargo, N. D.—North Dakota's wealth at the close of business, 1922, announced Monday by the United States census bureau at Washington, was $2,467,772,000, an increase of $367,237,000, as compared to 1912, or 17.5 per cent. The state's wealth in 1912 was $2,100,485,000. The per capita wealth increased during the same period from $3,309 to $3,692, or 11.6 per cent.

The report of the department of commerce, in making public this information says:

"All classes of property increased in value from 1912 to 1922, except livestock, which decreased from $125,614,000 to $98,225,000, or 21.8 per cent, and stocks of goods, vehicles other than motor, furniture, and clothings, which decreased from $392,126,000 to $264,066,000, or 32.7 per cent.

The estimated values of taxed real property and improvements increased from $1,157,387,000 to $1,325,430,000, or 14.5 per cent; exempt real property (exclusive of the Verendrye National Monument and Sullys Hill) from $104,001,000 to $300,533,000, or 189.0 per cent; farm implements and machinery from $49,878,000 to $94,095,000, or 88.7 per cent; manufacturing machinery, tools, and implements from $5,244,000 to $9,470,000, or 80.6 per cent; and railroads and their equipment from $249,183,000 to $305,530,000, or 22.6 per cent.

"In making these estimates the department followed in general the methods employed in making the estimates for 1912, though it is believed that in some respects the work in 1922 has been more thorough. It should be borne in mind that the increases in money value are to a large extent due to the rise in prices which has taken place in recent years, and so far as that is the case they do not represent corresponding increases in the quantity of wealth."

The government places the increase at 14.5 per cent on taxed real property, proof of the fact that North Dakota land values have not been inflated, but are on a solid and substantial basis, it is pointed out.

BONUS HEARINGS STARTED

Examination of Andrew and Fisher Measures are Under Way.

Washington.—Proposals to make soldier bonus payments in the form of paid-up insurance led to several arguments Monday at the opening of public hearings by the house ways and means committee on adjusted compensation legislation.

Representative Andrew, Republican, Massachusetts, explained to the committee a measure he had introduced providing for insurance, with an option of cash payments for those veterans not entitled to more than $50.

"The veterans' need for cash is not the same now as at the close of the war," he said, "and the bonus now takes more the form of an obligation."

Mr. Andrew estimated the bill would not cost more than the measure passed last session.

Representative Fisher, Republican, New York, presented his bonus scheme of restricting all payments to a 20 year endowment policy. It would allow policies of $400 for each six months service above 60 days, with a maximum of $1,600, and would allow $800 to the beneficiaries of each of the 5,000 who died during the war without insurance.

Such a measure would cost $2,000,000,000 or about $100,000,000 a year Mr. Fisher estimated. All veterans including officers up to the rank of captain in the army and marine corps and lieutenant in the navy, would be eligible.

EXPLOSION IS BEING PROBED

Rescuers Unable to Search Burning Ruins for Missing Bodies.

Nixon, N. J.—An inquiry into the cause of Saturday's explosion and fire here which killed 18 persons and destroyed 40 buildings, began Monday.

Among those requested to appear are Lewis Nixon, president of the Nixon Nitration works, and R. Norris Shreve, president of the Ammonite company.

Major A. S. Casad, in command of the Raritan arsenal, said that he believed the explosion was due to conditions in the Ammonite plant rather than to any possible failure to separate TNT at the arsenal from the ammonium nitrate which was eventually sent in tanks to the fertilizer factory of the Ammonite company.

Until the ruins cool which may take a number of days, no thorough search for other victims will be made. Those in charge of the work fear that within the debris are acids which will explode in contact with water or by impact.

Pacific Fleet Anchors in New York.

New York.—With the flagship Seattle showing the way, the 16 battleships of the Pacific fleet steamed up the Hudson river Monday to pay New York its first visit since July 1919. Admiral Coontz, commander-in-chief of the entire United States fleet, was aboard the Seattle. The visiting vessels are the California, making its initial appearance in New York harbor; the Tennessee, Maryland, Seattle, New Mexico, Arizona, Idaho, Mississippi, New York, Texas, and Nevada.

News Briefs from All the State

Condensed Stories of Happenings of the Week in Minnesota

Red Wing—G. C. Olson of Hay Creek has filed as a candidate for representative in the state legislature from the Red Wing district.

Faribault — Plans to sponsor an honorary scholastic society in the Faribault high school have been announced by the Faribault Lions club.

Hibbing — Besides Hibbing, only one other public school in the United States is offering its pupils free motion pictures and travel pictures.

Hibbing — Two men were injured in a cavein at the Boeing mine, when a timber beam loosened and crashed to the floor of the narrow passage where they were working.

Montevideo — While out hunting, Carl G. Johnson bagged a big gray wolf in Sparta township. It is the first wolf to be shot in that township in more than 14 years, it is said.

Jasper—A nine mile stretch of road on the county line east and west of Jasper, connecting with the K. T. trail, will be graveled, completing an improved road connecting with South Dakota.

Morris—A state association of growers of alfalfa seed was organized at a meeting here. Growers of alfalfa for seed and many other farmers interested in the crop attended from all parts of Minnesota.

Caledonia—In sympathy with the expressed wish of the state tax conference in St. Paul and as a result of the general sentiment relating to ever increasing taxes, the citizens of Houston county have united in calling a county tax conference in Caledonia.

Duluth—Duluth and Superior Civic and Commerce associations will cooperate in fight to save the coal docks at the Head of Lakes, which are threatened by the alleged unfair competition of the southern Illinois coal fields because of the discriminatory freight rates.

St. Cloud—The new 3,000 kilowat turbo-generator, ordered by the St. Cloud Public Service company, to replace the one which blew up, has arrived in St. Cloud and it is expected the turbine will be ready for use early in March.

St. Paul—More Minnesota farms are mortgaged than are free from debt. Figures of the U. S. bureau of agricultural statistics, shows that 52.4 per cent of Minnesota's 132,744 farms are mortgaged for 27.5 per cent of their value, 54,086 farms in the state are free from debt, and 66,545 are mortgaged.

Thief River Falls—The annual report of Field Manager Lindberg of district No. 14, of the Minnesota Cooperative Creameries, for last year, submitted to the members at the annual meeting here shows an increase of from 182 carloads of butter shipped in 1922 to 269 carloads shipped in 1923.

New Richland—A recapitulation of figures of the seven creamery companies in this village shows that New Richland is rapidly coming to the front as a dairying center. Figures show that 1,601,461 pounds of butter were shipped from this place in the past year. Total receipts for the butter are $736,286.22.

Detroit—The town of Pelican Rapids near here is claiming the co-operative creamery championship of Minnesota. The annual report of the secretary, just announced, shows that the creamery made $320,000 worth of butter in 1923 and in addition handled $46,658 worth of poultry and $44,000 worth of eggs. A total business for the year, amounted to $486,000.

Minneapolis—The Studebaker corporation has subscribed $50,000 to the $10,000,000 agricultural relief fund. The reasons given for this subscription are first because "it is a meritorious enterprise, and worthy of support of all business concerned in the prosperity of our country, and second because of the value we place upon our dealers in the northwest.

Detroit—Interviews with business men in this vicinity reveal the opinion that the Chippewa Inidans, who were recently paid $100 each from the tribal funds by the government, are taking better care of their money than ever before. There has been a few cases of arrests for moonshine and a large number of motor car sales made among the Indians, but the orgies of foolish spending that have followed previous payments in this vicinity are markedly missing.

Hibbing—Hibbing will soon add another feature to an educational system which ranks as second to none when portable schools may be erected for locations near the village. Because of the shifting nature of localities near Hibbing, made necessary by mining operations, schools must change over night and the board of education has found that building location schools is resulting in a great outlay without any permanency attached to the expenditures.

St. Paul—J. F. Reed, president of the Minnesota Farm Bureau federation, left to complete his Canadian speaking tour in the interests of the St Lawrence Tidewater project. Mr. Reed will go to Winnipeg, and, later, speak at Saskatoon, Swift Current, and other western Canadian points.

Minneapolis—Norwegians the world over will focus their eyes on the twin cities in June, 1925, as "Gamle Norge," —old Norway—and new America unite in a great Norse American centennial celebration in honor of the 100th anniversary of Norwegian settlements in America.

Austin—Henry O. Rasford, pioneer Minnesota newspaper man, died in a hospital at Denver at the age of 86.

Spring Valley—Spring Valley has started a drive for a community building to aid in the growth of "Fillmore county's metropolis."

New Ulm—Rev. Carl H. Yettru of Schnectady, N. Y., has accepted the call to become pastor of the First Congregational church of New Ulm.

St. Cloud—A supply of pure water for the city of St. Cloud can be obtained at an initial cost of $16,000 with an annual operating cost of $24,770.

Winona—Dr. Alex M. Dixon, aged 77, dean of the dental profession in this city by reason of his 50 years of practise, died suddenly while at work in his office.

Red Wing—Approximately $100,000 in assessed valuation will be added to the assessor's lists in Red Wing this year as a result of new buildings and improvements.

Buhl—Superintendent H. Steel of Buhl public schools has been notified of his appointment as chairman of the national illiteracy committee of the National Education association.

Rochester—Fifty people representing various parts of Olmsted, Goodhue and Dodge counties, at a meeting here decided to organize for co-operative egg marketing in this section.

Rochester—From the South came a winning bid for cast iron pipe to the city council. The contract amounting to $21,216 went to the American Cast Iron Pipe company of Birmingham, Ala.

Lafayette—The annual report of the Farmers Co-operative creamery here shows that in 1923 its business increased to the amount of $38,616. The total of business transacted was $156,711, compared to $118,095 in 1922.

Rochester—Members of the Olmstead Bankers association at a meeting here reaffirmed their resolution to aid the boys' and girls' club work. Olmstead county banks will loan money to deserving boys and girls.

Ortonville—Plans for Ortonville's armory and community building have been approved by the city authorities and bids for the construction of the building will soon be asked for. The building will be provided with rooms for the National Guard, the city fire department and the American Legion post and auxiliary.

St. Cloud—One of the accomplishments of the tri-county seed show here was the pooling of 4,200 pounds of alfalfa seed. This crop, until the last few years, little heard of in the county, has come rapidly to the front under the sponsoring of Charles H. Lein, who is pooling orders for the seed in large quantities.

Fairmont—Hereafter the downtown district of Fairmont can be dressed with "Old Glory" in five minutes. The American Legion has sold more than 100 flags to business men, which can be planted in sockets in the sidewalk on short notice. Practically every business house in town purchased the standards, some taking several.

Rochester—Drilling at the test well of the Rochester Oil and Gas company has now reached a depth of 1,700 feet and is proceeding without interruption. Tom Jones, in charge of the operation, says indications continue to be favorable and that the coming of spring should decide whether oil is present.

Hibbing—The new St. Louis county fair grounds and aviation field will become a community center for all outdoor activities, including the high school and villages, according to plans submitted to the various departments of the city government. The building of an aviation field will make the grounds the center of all aviation activities.

Faribault—Plans for a co-operative egg and poultry marketing organization, with headquarters at Fairmont, to serve Martin and Watonwan counties were disclosed when a delegation of farmers and farm bureau leaders from that section visited the office and warehouses of the Rice County Poultry and Egg Marketing association here. The committee gathered data to be used in forming the Fairmont body.

Ellendale—A business totaling $217,969.84 was reported to stockholders of the Ellendale Creamery association at the annual meeting of the co-operative body here. The creamery, which sold a large portion of its output to the United States navy, made 449,612 pounds of butter in the year.

Windom—A state game preserve has been established on lands adjoining the village of Storden in this county. Deputy game Warden Brady of this city has been officially notified of the establishment of the game refuge, which will occupy a tract of 640 acres.

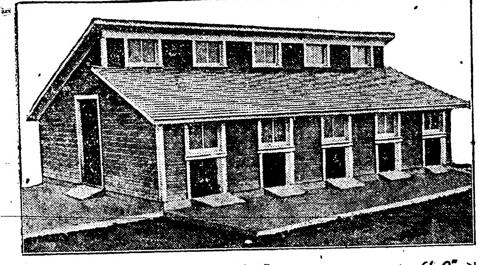
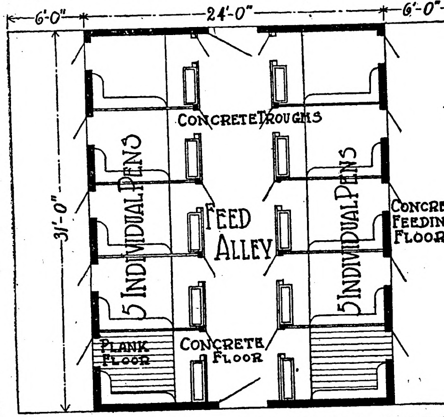
Clean, Sanitary Pen With Concrete Feeding Floor





By WILLIAM A. RADFORD

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building work on the farm, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1827 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

Sanitary farming has shown us that the hog is not the dirty animal of the past and that it thrives better if clean living conditions exist. Types of houses such as shown in the accompanying photograph are steadily replacing the mud puddles and clay holes of the past.

Here is a thoroughly modern barn capable of holding ten pigs or hogs, isolating them so that they will not interfere with each other. The separate stalls are provided with individual feed troughs. As farmers know, hogs will run up and crowd out the weaker animals at feeding time. This method of feeding is dangerous as well as wasteful and the scientific farmer who keeps a record of feedings will not use it. The better method of individually feeding the animals allows the farmer to keep a record and thereby watch each animal.

Also, in breeding, many of the litter are in constant danger of the sow, for she will lie down without looking. If a clean barn of this style houses her, the young ones are given a better chance.

The barn is 24 feet by 31 feet, having a concrete feeding floor 6 feet wide running the length of the building and on both sides. The value of a concrete floor cannot be too thoroughly emphasized. The thrifty farmer will see the advantage of this over the wood floor in many ways. All of the feed will be eaten and none is lost between the boards. This floor may be easily cleaned and naturally will outlast the wooden floor. It is far more sanitary. Since it is quite a bit more expensive in the initial cost, the barn here given may have a wooden floor.

Individual swinging doors to each pen swing out upon the feeding floor and allow the animals an exit.

Sufficient light is allowed to enter to allow the owner to clean and sanitize thoroughly and a door at each end aids in cleaning and sweeping up. A very good plan, an addition, would be to build a corn crib at the rear so that the feed would be easily accessible. Naturally, it is necessary for the side in which the windows are placed, to face the south.

The plan here given is simple enough so that any man who has had experience in carpenter work can build it. The concrete feeding floor may be built by pouring concrete over a foundation of loose crushed rock or small stones. A good consistency of concrete is made by adding one part of cement to two to three parts of sand. When this is poured on the crushed stone a solid slab is formed, the thinner mixture flowing between the small rocks. Troweling may be done with a straight edge board and finished off with a float or hand trowel.

Painting Adds Value to Home and Preserves Wood

Painting serves three very fundamental purposes. It protects the woodwork, it adds cash value to the home and lot, making the home an asset to the community, and it establishes a firmer credit rating for your home.

Any banker will tell you that well-painted buildings are an indication of thrift. Appearances in many cases may make or break the business transaction.

Exposed wood quickly deteriorates. Prolonged neglect will mean a repair bill. Paint is by far cheaper than repairs.

Paint has a curious effect. Many an architectural eyesore has been entirely changed within the space of a few days and has become an asset instead of a liability to the community and its owner. On the other hand many an architectural masterpiece has been ruined beyond hope of repair by the lack of paint used at the right time.

We Owe Ourselves Better Living Conditions

That the United States is entering another era of prosperity, fortunately not connected with the business of war, but the result of inherent soundness, is quite apparent.

That we owe duties to all the world by reason of our strategically fortunate position has been so continually dinned into the ears of our citizens that the average man when he hears another "call to duty" will mutter, "Oh, yes," and will promptly and probably properly forget it.

But as we do enter this era of prosperity which never happens like a thunderstorm but creeps up [illegible] it is [illegible] to point out [illegible] we [illegible] We [illegible] the best living conditions that prosperity can produce.

Better living conditions involve the thoughtful expansion of the zoning system which would protect homes of all of us, humble as well as rich, and assure us that they will remain homes.

These better living conditions, of course, relate to home and community sanitation, so that we have clean water and proper disposal of waste and proper attention to disease conditions and to their prevention. They relate also to the larger aspects of recreation, so that if America actually becomes what it may easily be, no man, no woman, no family will need to travel many miles to reach a public recreation spot in community, in county, in state, in nation, that is just as much theirs as it is the property of anybody else.

To Determine Time It Takes to Dry Plaster

When may plaster be painted? is a question frequently asked of the bureau of standards. To that question the bureau has made answer that painting may begin as soon as the plaster is thoroughly dry. But that answer raises the question of the length of time required for the plaster to dry.

The drying of plaster is important not only as it affects painting operations, but also in its relation to the erection of wood trim and because of its effect on the time required for construction projects. A slow-drying plaster may delay completion of the work and thereby cause financial loss to the contractor or it may delay the occupancy of owner or tenant.

In order to determine the time required for the dry of different kinds of plaster under atmospheric conditions, the bureau has designed special equipment which is now in process of construction in the bureau's shop. The research work will begin as soon as the equipment is available for use.

WEEKLY MENU SUGGESTIONS

While the wintry winds still blow, hearty foods are enjoyed and even in spring an occasional hot dish is agreeable for supper that in warm weather might be too substantial for the last meal of the day.

If dinner is served at night the dinner menu will take the place of supper.

SUNDAY—Breakfast: Fried ham, coffee cake. Dinner: Roast chicken with creamed dried corn. Supper: Mush and milk, salt codfish.

MONDAY—Breakfast: Buckwheat cakes. Dinner: Pot roast of beef with potatoes. Supper: Creamed chicken on toast.

TUESDAY—Breakfast: Toast and bacon. Dinner: St. James pudding. Supper: Scalloped potatoes.

WEDNESDAY — Breakfast: Salt pork fried, cream gravy, baked potatoes. Dinner: Roast of mutton, canned peas. Supper: Waffles with maple sirup.

THURSDAY—Breakfast: Ham and eggs. Dinner: Pigs' feet with sauer kraut. Supper: Sliced roast mutton.

SATURDAY — Breakfast: Stewed prunes, doughnuts. Dinner: Beefsteak, baked potatoes. Supper: Pork and beans.

Coffee Cake.

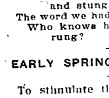
Take two cupfuls of light bread sponge, add one cupful of sugar, two well-beaten eggs, one cupful of warmed milk, the grated rind of a lemon, mix well; add flour to make a mixture that will roll out. Place in small dripping pans, cover with softened butter, sprinkle with cinnamon and brown sugar and when very light bake in a moderate oven. Raisins or currants may be added, making a very rich, delicious breakfast cake. Cut in inch slices, divide in halves when serving.

St. James Pudding.

This is a simple, delicious pudding without eggs. Melt three tablespoonfuls of butter, add one-half cupful of molasses, the same of milk, one and two-thirds cupfuls of flour, a half teaspoonful each of soda, salt, cloves, allspice, nutmeg and one-half pound of dates cut in fine pieces. Steam in pound baking powder cans for two and one-half hours.

The ill-timed truth we might have kept—
Who knows how sharp it pierced and stung?
The word we had not sense to say—
Who knows how grandly it had rung?

EARLY SPRINGTIME DESSERTS



To stimulate the appetite and furnish mineral matter and acids which the system craves and needs at this season, fresh fruits and vegetables are invaluable.

Banana Dessert.—Heat a pint of milk in a double boiler until scalding hot. Add two tablespoonfuls of cornstarch which has been mixed with one fourth of a teaspoonful of salt, and one third of a cupful of sugar, then add one-fourth of a cupful of cream. Cook thirty minutes, stirring occasionally. Add the well-beaten yolks of two eggs, return to the boiler and stir, cooking until smooth and thick, using care not to over cook and curdle the eggs. Add a teaspoonful of orange extract and put in a cool place.

Cut sponge cake into slices and arrange in a glass dish in layers with sliced bananas, having a bottom layer of cake and the top of bananas. Pour over the chilled custard, cover with a meringue, using the egg whites and two tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar. Flavor with lemon extract and heap spoonfuls on top of the custard.

Cherry Sherbet.—Take one cupful of stoned cherries, two and one-half cupfuls of water, one-half cupful of sugar and one tablespoonful of softened gelatin. Heat the cherries, water and sugar, add the gelatin, cool and add the juice of an orange. Freeze to a mush and pack in salt and ice. Serve in sherbet glasses.

Cream Pie.—Take two cupfuls of top milk, two eggs, separating the yolks and whites, beating well. Mix the yolks with three-fourths of a cupful of brown sugar and one-half cupful of flour. When well-blended add the milk scalded, a teaspoonful of vanilla and a tablespoonful of butter after the mixture is cooked and smooth. Cool and fill a baked crust. Cover with a meringue made from the two egg whites and two tablespoonfuls of sugar. Bake until the meringue is brown.

Pineapple Rice.—Cook one-half cupful of rice in two quarts of boiling salted water until tender, but unbroken. Drain, blanch with cold water. Cut two cupfuls of sliced pineapple into small pieces. Beat one cupful of heavy cream until stiff. Fold the cream and pineapple into the rice. Serve in sherbet cups with [illegible] for a garnish or fresh sugared strawberries.

Bookkeeping Big Help to Farmers

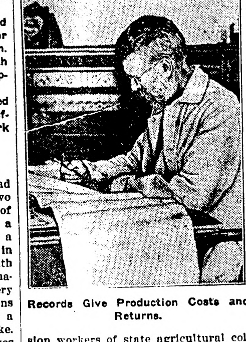
Differences in Production Costs and Returns Noted and Causes Sought.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

New benefits from farm bookkeeping are in prospect in many states as a result of the organization recently of accounting schools at which farmers meet to analyze and compare records, and study out sources of error and opportunities for improvement in farm management.

There are few states in which the movement is not represented. Reports to the United States Department of Agriculture say 35 farmers' accounting schools were held in Ohio this winter. In Maine every county was covered. Illinois had such schools in 15 counties. Many were held in Indiana, Pennsylvania, Iowa, North and South Dakota, Colorado, Oregon, California, Texas, and other states.

The usual practice is for farmers who keep accounts to meet in conference with county agents and extension workers of state agricultural colleges and the United States Department of Agriculture. They produce their records of crops sown and harvested, labor used, feed consumed, and so forth, and the reports are analyzed and compared. Wide differences in production costs and returns are noted and their causes sought, so that inefficient methods can be corrected and better organization and operation plans adopted for the future.



Records Give Production Costs and Returns.

Books of Approved Type.

Officials of the Department of Agriculture say the plan is largely an outgrowth of the increasing use of uniform accounting methods by farmers. When efforts were started by the department about ten years ago to promote better farm accounting, an obstacle was the lack of a simple farm accounting book. This want was supplied, and now practically all state extension divisions sell account books of an approved type to farmers at cost.

As a result many farmers all over the country are keeping their accounts in about the same way. This has been a big factor in crystallizing farmers' ideas on the analysis of their business along uniform lines, and it has greatly lessened the difficulty of getting comparable figures from different farms. Usually the book produced at the farm accounting schools are all of the same type. They tell the amount of the labor income from the farm, the size of the farm business, the crop yields, and the return from live stock, as well as the amount of expense for different items. From this data farmers can discover their weak and their strong points and the standards necessary for profitable farm operation.

Farmers are also meeting more than in previous years to compare their results from single crop or live stock enterprises, as well as the results from their total farm operations. County agents in 1923 assisted 20,000 farmers in single enterprise analyses. A typical example is a study made of potato-growing costs in Cuyahoga county, Ohio, which showed that the farmer with the lowest cost was producing potatoes at 42 cents a bushel, compared with a maximum on another farm of $1.53 a bushel.

Clubs for Boys.

A valuable supplement to this movement toward cost comparison of differences among farmers is the development of accounting clubs for boys. The boys in these clubs keep the home farm records and at the end of the year with their fathers assemble in groups to study the results. The clubs are intended to train the new generation of farmers in sound business methods, to demonstrate to them the value of bookkeeping before they reach maturity.

Farm accounting is also being taught in many of the district schools in a number of states. This is with the same objective in mind and the posting and summarizing of an actual farm business record in the simple farm account book constitutes the main text book material. Many boys are keeping home farm records as a result of this school training.

Selecting Seed for Stand of Red Clover

Easy Matter to Test Germination in Advance.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Much of the present difficulty experienced in getting a good stand of red clover may be overcome simply by the use of seed of good quality and germination, says the United States Department of Agriculture. A bright fresh-looking lot of red-clover seed will usually germinate pretty well, but it is so easy to test the germination in advance that there is little excuse for sowing poor seed.

If 100 or 200 average seeds are counted out and laid on a plate between pieces of moist cloth or blotting paper and the plate set away in a room where temperature is 65 to 80 degrees Fahrenheit, the seeds will begin to sprout in three or four days, and in a week the value of the seed so far as germination is concerned can be definitely determined. The germination of clover seed, even when the sample is good, will depend somewhat on the number of hard seeds present. A sample of good seed should test something like 90 per cent, with at least several of the remaining seeds hard at the close of the ten-day test period.

However, even if the germination of seed is good great care should be taken to find out if possible where the seed was grown, since the work of the department has also shown that red clover grown in Italy is not adapted to most of the United States and should not be used in the eastern United States. The only way to prevent getting Italian seed is to buy from a reliable firm or organization and to insist that you do not want Italian seed.

Relative Advantages of Horse Power in Farming

The United States Department of Agriculture has recently investigated the relative advantages of horse power and motor power for farm operations and reports numerous reasons for the continued use of good draft horses. Horse power is characterized by its versatility and adaptability to perform various farm operations. The horse is not limited either by the topography of the ground or a specialized ability to perform only a few farm tasks economically.

The horse is self-replacing, earns its keep, and increases in value up to the marketable age. Mares enough may be bred yearly to replace the mature stock which is marketed. The young horses raised under this plan continually increase in value and at the same time they are paying their way by doing the farm work.

Keeping horses also helps to conserve the fertility of the soil and provides an element of interest which helps to keep the youngsters on the farm. Then, too, there is less direct cash outlay for horse power, as horses consume home-grown feed chiefly.

Motor power, however, has advantages under certain conditions, and in many cases the two forms of power—horses and tractors—are both used.

Silage Is Shown to Be Superior as Stock Feed

The value of silage feeding is shown forcefully by recent data furnished by the bureau of animal industry, United States Department of Agriculture. In the wintering of mature beef cows in West Virginia it has been shown that corn fed as silage is worth 60 per cent more than shock corn. In growing beef calves in Illinois an acre of corn silage was found to be worth 30 per cent more than an acre of shock corn.

This increased utility is attributed to the many advantages of silage. Practically no waste occurs in the feeding of silage and it creates an appetite for cheaper roughages. Then, too, the same crops fed dry are not nearly so palatable and succulent as they are in the form of silage.

Information as to what crops make good silage and on preparing and using them as feed is contained in bulletins which may be had free from the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Proper Methods Prevent Loss From Tuberculosis

Of the 48,000,000 hogs slaughtered under federal inspection last fiscal year about 15 per cent showed tuberculosis infection to some extent. This entails a large food and monetary loss which can be prevented by using proper methods of tuberculosis eradication and management.

Tuberculosis among other farm animals is recognized as a dangerous source of infection for hogs; leading packers are now paying 10 cents per hundredweight additional for hogs originating in counties free or nearly free from bovine tuberculosis.

The United States Department of Agriculture has bulletins for free distribution which give detailed information on the prevention and control of tuberculosis.

DAIRY FACTS

VENTILATION IS OF PRIME IMPORTANCE

"Ventilation in the dairy barn is of prime importance both from the standpoint of the health of the herd and for the production of clean, untainted milk," is the statement of S. W. Mead, dairy specialist at the New Jersey state experiment station.

"Fresh air is the greatest enemy of tuberculosis. Furthermore, an abundant supply of fresh air drives out all unpleasant odors and thereby prevents them from tainting the milk. Thus, an abundant supply of fresh air is just as important for economical milk production as is proper feed.

"Various ventilating systems are on the market, all of which work on the principle of expansion and contraction. Warm air expands and becomes lighter than an equal volume of cold contracted air. The warm air, therefore, rises and the cold air descends.

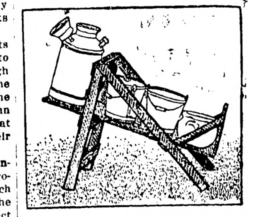
"A proper ventilating system must provide for the entrance of fresh air and the exit of foul air in such a way that the warmth of the barn is preserved and the air kept pure and about as warm at the feet as at the heads of the animals. A cow weighing a thousand pounds inhales 224 pounds of air in 24 hours—nearly twice the weight of her food and drink. This is at the rate of 3,542 cubic feet per hour.

Haphazard ventilation may result either in the cows not getting enough air to supply their requirements or getting it in a way which chills them, thus making them susceptible to disease and reducing their milk flow.

"Farmers desiring information on good methods of ventilation may get it by writing to the New Jersey State College of Agriculture, New Brunswick."

Sunning Rack for Milk Cans Is Best Sterilizer

The sun is the cheapest as well as the best sterilizer we can use. A rack for milk cans and pails can be built cheaply and easily so that the cans will receive the full sun's rays, says Power Farming. The framework is two-by-fours and braces one-by-fours. The construction is shown in the sketch.



High Feed Bills Do Not Indicate Small Profits

High feed bills do not necessarily indicate small profits from milk cows. Take, for example, the high cow in an Iowa test association last year. Her feed bill amounted to $84.58, but she returned her owner a profit of $128.38. The lowest record in the same association was made by a cow of mixed breeding whose feed cost was $34.85. Her owner's profit was $0.39 for the year.

It is possible the low cow did not have the ability to return a good profit even though she had received a generous ration. However, a cow is like a cupboard, you can't take anything out unless you put something in. The ideal arrangement is, of course, good cows well fed.

Develop Calf Early if Thought Worth Raising

The young calf is often neglected. If a calf is worth raising develop it early. It is best to leave it with the cow for two or three days. Then feed it about nine or ten pounds of warm milk per day. Always see that your buckets are clean, in order to prevent scours. At about three weeks of age start substituting skim milk gradually. The calf should be on skim milk alone by the time it is seven weeks old.

Expensive Dairy Barns Not Requisite for Milk

Expensive dairy barns and equipment will probably make dairying more interesting and increase somewhat the year's total production but are not a requisite for success. Many great dairy cows have been developed and have produced wonderful records in barns that would not measure up to the standard so far as up-to-date dairy barns go.

Hydrolyzed Sawdust Is Not Satisfactory for Cows

Hydrolyzed sawdust, a by-product in the manufacture of [illegible] alcohol, is not a satisfactory feed for dairy cows at present prices of feeds and cost of treating sawdust, says the United States Department of Agriculture, although this product contains a large proportion of material of no feeding value. It can be used in limited quantities for dairy cows when ordinary feeds are very high in price.

EDISON-FORD PLAN'S ATTACK ON INTEREST

Abolition of Rent No More Plausible Than Abolition of Pay on Loans, Expert Shows.

It is no more unreasonable to pay interest on a loan of money than to pay rent on a house, declares William T. Foster, Director of the Pollack Foundation for Economic Research, in exposing the fallacy of the attack on interest charges by Henry Ford and Thomas A. Edison in their commodity money scheme to do away with the present financial system. Mr. Foster's argument is reviewed in the present article which is one of a series prepared by the American Bankers Association.

"The Ford-Edison commodity money plan is regarded as a step toward the abolition of all interest charges." Mr. Foster says. "'Interest,' says the Dearborn Independent, 'is a tax that few ancient tyrants would have dared impose. Interest in actual modern practice is a contrivance whereby all production is taxed by parasites, and whereby money is given a supremacy over men, material and management which it cannot sustain.'

Renting Money

"But is there really anything more terrible about paying for the use of money than about paying for the use of anything else? Suppose a farmer finds himself in need of a harvesting machine, and without enough money to buy one. In that case he can either borrow a machine of Neighbor Brown or borrow money and buy a machine. The farmer would consider it right to pay in some way for the use of the machine. Why should he expect to borrow money—which is honored in the markets in payment for the same machine—without paying for the use of the money?

"Now let us suppose that the farmer uses the machine so successfully that he saves a thousand dollars. With that money he can buy a farm and he can let Neighbor Brown have the use of it. Neighbor Brown naturally would expect to pay rent. Instead of buying the farm, however, he could lend the thousand dollars to his neighbor in order that his neighbor might buy the farm. In that case Neighbor Brown should expect to pay for the rent of the money. All this seems clear. When the transactions are as simple as these it is plain that there is just as great propriety in charging for the use of money as in charging for the use of things that money will buy.

Loaned Money Builds a School

"We may assume, however, that the farmer does not want to buy land and Neighbor Brown does not want to borrow money. In that case the farmer deposits his thousand dollars in a bank and the bank pays him interest for the use of his money. But the bank can pay interest only if it makes profitable use of his money. Now the bank finds that the city needs a high-school building, and has decided to borrow enough money to construct it. In order to obtain the money the city has issued bonds, each of which is a promise to pay one thousand dollars at a specified date, and interest in the meantime at a specified rate. The bank buys one of these bonds. Thus the farmer has had a part in providing the city with a school building; and the farmer has just as much right to expect interest for the use of his money as though he had loaned the money directly or indirectly to Neighbor Brown."

"CAPITALISTS"—AND DON'T KNOW IT

A good many people who rail against capital are beating their own backs. Some are savings bank depositors; some have shares in building and loan associations; some have bought a liberty bond; some have ordered a stock of goods for their store. All of them, without knowing it, have performed a great miracle, for they have turned the work of their hands or their brains into a new product which while it helps them, is helping thousands of others. Every one of them is a capitalist as most of us are—unless we are tramps or paupers or ne'er-do-wells—and we may well be proud of the name. For capitalism instead of being the devilish invention of a few selfish interests, is the great material force that has lifted millions from poverty, degradation and slavery.

Like other human institutions, capital can be abused. So, too, can eyesight and health and education and love. Part of America's great job is to remedy and prevent such abuses. Sane people, however, do not cut off their feet to get rid of their corns.

Capital is today's surplus. It is what gives us a better start tomorrow than we had today. If we don't save it, we don't have it, and when we have it, it is useless until it is put to work.

If thrift is right, then it is right that people should acquire funds as the result of their industry and self-denial. But money that is merely hoarded is like water that becomes stagnant; it is harmful, not helpful. When money is put to work, it is like water power; it turns the wheels of industry, increases employment and raises the general level of comfort.

When every producer can create a surplus and that surplus can be gathered into a common fund and put to work for the common good we shall have reached an ideal condition.—From "The Greatest Family in the World."

Big Creamery Meeting

Holt, Minn.

Monday March 17

All Farmers Invited

The army recruiting station formerly located at Crookston and later moved to Grand Forks, has now been moved to Fargo.

The Coulter bill seems to be loosing ground in this section, while sentiment in favor of the McNary-Haugen bill seems to be steadily gaining.

The Union spent a very pleasant and profitable evening at the home of the president, Mrs. Hazel Olson Monday evening. The hostess served a very delicious lunch. The Union will meet next time at the home of Mrs. Burtness Mar. 31st.

Minnesota, with 76 active cow testing associations in February, stands second in the list of states having such associations. Wisconsin is first, Michigan third and Iowa fourth. More than 22,000 cows are now under test in Minnesota. Of the counties, Freeborn holds the lead with seven active associations testing more than 2,400 cows.

Farmers in the vicinity of Warren recently held a meeeing to consider starting a co-operative creamery. The creamery owner there offered to make butter for them for five cents per pound, under a three years contract. It seems that where they hav'nt the co-operative creamery they want them, and where they have them they better stick to them.

The Secretary of the Interior has requested the Attorney General of the United States to appeal from the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals, to the Supreme Court of the United States on the case to determine the ownership of the lands in the bed of Mud Lake, in Marshall County. This land has been in litigation between the Government and the owners of the old shore line along the lake for a number of years.

THE GREAT SCOURGE OF HALF TRUTHS

By JOHN OAKWOOD

A soap-boxer pointed at a great factory. "Who built that factory? Workmen!" he yelled. "Who run the machines? Workmen! Who get the profits? Capitalists!"

* * *

The soap-boxer told a half truth that amounted to a whole lie. His listeners did not know that that particular factory, typical of thousands of others, was a complete refutation of the lie—if only the other half of the truth were told.

* * *

It is true the factory was Capitalized—for a million dollars. The net profits gave annual dividends of 6 per cent, or $60,000, to the stockholders. All that was true.

* * *

But it was also true that the million dollar capital was divided up into ten thousand shares of $100 each. The ownership of these shares was distributed among about one thousand people. Several hundred of them were workmen in the factory. They were saving out of their weekly wages and buying shares on the instalment plan. They were Capitalists.

* * *

It was likewise true that shares were also owned by workmen in other factories, by clerical workers and by small merchants. A good many were also owned by widows and orphans whose modest estates had been wisely invested for them by their bankers. They were Capitalists.

* * *

It was also true that the factory corporation had issued a million dollars in bonds to raise funds to buy the material and pay the wages of workmen to build the factory. These bonds were owned as investments not only by persons of wealth but also by many people of moderate means who had saved out of their wages and salaries. They were Capitalists.

* * *

And it was also true that out of the receipts of the factory, before a cent was taken to pay interest on the bonds, before a penny was used to pay dividends on the stock, a good many dollars were taken to pay wages to the workmen.

* * *

The workmen were Capitalists too. They were investing their strength and their talents and their skill in the factory—they were getting their dividends out of its earnings as well as the stockholders and bondholders.

Reconsideration upon complaint-appeal-

Upon complaint being made to the county attorney by a taxpayer of the county that any person is unlawfully receiving an allowance out of the county funds on account of an alleged dependent child it shall be the duty of the county attorney to investigate such complaint and if he finds it to have probable cause to bring it to the attention of the court by appropriate proceedings. The Court shall hear such evidence and argument as shall be offered and shall thereupon make its order confirming, modifying or setting aside the order complained of, from which decision an appeal may be taken as in a civil action.

The 1922 patrons listed as delivering more than a thousand lbs of butterfat numbered 37, with an average of 1416 pounds of butterfat. This year the number increased to 45 patrons with an average of 1615 pounds of butterfat. This average increase of approximately 200 lbs, is most significant, for the reason that it has come through better breeding, feeding and care of the cow, and not so much in increasing the number of cows.

We have the number of cows to produce twice as much butterfat, but the big thing to do now is to find out what cows are boarders, and not giving you any profit, and get rid of them, then breed up the herd you have and dont forget the feed and care that goes with it in order to make your best cow pay you a profit. We have the names of patrons listed above that have cows giving 250 lbs and more of butterfat for the year. These are the kind of cows that will give you a profit above all cost of feed and labor. Why not feed a good cow and take care of her? It takes almost as much time to take care of a poor cow that never pays for her feed.

Miss Inga Johnson was a Thief River Falls visitor Monday.

Miss Lucy Wegge went to Crookston Saturday to visit relatives.

Axel Nelson shipped a grain separator to Red Lake Falls parties Saturday.

E. M. Bennes of Thief River Falls and Albert Bennes of Erskine were Holt visitors Saturday.

You will miss the time of your life, if you fail to attend the home talent play, Friday March 21st. Heaps of fun waiting for you.

Mrs. John Shoelin returned to her home at St. Hilaire Tuesday after a few days stay at the home of her mother, Mrs. A. E. Anderson.

The caucus ticket in this village was elected without opposition, except the assessor. For that office Racine Olson received 34 votes to 10 for Joseph Nelson.

The girls basket ball team and their coach, Miss Wagner went to Badger Friday to play the girls of that place. The score was 2 to 8 in favor of Badger.

Mrs. Anderson, the aged mother of Mrs. C. L. Sandberg, has been quite sick. A physician was called Monday and at last reports she was some better.

S. H. Nohre and Iver Omoth left Friday for Spring Grove to visit relatives. Mr. Nohre shipped a car of potatoes Saturday for himself and neighbors which he will try to dispose of while away.

John Hagberg returned home last Wednesday and Martin Olson on Saturday, from Spooner where they had been working for C. Norbeck on his timber contract.

We have the agency for the Model Steam Laundry and we are in a position to take care of all your laundry. All laundry must be in by Wednesday noon. Basket returns on Saturday. O. E. Sovde, the Barber.

The school board has re-elected Prof. Smith for another year at the same salary he is now receiving. We think the board is very fortunate in being able to retain Professor Smith at the head of our schools for another year.

Marshall county has signed its legal quota in the compaign to organize the new Minnesota Potatoes Growers Exchange. There are 469 members who listed 4204 acres of potatoes. Now the good work should continue by signing up for their co-operaive creameries.

Holt township elected the following officers on Tuesday:

Supervisors, John Engstrom three years, and A. C. Burtness two years to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Victor Johnson; Clerk, T. B. Folden; Treasurer, G. P. Sorter; Justice, Erick Johnson; Constables: Ole Davidson and A. Movig. Elling Waagedahl is chairman of the board and holds over another year.

Notice for Dragging

Sealed bids will be received by Town of East Valley until one o'clock P. M. March 22nd. 1924 for dragging the following roads:

Road No. 1 commencing at N. W. corner of Section (18) and east 5 miles. Road No. 2 commencing at N. W. corner section (38) and east 8 3-4 miles and north between Sections (26) (27) and (22) (23).

Road No. 3 commencing at S. W. corner section (31) and east to Thief River. The persons getting the dragging are required to cut the weeds on the road he is dragging for the same price per mile as dragging. Address all bids to J. A. Sorum. The Board reserves the right to reject any and all bids.

By Oder of Township Board.
J. A. Sorum, Clerk

If it hurts you to laugh, you better not go to the home talent play, as it is guaranteed to be a sure cure for the blues.

Tony and Arvid Carlson were Warren visitors Saturday.

A large number of Holt people attended the basket ball tournament in Thief River Falls last Thursday and Friday.

O. H. Nohre and family moved back to their own place Saturday, and Melvin Nohre has moved onto the Nyberg farm which he has purchased.

I have for sale the Frank Coppay place near Holt. Will sell on easy terms, or give liberal discount for cash. Address G. B. K., W. 516 Sixth ave, Spokane, Wash.

Reierson's store was taken in charge Saturday by the sheriff's office upon a judgement secured in district court, by the Hart Parr Co., agaitst the directors of the old bank who signed a bond to keep the company from taking out their deposit. This falls like a heavy blow upon Mr. and Mrs. R. Reierson who are well along in years and in very poor health, and their numerous friends feel very sorry for them in their misfortune. Thus is added another sad chapter to the many already written by the closing of the Holt State Bank.

Take Notice

Monday, March the 17th. at 1 o'clock P. M. the creamery board have arranged for a meeting to be held in the community hall. The purpose of this meeting is to discuss and prove to you the necessity of signing the patronage contract. The talks will be very brief but to the point. So far we have arranged with N. C. Lindberg, fieldman for our district and Stuart McLeod Pres. of the Red River Valley Dairymen's Ass'n. The meetings are being held in every town in the state where the creamery is a member. We belong to the 14th. district which has a 100 per cent membership. A Free lunch will be served all who attend the meeting.

Everyone invited regardless of how they feel in this matter. The ladies are especially invited. Let us see a full house, it is for your own good.

Board of Directors. Holt Creamery.

There are ten characters in the three act home talent play to be given at the school house Friday night March 21st.

A Strong Bank Made Stronger
THE GOVERNMENT of this bank and the MANAGEMENT of its affairs is vested in a Board of Five Directors consisting of two dirt farmers, two bankers, and the manager of the local creamery.
We are pleased to announce to our People the addition of three new members to our Board of Directors, namely: Louis Wegge, P. L. Anderson and Fred D. Voth. These men are well known to all of you as conservative, capable and successful men. They need no introduction. They understand thoroughly the needs of the people and the advice and management which they are capable of giving is most valuable to our institution.
SAFETY to our DEPOSITORS is the first consideration in the management of this bank. Loans and Discounts, which constitute the "back bone" of the bank, are carefully examined once every month. Officers and directors are at all times in close touch with the affairs of their institution.
The Public is invited to feel at home with us. Make this bank your Financial Headquarters. We ask for your confidence and support. Your Welfare is our Welfare.

Our Business System

For the benefit of all our patrons, it should be of interest to them to know our method and system of doing business.

We pay according to quality, 3 cents more per pound for the butterfat in first grade cream. All shareholders receive an 8 per cent dividend on shares of $25 00, which means $2.00 every year for each share. Besides the dividend, shareholders receive one-half cent more per pound for butterfat than non-shareholdes, regardless of whether they are monthly or cash patrons. To illustrate what this amounts to, let us figure what the amount would be on our largest patron for 1923. His total pounds of butterfat was 3593, times one-half cent equals $17.96, plus a $2.00 dividend would make the extra amount, by being a shareholder, the neat sum of $19.96. Shareholders are part owners of the creamery, have a vote and something to say at the annual meetings, can hold office and help all the rest of the shareholders in making this the best creamery in the northwest. We are the biggest in the county, let us hold our own. It is advertising of this kind that shows others what is being done in the Vicinity of Holt.

BEFORE BABIES WERE BORN

Mrs. Oswald Benefited by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Girardville, Pa.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before my last two babies came. It keeps me in perfect health and I am on my feet getting meals and doing all my housework until an hour before the baby is born. A friend told me to take it and I have used ten bottles since I heard about it. I recommend the Vegetable Compound whenever I can. Just yesterday a friend was telling me how miserable she felt, and I said, 'If you start taking Lydia E. Pinkham's you will feel fine.' Now she is taking it."—Mrs. P. J. OSWALD, JR., 406 W. Ogden St., Girardville, Pa.

Mrs. Nicola Paluzzi Says

Mishawaka, Indiana.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for weakness before my babies were born. I was weak and tired out all the time and it helped me. When I had inward inflammation the doctor treated me, but it did not help me, so I tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash and it helped me right away. I will always have your medicines." — Mrs. NICOLA PALUZZI, 415 E. Broadway, Mishawaka, Indiana.

Enormous Losses in Hatching Eggs

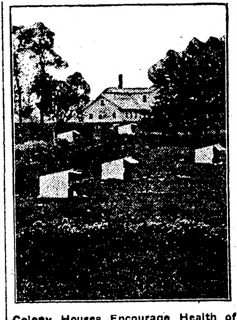
(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A good criterion of one's ability as a poultry raiser, the Department of Agriculture says, is the number of chickens raised to maturity in proportion to the eggs set. Success depends to a large extent on this one factor.

Causes for Losses.

The causes for enormous losses in eggs and dead embryos occurring annually in the country are many. A conservative estimate places the loss due to eggs that did not hatch in 1923 at over $8,000,000. Be sure, department poultrymen advise, that your breeders are in excellent health, have sanitary quarters, and that one male is mated to not over 15 females. Other losses are due to the fact that many poor eggs are set. Test your eggs carefully, and take out all with thin and spotted shells or those with cracked shells. Make sure that all eggs set are also of standard size.



Colony Houses Encourage Health of Fowls.

The greatest loss in incubation occurs in the embryos that die in the shell. This may be due to faulty methods of incubation or to eggs of poor hatching quality. Immature pullets, breeding stock that has been sickly and birds that have been forced heavily for winter production are apt to produce eggs that will not hatch well.

Use Healthy Breeders.

All breeders used should be thoroughly healthy; they should have abundance of constitutional vigor; and they should receive good breeding rations. The department advises against the use of too much protein, probably not over 15 per cent, in the mash rations; plenty of green food should be provided. Furthermore, give the breeders as much exercise as possible. In fact, do everything possible to insure the production of eggs of good hatching quality and many apparent troubles in incubation will be solved.

Hog Slaughter for 1923 Breaks Previous Record

More than 10,000,000 more hogs were slaughtered under federal meat inspection during the calendar year, 1923, than during any previous year, according to figures just made public by the bureau of animal industry, United States Department of Agriculture. The number slaughtered during the year was 53,333,703. The best previous record for a calendar year was made in 1922. During that year 43,113,629 hogs were slaughtered.

During December, 1923, not only the best record for the month of December, but for any month, was broken. During that month 5,903,759 hogs were slaughtered under federal meat inspection. The best previous record for a month of December was made in 1918 during which month 5,661,890 hogs were slaughtered. The best previous record for any month was made in January, 1919, during which month 5,845,696 hogs were slaughtered.

Dwarf Trees Are Useful Where Space Is Limited

The practice of using dwarf instead of the ordinary standard trees is more or less prevalent among prospective planters of small areas. Dwarf trees are produced by propagating them on certain stocks of roots which because of their inherently restricted habit of growth restrict also the size of the tops that have been grafted or budded on them.

While earliness of bearing, and exceptionally high quality of the product are often claimed for dwarf trees, some of the best experience in this country has failed to substantiate the latter claim. Dwarf apple and pear trees have their place, however, in the garden or yard, especially under intensive methods of culture, where the space is too small to admit readily of the development of standard trees.

Common Grains for Hay

Any of the common grains such as wheat, oats, barley, make good hay if cut at the proper stage of development, which is at the period of blossoming. That is when the plant contains the largest per cent of digestible nutrients. It is not common to use these plants for hay in this country. Most people seem to think they can get more out of them by allowing them to ripen, saving the grain and feeding the straw

Vegetable Garden Is Essential on Farms

Farmers Should Plan Having Supply During Year.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

While we are talking about the advantages of the kitchen garden in connection with the homes of those who live in the suburban districts sight must not be lost of the importance of good farm gardens. The United States census figures taken in 1919, showed that 78.9 per cent of all the farms in the United States have home gardens. This leads to the question, what did the other 21.1 per cent of the farm families have upon their tables. The answer would probably be mainly canned vegetables or no vegetables at all. It is safe to assume that the majority of these farm families who did not have a garden to fall back upon were often without vegetables on their tables. In view of the fact that vegetables furnish about four-fifths of the bulk of our ordinary diet, it would seem highly essential that every farm in the United States be well provided with garden facilities. When it comes to the matter of the actual value of the crops grown there is no comparison between general farm crops and those of the garden, as the average value of the garden crops is usually six to ten times that of a similar area in farm crops.

Not only should the farmers of the country give more attention to their home vegetable gardens in the spring, but they should so plan that a supply of vegetables will be maintained throughout the summer and plenty to can and store for winter.

Get Cows Into Condition by Liberal Corn Feeding

Cows that are milked down may be gotten in condition by feeding an extra amount of corn in the grain ration. A dry cow should always gain in weight and this gain can be made as quickly and cheaply with corn as with any other grain. A mixture of six parts of ground corn, two parts of ground oats or bran and one part of oil meal by weight is a very satisfactory mixture. Cotton seed should not be fed at this time owing to the lack of succulent feeds consumed. When the cow has gained as much weight as is desired, the corn should be replaced by bran and ground oats. At least ten days before the cow is due to freshen, bran, oats and oil meal should constitute the grain ration. Equal parts by weight of the first two with about one pound of oil meal per day forms a very satisfactory ration.

When the pregnant cow is within a few days of freshening, her grain ration should be considerably reduced. Bran mashes are excellent at this time because of the laxative and cooling nature. If constipation is in evidence, one quart of raw linseed oil or one pound of epsom salts should be given. Many cases of milk fever could be avoided if proper care were given just previous to freshening. With the exception of a few hours before calving, some roughage such as clover, alfalfa or soy-bean hay should be provided in liberal quantities.

Watermelon Seed Needs Best Kind of Attention

Many farmers fail to secure a good stand in their field of watermelons. Oftentimes they fail to secure as good a crop of commercial size melons as they should. Many melons show signs of disease. It is possible to protect against poor stands and poor crops if proper attention is given to seed as well as seed beds. Seed should be tested for germination. Then they should be disinfected. Specialists on truck diseases recommend the following: Take the amount of seed you have and soak them in a 1-to-1,000 solution of corrosive sublimate (bichloride of mercury) for ten minutes. Do not leave them in this solution longer than ten minutes.

Remove from the solution and wash thoroughly in three or four changes of clean fresh water to remove the disinfectant. The seed are now ready to plant.

This corrosive sublimate solution (1 to 1,000) is prepared by dissolving 1 tablet (which may be purchased at any drug store) in 1 pint of water. This amount is sufficient for a quarter of a pound of seed. Increase in this proportion for larger amounts.

Butter, Milk and Cheese Selling at High Prices

Prices of dairy products did not suffer as much from the drastic deflation following the post-war period as did other farm products, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Butter, cheese, and milk have sold at prices remunerative to farmers. Butter is now higher than the general price level. Cheap feed in western butter districts, and high prices and some curtailment of production in milk districts, have enabled dairy farmers to weather the storm with less adversity than farmers producing commodities a part of which must be exported. Poultry and eggs have also continued on a fairly profitable basis

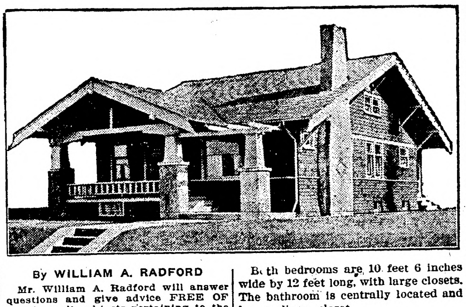
Well Proportioned Bungalow Has Strong Individuality



By WILLIAM A. RADFORD

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1827 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

"There are so many novel designs and styles that it is very hard for me to pick out one that is to be our future home," said Annabelle. "Tonight we ought to make a selection, for I am anxious to plan the interior. Let's take six of the nicest and of these make a selection."

"I know just which one you will eventually choose," replied Harry. "It is the one you have always looked at just before we put them away every evening. When this one is compared with the others, it stands out by itself. And I like it."

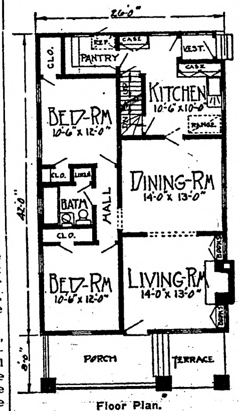
And so it came to pass that Harry and Anabelle decided on the cute little bungalow shown here. They had spent many a happy evening looking over the latest standard and novel designs, and each had secretly fallen in love with this one.

This bungalow is of standard design, and yet has enough points of individuality to create a more or less novel exterior. The low gable roof and the shingle walls when combined with the chimney of the fireplace tend to place it in the class of French homes.

Over all, the house measures 42 feet by 26 feet, not allowing for the 8-foot porch and terrace. Exposed rafters add to the beauty of the terrace. The front door opens to the living room, which is 14 feet long and 13 feet wide. A real fireplace about 6 feet wide with bookcases on each side, creates a very homey atmosphere, and the large window facing the street gives the room lots of light. The dining room connects the kitchen and a hall joins both bedrooms.

Both bedrooms are 10 feet 6 inches wide by 12 feet long, with large closets. The bathroom is centrally located and has a linen closet.

A bungalow such as described will create a very nice effect if placed on a 50-foot lot, although it may be comfortably placed on one 35 feet wide. The large pillars supporting the porch and the exposed rafters are covered with stucco to balance with the chimney and to contrast with the rough shingles of the exterior wall.



Floor Plan.

The kitchen deserves special attention. Doors leading to the basement and to the attic open to the kitchen. Two large kitchen cabinets are located in and a large pantry is built off the kitchen directly across from the vestibule. This may be glassed in and arranged to hold the ice box.

Strength of Wood Is Determined by Tests

Lumber used by builders has come in for a series of exhaustive tests to determine the relative strength of various sorts of woods under a compressional strain. By applying pressure to the end of a timber and increasing the force till the wood bursts, the compressional strength, or "column capacity," of the wood can be accurately measured.

For this purpose the United States forest service at Madison, Wis., used a tremendous machine capable of exerting a pressure of 1,000,000 pounds. This gigantic squeezer is large enough to take timbers 30 feet in length and a foot square.

In making the tests the remarkable fact was discovered that knotty wood was practically as strong for columns as clear wood, the knots apparently having very little effect on the breaking point of the timbers.

Knowledge of this fact should effect a large saving in building construction, according to the officials of the laboratory, as builders waste thousands of dollars in discarding knotted wood for columns when it could just as well be used.

Knotted wood, of course, is less dense and elastic than clear timber, as it comes from nearer the top of the tree, and it is not implied that wood containing knots should be deliberately chosen for column work.

Certain kinds of wood, of course, have higher column capacities than others. In one test southern yellow pine was shown to have a resistance as high as 432,600 pounds.

Colonial Bricks Like Mayflower Furniture

How often you hear it said of an old house that the bricks of which it was made were imported from England or Holland, states the editorial writer in the building number of House and Garden magazine. People actually believe this to be a fact, just as they believe that the Mayflower brought over vast quantities of furniture. Had this been true it would have required more than one Leviathan to have brought either the furniture or the bricks.

The historian, George Cary Eggleston, remarked on this in one of his books: "Nearly all these bricks, whether English or Dutch, were made in America, as later scholarly research has conclusively proved. The only difference between English and Dutch bricks was one of dimensions. The small bricks molded upon a Dutch model were known as Holland bricks. The much larger ones, molded upon an English model, were called English bricks.

"The very learned and scholarly historian of South Carolina, Mr. McCrady, has conclusively proved that the so-called English bricks used in the construction of Carolina houses could not have been imported from England. By simple arithmetical calculation he has shown that all the ships landing in the Carolinas during the Seventeenth century—even if all of them had been loaded exclusively with bricks—could not have brought enough bricks to build one-half or one-fourth of the 'English brick' houses of that part of the country."

Windows and Openings Not for Cedar Closets

The question has frequently come up as to the advisability of putting a window in such a closet. In "The National Builder" magazine the question is answered by a cedar lumber manufacturer as follows:

"While we have no definite information from any one having a closet of this kind with an outside window, our suggestion would be to eliminate the window. The value of a cedar closet is maintained only through such care as applies to a cedar closet. That is, the door should be kept closed to keep all of the aromatic qualities of the cedar within the closet walls. That is just the same as keeping the lid closed on a cedar chest.

"While outside windows are very nice for closets, we believe that in the use of cedar closets, where you want every possible protection against moths, the window should not be included in specifications."

Judge Rules Bathroom Not Considered Room

A bathroom is not considered a room in so far as deed restrictions are concerned, according to a recent legal ruling handed down by Judge George H. Gessner of Youngstown, Ohio. As a result a permanent injunction was granted to prevent a lot owner from erecting a five-room and bath house on a lot restricted to a six-room house or one larger.

According to the American Institute of Architects, sun porch or sun room and dining alcove are not considered primary rooms in architectural designing of homes.

Frank Rikert, Who Left Illinois for California in Covered Wagon in 1864, Wouldn't Take $100 for Bottle of Tanlac.

Frank Rikert, well-known resident of North Sacramento, Cal., who came to the state from Illinois in a covered wagon in 1864, along with other hardy pioneers, recently exhibited a bottle of Tanlac, which he had just purchased, to a friend at his home and remarked: "If I thought this was the last bottle of Tanlac I would ever be able to buy, I wouldn't take one hundred dollars for it," thus proving the high valuation he places on the famous treatment.

"I believe Tanlac really saved my life when I took it after the Flu about a year ago," continued Mr. Rikert, "for the attack left me 20 pounds off in weight, and unable to turn over in my bed without assistance. I tell you, I thought my time had surely come.

"But, thanks to my wife's insistence, I kept on taking Tanlac till I was able to do all my work again, had back all my lost weight, and I've been feeling years younger ever since. I'm always telling my friends about Tanlac, and can't say too much for it."

DAIRY FACTS

COWS ON PASTURE NEED SOME GRAIN

The common practice of feeding no grain to dairy cows on early pasture is probably not good economy in the long run, in the opinion of workers in the field of animal feeding at Cornell university.

They point out that pasture grass is a strong stimulant to milk production. If no grain is fed the cows are likely to run down in flesh. This will lead to reduced milk production later on, when the pastures begin to dry up, and heavy feeding then will ordinarily not prevent this reduction. Cows of average production when they go on pasture should be fed at least one-third to one-half of the amount of grain they were receiving when in the barn.

But the grain mixture does not need such expensive high protein feeds as linseed oil, cottonseed meal or gluten feed as are given during the winter season. A mixture made up of equal parts of wheat bran, ground oats and hominy or corn meal would be suitable.

A grain mixture depends upon the kind of roughage with which it is to be fed. Pasture grass is a high protein feed and, furthermore, the proteins it contains are of the highest quality, so high protein feeds may be left out of the grain ration. Yet grass lacks fat or energy-producing nutrients. Except for this deficiency, it is an almost perfect feed for milk production.

In a ration made up of pasture grass and a grain mixture containing no high protein feeds, the protein content will always equal or exceed the amounts called for in feeding standards for cows producing up to sixty pounds of milk daily, as long as pasturage is plentiful, green and succulent. This statement applies only under these conditions. When pastures begin to dry up and get short during July and August the grass contains much less protein than earlier in the season. The grain mixture must then be changed to include some high protein feeds. In addition more grain must be fed to make up for the shortage in pasture.

Best Plan to Grow Into a High-Producing Dairy

"When good grade cows are selling from $150 to $200 per head, there is a tendency to buy cheap ones," says C. B. Finley, dairy expert of Iowa. Many men, he finds, get enthusiastic over the possibilities of dairying, sell their herds and replace them with cheap dairy cows whose only qualification for the name is the fact that they recently freshened or possess the color of one of the dairy breeds. The natural result is failure and a disgust for the dairy business.

Furthermore, there are many men who lack the necessary experience to make cows profitable should they succeed in buying good ones. Finley reports much more general success when farmers grow into a high-producing herd. This is accomplished by raising the daughters of a good pure bred bull or in buying a few choice heifers. No doubt individual cases warrant buying a few good pure bred cows for foundation animals.

The man who grows into the dairy business has an opportunity to reorganize his crop rotation and establish a legume crop so necessary for milk production. As a rule it is also necessary for him to improve his barn and put in a silo, all of which costs money and must be done as profits allow.

Corn Fed to Live Stock

More than 85 per cent of the United States corn crop is fed to live stock and somewhat less than 10 per cent is used for human food, according to recent data compiled by the United States Department of Agriculture. The hog is the largest consumer, 40 per cent being fed to swine on farms. Horses and cattle are next, using 20 and 15 per cent, respectively. The exports of corn, as grain, have never been large.

U. S. AGENTS TAKE 3 COUNTERFEITERS AFTER LONG HUNT

New York.—With the arrest of three men on charges of counterfeiting, Joseph A. Palma, chief of the secret service force in New York, announced that the mystery of the recent circulation of bogus war savings stamps, postage stamps and ten and twenty dollar Federal Reserve notes had been explained. The prisoners are Isaac Levine, of 69 Somerset street, Newark; Lewis Wilkes, of 100 Rockaway road, Jamaica, and Philip Leiberman, alias John Davis.

According to Mr. Palma, the three men began manufacturing war savings stamps at Newark in 1919 and disposed of their product in small quantities in Salem, Mass., and Buffalo. Some of them, the agent said, also appeared in Newark about the same time. Most of the stamps were seized and a hunt, fruitless until recently, was begun.

Mr. Palma said that after a large quantity of the stamps had been printed the plant was dismantled and thrown into the river. He said the government intends dredging for the outfit in order to use it against the prisoners when they are brought to trial.

Arrested for Counterfeiting.

Fake Postage Stamps Appear.

After this plant had been dismantled and the agents had lost trace of the source of the war savings stamps, Lieberman and two friends, Paul Adler and Benjamin Podelsky, were arrested December 11 in connection with the appearance in the East of a quantity of two-cent postage stamps and $10 Federal Reserve notes. A plant was seized at 330 New York Avenue, Jamaica.

Palma said he believed Lieberman, Levine and Wilkes were involved in six counterfeiting cases besides the one for which they were arrested. These included, he said, an attempt to put out $20 notes, which had only a small circulation.

Leiberman confessed, Mr. Palma said, to participation in the forgery of war savings stamps.

Majority of Stamps Withdrawn.

"They didn't get very far with these," the agent asserted. "Fully 95 per cent of those manufactured in Newark were seized by secret service agents. Although the 1919 issue exceeded their production of the issue of 1918, I wish to contradict certain statements that thousands of dollars' worth of these stamps are in circulation in New York and other parts of the country. Only small quantities have been in circulation at any time, and most of these have already been withdrawn.

Farm Labor Higher in '23 Than Preceding Two Years

Washington.—Farmers were required to pay higher wages to male farm labor during 1923 than in the two preceding years, the United States Department of Agriculture reports. The average rate per month with board in 1923 was $33.18; in 1922 it was $29.17, and in 1914 the rate was $21.05. The average monthly rate without board in 1923 was $40.91; in 1922 it was $41.79, and in 1914 the rate was $29.88.

Day wages for harvest labor, with board, averaged $2.45 in 1923 as compared with $2.20 in 1922 and with $1.55 in 1914. For farm labor other than at harvest time the rate per day with board was $1.93 in 1923, as compared with $1.65 in 1922 and with $1.13 in 1914.

The peak year in wages of farm labor in recent years was 1920, the department points out. The deflation of general prices then began and farm rates continued to decline until the fall of 1922, when an upward trend developed.

A MAN OF INTEGRITY

A physician who reaches out to benefit humanity leaves a record behind him that is worth while. Such a man was Dr. R. V. Pierce, founder of the Invalids Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y. He was an eminent physician, a leading and honored citizen, known for his honesty and executive ability. His study along medical lines, and his knowledge of the remedial qualities of herbs and plants led to the discovery of his wonderful herbal remedy, Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription, the woman's tonic which has had the greatest number of supporters for the past fifty years. It is just the herbal tonic required if a woman is borne down by pain and sufferings at regular or irregular intervals, by nervousness or dizzy spells, headache or backache. Favorite Prescription can now be had in tablet form as well as liquid at most drug stores.

Gold in Ocean Water

Several eminent physicists and natural scientists are experimenting with a modern avenue of alchemy in that the ocean waters are being worked with to produce what gold they contain. An ultimate cost of 10 cents per barrel of water containing 4 cents in gold is what is aimed at in a practical way.

Your doctor advises internal cleanliness

HE will tell you that the first results of constipation—headache, sleepless nights, biliousness, backache, etc.—warn that the body is flooded with intestinal poisons. In time, these poisons may cause the breakdown of health and lead to serious disease. In constipation, say intestinal specialists, lies the primary cause of more than three-quarters of all illness including the gravest diseases of life.

Hence, doctors urge internal cleanliness—regular and thorough removal of food waste from the body.

"Keep Clean Inside" Say Physicians

Laxatives Aggravate Constipation

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Why Physicians Favor Lubrication

Medical science, through knowledge of the intestinal tract gained by X-ray observation, has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage out of the body. Thus Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water it is harmless.

Get rid of constipation and avoid disease by adopting the habit of internal cleanliness. Take Nujol as regularly as you brush your teeth or wash your face. For sale by all druggists.

Origin of Honeydew Melon.

The original seed of the honeydew melon is said to have been obtained from a melon shipped from Africa to New York city. The seed was planted at Rocky Ford, Colo., and crossed with other varieties for two or three seasons. The so-called honeydew melon is the result. As yet this melon has not been brought into a stable condition of reproduction.

Why Greek Soldiers Shaved.

Beards were worn universally by the Greeks until Alexander the Great ordered his soldiers to remove them so that the enemy might not grasp them in a fight.

WHO INFLATED THE CURRENCY?

George E. Roberts Gives Common Sense Explanation for Currency Increase and Decrease.

GOVERNMENT TOOK NO PART

Due to Changes in Supply, Demand and Prices of Commodities Caused by War—Federal Reserve Not to Blame.

The mistaken notion that the currency is inflated and deflated by the government in the United States from motives beyond the understanding of average people is effectually set at rest by George E. Roberts, noted banker and exponent of sound money, in an article in the Journal of the American Bankers' Association.

"There has been inflation by the governments of Germany and other European countries, which have issued money for the purpose of paying their expenses," Mr. Roberts says. "The United States Government has done nothing of this kind since the Civil War.

"There is a genuine need for elasticity in the volume of currency, and for machinery to adjust it to the legitimate needs of the country. The means provided are the Federal Reserve Banks, authorized to issue currency to their member banks, either in payment of deposits or for loans.

Side-Tracked Like Freight Cars

"More currency is needed in September, October, November and December than in January and February. As business slackens, currency naturally retires from circulation. Money accumulates in the member banks and they send it in to the Reserve banks, which in effect retires it, as freight cars are retired when traffic falls off.

"What caused the great inflation of credit and currency? It was due primarily to the war, which made extraordinary demands upon the industries and caused a great rise of wages and prices. It was inevitable that more credit and money would be called for to carry on business.

"The boom year of business that followed the armistice was likewise abnormal. The end of the war released a great many demands that had been held in check. The foreign demands upon us at first increased. There was a temporary stimulus, but the volume of business was abnormal and could not be sustained. Agricultural production in Europe revived, the prices of agricultural products moved back toward normal, importations from the United States fell off, prices declined, 'deflation' began.

"Some say 'inflation should not be permitted,' but if war occurs inflation is unavoidable. Recruiting armies makes a labor scarcity. Contractors bid above going wages to attract men. The war industries did the same and the peace industries raised wages to hold their men. Governments of Europe sent representatives to this country to buy food and they bid up prices on the grain exchanges. Higher levels of wages and prices meant that more credit and money was required to handle business.

More Business, More Money

"The increased issues of currency was a result of allowing business to go ahead, upon the rising level of wages and prices. When a factory pay-roll doubled, twice as much currency had to be furnished for it. When cotton rose from 10 cents a pound to 30 and 40, more currency was required to handle the crop, and so all around the circle.

"Deflation did not come by an act of the government or the Federal Reserve authorities in suddenly withdrawing money from circulation. Deflation came naturally when business fell off and prices declined. Just as an increasing volume of business at higher prices called more currency into use, so a decreasing volume of business at lower prices released currency from use and caused it to return to the Reserve banks.

"There has been absolutely nothing new or strange in these price movements related to the war. Inflation and deflation have been just as always when wars have occurred. The only new factor has been the population. That is always being renewed, and most people do not learn by the experince of others. When hard times come it is always the thing to lay the blamed on somebody, and this time the Federal Reserve System has taken most of it."

AMERICAN SAVINGS INCREASE

New York.—Continued increase in the savings of the American people is indicated by the latest national compilation just completed by the Savings Bank Division of the American Bankers' Association. Savings deposits in banks and trust companies of the United States were reported at $17,300,000,000, June 30, 1922, the last available nation-wide figures, as compared with $16,620,000,000, June 30, 1921. This is an increase of $680,000,000 or 4.1 per cent.

The number of savings depositors, as indicated by the number of accounts, shows an increase of 4.9 per cent, with the states reporting for the first time in 1922 excluded. The third annual report of the Savings Bank Division on school savings banking also shows increased American thrift, 1,271,029 pupils having savings accounts during the school year of 1921-1922 as against 802,906.

In King Tut's Time.

Folks in King Tut's time were not so slow. Carl Mitman, in cataloguing the ship models in his department of the Smithsonian Institution, points out that Egyptians built boat hulls of the correct form for speed nearly 4,000 years before modern scientific designers arrived at the same conclusions. Vikings had the right idea and Malay pirates had the waveline theory of construction down to perfection when English and American sailboats were clumsy tubs.

Bravelette.

A new material, bravelette, is used by a German inventor in the manufacture of safety razors. It looks like ivory, tortoise shell or marble, depending on the manner in which it is manufactured. The advantage of this material lies in the fact that the apparatus cannot rust. There is no need to dry the razor after use. It is sufficient to rinse it. Another advantage is that it is cheaper than razors made of metal.

MOST IMPORTANT NEWS OF WORLD

Big Happenings of the Week Condensed for the Benefit of Busy Readers.

Washington

Washington — American marines landed at Puerto Cortez, Honduras, and established a place of refuge for foreigners.

Washington—The senate ratified the agreement between the United States and Finland for the payment of $9,000,000 Finnish war debt to this government in the next 62 years.

Washington—George T. Summerlin, acting American charge to Mexico City, was ordered to Rome to become counselor of the embassy.

Washington—The American Red Cross will rehabilitate survivors and families of victims of the Nixon, N. J., explosion. This will include repairing homes, supplying clothing and furniture, and helping them until they obtain employment.

Washington—A motion picture film entitled "A Tour of Alaska," showing many scenes taken on the trip to the territory last summer by the late President Harding, has been released by the department of the interior, for the use of colleges, clubs and other educational organizations.

Washington—Many people utilize the 1-cent postal cards for their correspondence. The postoffice department is using 1,253,000,000 this year, and is preparing to make almost 1,500,000,000 in 1925. They will cost $815,000 to manufacture and print at the government printing office here. Last year they cost 60 cents a thousand to manufacture; this year they will cost 64 cents a thousand.

Washington—Better terminal facilities for barge lines on the Mississippi river are needed for their successful operation, Secretary J. W. Weeks declared at a hearing before the house commerce committee on the Denison bill to create a government corporation to supervise inland waterway transportation. He also stressed the necessity of improving equipment used in such service.

Domestic

New York—Prohibition agents captured a $50,000 redistilling apparatus capable of an estimated daily output of 20,000 gallons.

San Antonio—Mrs. Bertha Horchem, member of an air circus, was killed when her plane crumpled and she fell 1,200 feet, her husband and 3,500 spectators witnessing the fall.

Louisville, Neb.—Windows in practically every house here were broken and the entire town was terrified when a powder magazine at a quarry near the city limits exploded. Store windows were broken and heavy property damage to buildings were reported.

Chicago—Approximately 10,000,000 automobile campers hit the trails of the country in 1923, the touring bureau of the Chicago Motor club has estimated, at the same time predicting a conisderable increase in the number of "motor gipsies" this year.

Swarthmore, N. Pa.—Emma Jane Nehl, of Chicago, was awarded this year's $3,000 prize by the Chautauqua Drama board for the best play for Chautauqua production, Dr. Paul M. Pearson, secretary of the drama board, announced. He said the winner was chosen after a trial production of the play "Their Honor the Mayor."

Chicago—Samples of the sausage which was believed to have been responsible for the death of five persons at Sterling, Colo., a week ago, contained no sign of botulinus, the germ which it was thought caused the fatalities, Dr. J. C. Geiger, professor of bacteriology at the University of Chicago, announced.

Indianapolis—Harry O. Chamberlain, judge of the Marion county circuit court, was asked to act as special judge in the trial of Warren T. McCray, governor of Indiana, on an indictment returned by the county grand jury charging embezzlement of $155,000 of the state board of agriculture's funds.

Chicago—A clue to Tommy O'Connor, who broke jail while under sentence of death a few years ago, has been found in the woods country at Hurley, Wis., it was learned. Walter Van Horn, a deputy sheriff, was sent to Hurley last week, it was disclosed and reported that he had found what he believed was evidence that O'Connor had been there and had gone into the woods when news of his presence there leaked out.

Boston—The steamer Leviathan was found to have suffered serious damage from running aground last September in New York harbor. When the water drained away from the hull in dry dock it was apparent that it had fared worse than had been supposed. The steamer's plates were twisted and torn over an area about 220 feet long and 10 feet wide. In four or five places the hull was pierced through.

New York—Advices received by the All American Cable company from Punta Arenas, Costa Rica, said earth shocks were felt there and were continuing with greater intensity. A new volcano, the message added, has opened in a mountain range midway between San Jose and Punta Arenas.

New York—William Bradley, one time multimillionaire, builder of most of the Broadway-Seventh avenue subway, the Homestead tunnel of the Pennsylvania railroad and the Croton siphon, died at his home here, virtually a pauper, it became known when his will was filed for probate.

Sports

Minneapolis—Jack Renault of Montreal added Cliff Kramer of St. Paul to his long list of knockout victims, the Canadian heavyweight champion flattening Kramer for the count in the fourth round of a fight scheduled for 10 rounds.

Orlando, Fla.—Pat Moran, manager of the Cincinnati Reds, died in a hospital here of Bright's disease. He died as he had lived—"playing the game"—stubbornly resisting heavy odds in fighting his last grim battle with the same determination he showed on the baseball diamond. Jack Hendricks succeeds Pat Moran as manager of the Cincinnati Nationals. Hendricks managed one major league club, the St. Louis Cardinals, several years ago and has piloted many pennant winners in the minors. He joined the Cincinnati club this season as coach and assistant manager, after resigning his managership of the Indianapolis American association club.

Foreign

Rangoon, Burmah—The town of Myanaung, on the Irawandi river near Prome, was almost entirely burned, say reports just received here. Thousands of homeless persons are camping on the river bank.

Berlin—After 19 years of married life, the crown prince and crown princess of Germany have been forced to appeal to the courts to obtain the gorgeous widding present given them by all the mayors of the Prussian cities.

Christiania, Norway—An instrument known as the "sun compass" has been constructed to the design of Captain Roald Amundsen for use on his transpolar flight. It will supplant the ordinary compass, which is unreliable in the region of the pole.

Berlin—Foreign Minister Stresemann in the reichstag demanded removal of the Allied military control and declared that the German government could not accept a guarantee commission to see that Germany was held in the state of disarmament.

Geneva, Switzerland—Portugal and Rumania have petitioned the League of Nations for a seat on the naval committee which is directed by the council of the league, and with the help of the South American countries they are expected to continue the efforts begun in Rome to extend the principles of the Washington treaty.

Paris—The Paris garbage men have gone on strike for more pay, and city authorities are making arrangements for an improvised service. Parisians also are deprived of the parcel post service which is run under contract by private companies. Employees of the Paris district are striking for increased wages.

Berlin—Resolutions denouncing the Turkish nationalism for abolishing the caliphate, and calling upon the entire Moslem world to establish a commercial and social boycott against the Kemanist government were adopted at a gathering of the entire Islamic community in Berling, comprising Mohammedans from 41 lands.

Mexico City—General Plutarco Elias Calles continues to be a candidate for the presidency, announces the Calles party. He has a majority in congress and in the Obregon cabinet. He is the only prominent candidate, as the De La Huerta party refuses to present a candidate. The agrarians, revolutionists and workingmen's unions are behind him.

Moscow—Twenty-two members of the bandit gang which held up the Warsaw-Moscow express train near the Polish frontier last October, robbing the diplomatic couriers on board, have been sentenced to death at Mins. The leader, the former Polish Colonel Monich, escaped. The evidence at the trial was that Colonel Monich's real aim was a monarchist uprising in White Russia in the spring.

Fiume, Italy—Fiume has been placed under Italian law in accordance with a decree issued by General Giardino, military governor, establishing the civil and political organization of the city. The new territory, which is designated at Carnaro, has not yet been officially annexed to Italy, so the administrative offices there will continue until after the annexation formalities and the government orders the holding of elections.

Paris—Banishment of the caliphate from Turkey means the end of harems, according to Ottoman circles in Paris. Mustapha Kemal Pasha has long sought abolition of polygamy but has not dared openly demanded it. A change in religious attitude following the caliph's exile is expected to cause a renunciation of polygamy and legal measure against maintenance of a harem.

London—The cabinet has decided to appoint a committee to consider Indian affairs, with authority to consult the members of the secretary for India's council, members of parliament interested in India and representatives of Indian opinion, according to the Daily Herald. The labor party, the party adds, regards this as the first step toward meeting the insistent Indian demand of the claim for self government.

Paris—Rex Ingram, famous American moving picture director, who produced "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" and other screen classics has definitely decided to quit the movies forever in order to devote the rest of his life to sculpture.

London—The American round the world flight cropped up in the house of commons when Sir Harry Brittain asked whether the government had any information regarding the proposed American attempt. Full information concerning the American flight had been received by the air ministry declared Undersecretary of Air Leach.

News Briefs from All the State

Condensed Stories of Happenings of the Week in Minnesota

Bemidji—With a heavy shipping season in prospect, sawing operations at the plant of the Crookston Lumber company will begin about April 1.

Spooner—Mrs. Erickson, wife of publisher of the Spooner News, has been appointed postmistress here and is now in charge of that office.

Moorhead—The Clay county unit of the Minnesota Potato Growers exchange will be organized within the next 10 days, O. M. Olson, organization campaign manager, announced.

Rochester—Triplets were born to Mr. and Mrs. Albert Kujath. All are boys and all are doing nicely. This is one of the few cases of triplets reported in many years in this city.

Ortonville—One of the old landmarks of Ortonville soon will be wrecked, or moved to another location, to make way for the new armory and community building to be erected here.

Virginia—The alfalfa acreage of the north end of St. Louis county will be increased 100 per cent, according to August Neubauer, local county agent. The increased acreage amounts to 400 per cent over a year ago.

Fairmont—Byron H. Curtis, Martin county's representative in the state legislature, has filed for re-election. He has served two previous terms. August E. Mau, a Waverly farmer, also filed as a candidate.

Moorehead—Clay county commissioners sold $250,000 worth of road bonds at a premium of $900 and interest at 4¾ per cent. The bonds make available this year $250,000 for road work.

Ortonville—Vanity cases and powder puffs have been officially banned from the Ortonville city schools. Too much attention is paid to cosmetics and not enough attention is given to study, the school authorities say.

Winona—Advocates of the erection of a tuberculosis sanatorium in Winona county won a victory when the Winona League of Women Voters, after listening to arguments advanced in favor of the project, went on record in support of the proposal.

Rochester—With the completion of the animal farm of the Mayo clinic, four miles from the city, and the consequent removal of to that place of all animals used for experimental purposes, improvements which will cost about $30,000 are now in progress.

Little Falls—A peramennt county tax committee was elected here at a tax reduction conference attended by town, village and city school board officials and taxpayers. About 800 persons, mostly farmers, were in attendance.

Hibbing—Announcement was made by H. S. Wallin, superintendent of the Mahoning mine, that a day and night crew will start work on stripping with two shovels. This will give employment to more than 200 men and will start mining operations one month earlier than any time in the past ten years.

Redwood Falls—Contracts have been let by the board of education for the erection of a new grade school building here. E. Carlstrom of Mankato was given the general contract on his bid of $122,082. To this is added contracts for the heating, ventilating, plumbing and wiring, which will bring the total price of the building up to $162,674.

Hibbing—District Judge Martin Hughes has announced that, as an incentive to emphasize the "ten commandments" of real American citizenship, $100 donated by R. K. Doe, United States naturalization examiner, will be offered as prizes in statewide competition. The sum will be divided into four prizes, $50, $25, $15 and $10. Every individual, club and civic organization in Minnesota interested in good citizenship may compete.

Rochester—What is regarded as an extraordinary record for the production of butter was made recently by a purebred Holstein cow in the herd of Christopher Graham of Rochester. According to the advanced registry department of the Holstein-Friesian association of America, this cow, Grahamholm Segis Pauline Colantha, a junior 3 year old, produced in one year 23,570.4 pounds of milk and 740.46 pounds of butterfat—equal to 925.5 pounds of butter.

Crosby—Pumping was resumed in the shaft of the Milford mine where 41 miners were drowned late in January. The bodies of the victims are still in the shaft, buried in tons of mud, sand and weeds as well as water. The mud is too thin to shovel and too thick to pump. Several days ago the pumps became clogged with the grass and weeds and were hoisted and new screens made. Now two lines of clear water are running into the shaft in an attempt to thin the mixture so that it can be pumped.

Ivanhoe—A cow, owned by Sonderlind Brothers near this place, recently gave birth to triplets. Previous to this the cow had given birth to four sets of twins, making 11 healthy calves in five freshenings, believed to be a record for the state.

Cass Lake—Although the celebration and six day dance which the Indians are to stage here is not scheduled to start until July 1, preparations are already being made by both braves and squaws, particularly the latter, who are making over old and preparing new costumes to be used in the dances.

St. Hilaire—Selmt A. Hoff has been named postmaster here by President Coolidge.

St. Cloud—J. C. Mitchell, attorney at Brooten, has announced he will run against United States Representative Harold Knutson at the next election.

Faribault — Plans to sponsor an honorary scholastic society in the Faribault high school have been announced by the Faribault Lions club.

Faribault — Arthur Nauman, local poultry breeder, was elected president of the Cannon Valley Poultry association at its annual meeting here to succeed A. M. Brand.

Hibbing—Legionaires of the range, backing the campaign of the Hibbing post, are planning to descend on St. Cloud in force when the state convention meets there the coming summer, to ask for the 1925 convention.

Willmar — An underground moonshine outfit was found by federal agents and Sheriff Bonde at Roscoe in Stearns county. An elaborate still was found in the all concrete room under a garage floor part of which could be moved for an opening.

Owatonna—Officers of local units of the 135th infantry have received word from headquarters of the national guard regiment at Minneapolis that the annual encampment of the regiment will be held at Fort Snelling July 5 to 20.

Windom—The city council has ordered that a special election be conducted on April 8 for the purpose of voting bonds in the sum of $2,500 for the purchase of the Hutton property to be converted into a tourists' rest camp.

New Ulm—The receipts of the Lafayette Farmers' Creamery company increased $38,000 for the year 1923, according to a report just issued. The total business of the concern amounted to $156,711. A total of 766,285 pounds of cream were taken in.

Fairmont—Herman Mickow of Rutland township, is the owner of "Bluebird," a Holstein cow for which a record is claimed. The cow is one of a tested herd and in 31 days gave 2,340 pounds of milk, which yielded 75.5 pounds of butterfat.

Moorhead—Clay county has signed more than its quota of potato acreage for the Minnesota Potato Growers' Exchange, O. M. Olson, county manager, announced. The county signed 26,842 acres, Mr. Olson said, as against a "stimulative quota" of 25,000.

Willmar—Contracts for the construction of the new Lincoln school building were let to the Standard Construction company of Minneapolis on their bid of $73,975 for the general construction. The total cost of the building will be in the neighborhood of $100,000.

Thief River Falls—The amount of money loaned to Pennington county farmers under the new rural credits act is nearing the $1,000,000 mark, according to figures obtained from Fred Lorentson, register of deeds, and new farm mortgages are still coming into the office to be recorded.

Slayton—The Slayton "Sleep Dodgers club" is the name selected for the organization of radio owners. R. L. Reed, who suggested the name for the club, was presented with a prize. Nearly 50 radio owners belong to the new club and meetings will be conducted twice a month to discuss matters of mutual interest.

Fridley—Work is already under way on the new $2,000,000 filtration and pumping station, now under construction six miles northeast of downtown Minneapolis. The plant will have a capacity of 160,000,000 gallons of water a day. The first unit, which now is being built, will be finished some time in 1926.

Balaton—At a mission gathering of pastors at the Current Lake Swedish Lutheran church Harry Soxie, an Eskimo Bible student of Alaska, will be one of the principal speakers. Several prominent Swedish Lutheran pastors of this section of the state will take part in the sessions.

Marshall—The erection of a large modern fireproof hotel in this city this summer is a project which is being promoted by the Marshall Business Men's association. A committee has been named to investigate the proposition and will report back to the association at an early date.

New Ulm—The state of Minnesota has never reimbursed Brown county for support of dependent children and the county commissioners at a recent meeting adopted a resolution calling for an explanation. Under an act of 1917, it is declared the state is to pay one-third of the cost of supporting dependent children, residing in the county.

Moorhead—A naval reserve unit with 35 men and three officers has been organized in Moorhead. Both Fargo and Moorhead men are in the unit. In addition to the drill pay and equipment given each man, a two weeks training cruise on the Great Lakes is offered.

Pipestone—Three hundred farmers and business men from five counties of this district met here to consider the McNary-Haugen bill for agricultural relief. Resolutions favoring early passage of the measure were addressed to President Coolidge and senators and representatives.

St. Paul—Automobile owners of Minnesota already owe the state more than $350,000 in penalties alone because about 75,000 of them have not paid their 1924 auto license tax, according to figures obtained from the office of Mike Holm, secretary of state.

Winona—Construction of a new dyke road across the Wisconsin bottoms to link with the Mississippi river bridge at this city was discussed at a conference of the highway, city and county officials. Work on the road is to commence early in the spring, according to plans.

ENTIRE CREW IN MINE ARE DEAD

175 Men Entomed In Utah Coal Mine By Explosions Saturday

Castle Gate, Utah.—Twenty-two bodies had been recovered from the Utah Fuel company's mine No. 2 in which 175 men were entombed Saturday morning. Smoke and gas accumulated in the far part of the escapeway of the mine is proving a handicap to the rescue workers. Some of the bodies recovered were mutilated.

Real headway in the rescue work started about midnight Monday and continued until morning. The crews, held back all day by fire and cavein, began rescue work with renewed vigor at about 8 p. m. Sunday after they had successfully combatted the fire.

The poisonous gas, arch enemy of the rescue crews, was disappearing in many portions of the mine, according to reports, and in many parts of the mine, crews were carrying on their investigations.

Relief stations and first aid depots have been established as the workers made headway. Airlines and waterlines have been laid as the men advanced, and no chances are taken on other members of the relief force being killed by the fumes.

Three Terrific Blasts.

The destructive explosions occurred from some yet unknown cause Saturday about 8:15 a. m. First came a terrific blast which hurled timbers, piping and rails across the gulch, a distance of several thousand feet. The 800 pound steel door of the escapeway was hurled a half mile. The second blast came a minute later and in 20 minutes came the third. The relief and the reconstruction started at once and have been carried on continuously ever since.

DAIRY INCREASE IS RECORD

N. D. Advance Greater Than Any Leading Dairy State.

Fargo, N. D.—North Dakota made a bigger gain in the number of dairy cows on its farms in 1923 than any of the other leading dairy states of the United States and advanced from 20th place to 16th place in the total number of cows owned.

This is the report of the United States department of agriculture, just made public.

North Dakota had 533,000 milch cows on its farms January 1, 1924, as compared to 503,000 January 1, 1923, and 484,000 January 1, 1922.

There was an increase of 19,000 cows in 1923 over 1922 and an increase of 30,000 cows in 1924 over 1923, or 49,000 more cows January 1, 1924 than on January 1, 1922.

This shows a 6 per cent gain for 1923 over 1922. Only three other states in the nation, Montana, Nevada, and Oregon, show a larger percentage gain. But of these states, Oregon, which made a gain of 8 per cent, has only 238,000 milch cows; Montana, which made a gain of 12 per cent, has only 194,000 cows and Nevada, which made a gain of 14 per cent, has only 24,000 milch cows.

In 1910 there were 25 states which had more dairy cows than North Dakota. In 1922 there were 20 states ahead of this state; in 1923 this had been reduced to 19 and now there are but 15 states which have more dairy cows than North Dakota, the state advancing from 26th place to 16th place in 14 years.

WILL FIGHT CANCELLATION

Sinclair and Attorneys Will Contest Action to Cancel Leases.

Chicago.—Harry F. Sinclair and a battery of six attorneys departed on Monday for Cheyenne, Wyo., to contest the government action to cancel the Teapot Dome oil leases, and expressed confidence of ultimate victory and vindication.

Mr. Sinclair was accompanied by Col. W. J. Zevely, his chief legal counsel, and five other attorneys, who are prepared to oppose the government's action which it is understood will start this week in Cheyenne with the filing of a bill for an injunction to restrain taking further oil from the Teapot.

Owen J. Roberts, and Atlee Pomerene, special counsel for the government in prosecution of the oil suits, left Washington late Monday for Wyoming to put before the federal court their application for a temporary restraining order against the Mammoth company. They will go to California afterward to bring similar action against the Pan-American Petroleum company.

In both cases the attorneys expect the court to grant the applications and hold the leases in abeyance while the government continues its efforts to cancel them entirely.

Mexican Rebels Capture Jalpan.

Frontera, Tabasco.—The federal government of Queretaro has fled in the face of an advance of 5,000 revolutionary troops under General M. Cavazos, who captured Jalpan, headquarters here of Adolfo De La Huerta, announced Monday. The revolutionary general Guadalupe Sanchez attacked and captured Plaza Medellin 15 kilometers from Vera Cruz and General Cavazos began a rapid advance from Jalpan to San Luis Potosi with a view to breaking through to Tampico, it was announced.

DETAILS OF AID NOW COMPLETE

Help Will Be Extended Direct To Farmer---Will Assist Closed Banks To Reopen

Bismarck, N. D.—The $10,000,000 Agricultural Credit corporation is functioning now, M. O. Grangaard of Minneapolis, vice president of the corporation and supervising North Dakota activities, declared Saturday, following a conference held here at which the contemplated activities in North Dakota were discussed. The office details, necessary as a preliminary to actual extension of aid, are nearing completion, he said, and within the next week it is expected that applications will be in the hands of banks in North Dakota.

It is planned that banks desiring to avail themselves of the corporation's aid will make applications direct to the Minneapolis office, on blanks to be distributed next week. The North Dakota committee and field men will assist the Minneapolis office in distributing the aid. No quota has been assigned for the various northwest states brought under the scope of the activities of the corporation, Mr. Grangaard said.

Tax Department Planned.

A plan by which direct aid will be extended to farmers, in purchasing tax certificates held by county treasurers in North Dakota, and thus reducing the interest rate on delinquent taxes from 17 to 6 per cent, was discussed. A tax department will be created in the Minneapolis office, and efforts made through further conferences with Tax Commissioner C. C. Converse and county officials to overcome legal obstacles to working out a feasible plan, Mr. Grangaard, spokesman for the conference here, said.

Many banks now closed will be opened, the vice president said. Optimism over the condition in North Dakota was expressed by Mr. Grangaard, Governor Nestos and others present at the conference at which state officials pledged co-operation with the corporation.

DUTY IS RAISED ON WHEAT

Goes Into Effect in 30 Days—Flour Duty Also Increased.

Washington.—Putting into operation for the first time the flexible provisions of the tariff act, President Coolidge has ordered increases of 12 cents a bushel in the duty on imports and 26 cents a hundred pounds on wheat flour, advancing these two rates, respectively, to 42 cents and $1.04.

At the same time the ad valorem rate of mill feeds has been decreased from 15 per cent as fixed in the law, to 7½ per cent.

The new rates, established by a proclamation issued Saturday by the president on the basis of information gathered at his direction by the tariff commission, will become effective 30 days from the date of his action and therefore will be operative at the begining of the usual April flood of wheat imports from Canada.

The wheat rate at present is 30 cents a bushel, and that on flour 78 cents a hundred pounds, but the commission found that in Canada "the principal competing country" in the cereal, wheat could be grown at a cost 42 cents a bushel lower than in the United States, and that 100 pounds of flour could be produced for $1.04 less. The difference between the costs of producing mill feeds in the two countries, however, amounted to only three-tenths of one cent a hundred pounds. The new $1.04 rate applies to semolina, crushed or cracked wheat, and similar products as well as flour.

MIDWAY BOY WINS CONTEST

Gertrude Roberts, Only Woman Student, Wins Second Place.

Fargo, N. D.—Ray Harding, of Midway, N. D., won first place in a field of contestants in the annual livestock judging contest held in the stock pavilion at the North Dakota Agricultural college. Gertrude Roberts, of Dawson, the only woman student in the school of agriculture at the college, won second place.

Harding received a total of 669 points of a possible 750, and Miss Roberts followed with a score of 654. Ten classes of livestock, including two classes each of beef cattle, dairy cattle, hogs, sheep, and horses were judged in the contest which was open to all students who cared to enter the competition. Judging started at 8 a. m.

William Freeman won third place in judging all classes with a score of 646. Following Freeman in order of rank were Harry Critchfield, R. V. Cripe, Peter Olasson, Leroy Linie, Clyde Challey, Martin Sebby, and Peter Jorgenson.

Cash Payment In Bonus Rejected

Washington.—A proposal to make full cash payments an option in the soldiers' bonus bill was voted down, 13 to 12, by the house ways and means committee, which decided to limit payments to paid up insurance. A subcommittee went to work on the form of the insurance provision in an effort to expedite a report while the committee itself took under consideration the proposal of Representative Oldfield, Democrat, Arkansas, to include in the bill another provision giving veterans the option of cash payments.

"A man named Belden, and his sister, lives there," the girl said, following the direction of his upraised arm. "They're Kentucky mountain folks that jist moved in—they say the sister's quite pretty."

The preacher seemed to be studying the place, with its wild wealth of nature about it, his eyes straying at length from the cabin to its tumbled setting of cliffs and down along the opposite bluffs, mantled with half-sprung leaves, abloom with haw and dogwood and wild apple, until, as he twisted around in the saddle, the whole beautiful panorama of the narrow valley had passed in review before him back to the winding road by which they had entered.

As the girl followed his roving eyes, a black dead limb at the top of Eagle Oak, towering high above the quickening foliage, came into view. She raised her arm and pointed up and away to the lofty landmark.

"That's where the big gray eagle's be'n comin' every summer—sence white men first come t' the Flatwoods, I guess. Look—jist over the top o' that scrub poplar, stickin' up ag'nst that white cloud."

"I see it!" the man of books exclaimed, the simple gesture of pointing out to the distant landmark revealing the native grace that might still have been his but for the stooped and studious air that life had imposed upon him. "It stands out against the fluffy whiteness plain as a flagstaff."

"Nobody in the Flatwoods would think of harmin'—"

She stopped, with a low exclamation, for the woodsman had suddenly straightened in his saddle and had jerked his hand toward the cabin squatting against the bluffs up the hollow. The others followed the motion of his hand and sat staring.

Loge Belden's sister had appeared from behind the cabin and was running toward them. She had nearly reached the bushes that fringed what might be called the front of the yard, when Belden appeared in the open door. He threw up his hand and called out a word or two, which did not quite carry to the three riders.

The mountain girl stopped and hesitated; turned and went slowly back. Belden stood aside; she entered the door; Belden closed it.

Jack was watching the preacher. He saw his quick grip on the bridle rein; saw him stiffen in the saddle and glance uneasily about.

"Astonishing! Quite extraordinary!" escaped him as the tense brief drama closed.

"Mercy!" Texie exclaimed, "I never knowed she was—crazy."

"She ain't," the woodsman muttered.

The preacher glanced around at him; threw up his head and exploded his blarey laugh. It was a queer moment for a laugh, and a queer laugh for the moment.

"Not bad philosophy, that," he said. "People are not always as crazy as they—act."

That the preacher was acting, the woodsman fully believed, but the acting was just a shade overdone—a circumstance that could hardly escape such a man as Jack Warhope, particularly after the chance clues that had first set his suspicions going. Why he was acting and what part, the woodsman was not missing any chances to find out.

The three riders sat for some time looking toward the cabin in the pocket, Texie and the preacher discussing the astonishing drama that had flared up for its tense moment in the elbow of the hills.

But the drama evidently had but one act, and that act was closed. It seemed to the woodsman, as he covertly watched the preacher, lolling with overdone awkwardness in his saddle, that he showed just a shade of relief that it was closed.

The sun, a red warrior on the homeward trail, had journeyed far down the paling fastnesses of the sky; had ducked behind a huge cloud bank piled like a breastworks across the west. Presently, finding a loop hole in the turreted cumuli, he glared back at the pursuing shadows, launched a shaft that fell spent and quivering upon Eagle run and shivered into glittering splinters upon the rifile.

Glum at the missped shaft the red warrior took his eye from the loop hole; drew farther back behind the massed fortifications; unstrung his bow. The pursuing shadows stole down the bluffs; dulled the water; dimmed the woods, waked the breeze and shook the wild apple twigs till the white blossoms snowed the grass—symbol of the hopes of men that bloom, promise fruit, die.

The girl noticed the shadows. Her eyes left the cabin; glanced up and down the opposite bluff, where, under the brow of the wooded escarpment, [illegible] were already beginning to dim. The girl's roving glance stopped at [illegible] black [illegible] ten or fifteen [illegible] blasted [illegible] before still [illegible] She swept a finger toward them, dropped her hand to the revolver at her belt and looked around at the woodsman. He caught the challenge in her eye, grinned and nodded.

With a quickness and skill that showed her mastery of the weapon, she plucked the revolver from its holster, raised it and fired. The first bullet cut a twig close to a walnut, the second brought one down.

Every horse there had been trained to stand under gun-fire. Rex merely pointed his ears sharply forward and stood to his tracks, but, even with such a firm saddle under him, the preacher flinched so at the first shot that he almost lost his balance. The second brought an effusive exclamation from him.

The slow eyes of the woodsman livened.

With a little wisp of a smile in her eyes she glanced around at him, and turned to the preacher.

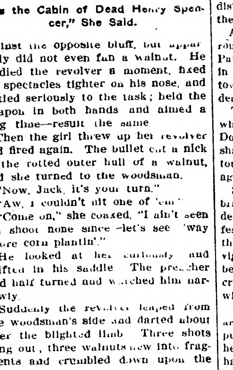
"Now, Mr. Hopkins, you can try y'ur new six-gun."

The preacher almost set up a breeze in the little valley with the gesticulations of his expressive hands; made a heavy draft on his ample stock of effusive exclamations, and finally fumbled the ivory-handled six-gun out of its holster.

He committed the blunder of cocking it with both thumbs—a bit of overacting that did not escape the man backing Graylock in apparent stolidness.

After a deal of coaching from Texie, the preacher poked the revolver forward and pulled the trigger. There was nothing to indicate that the bullet even came near the target. He threw his head back and exploded his raucous laugh. Rex had stood firm under the shot; he shied at the laugh.

The preacher brought the horse back alongside of Brownie and fired again—the bullet smacked somewhere against the opposite bluff, but apparently did not even fan a walnut. He studied the revolver a moment, fixed his spectacles tighter on his nose, and settled seriously to the task; held the weapon in both hands and aimed a long time—result the same.



"It's the Cabin of Dead Henry Spencer," She Said.

Then the girl threw up her revolver and fired again. The bullet cut a nick in the rotted outer hull of a walnut, and she turned to the woodsman.

"Now, Jack, it's your turn."

"Aw, I couldn't hit one of 'em."

"Come on," she coaxed. "I ain't seen ye shoot none since—let's see—'way b'fore corn plantin'."

He looked at her curiously and shifted in his saddle. The preacher had half turned and watched him narrowly.

Suddenly the revolver leaped from the woodsman's side and darted about over the blighted limb. Three shots rang out, three walnuts flew into fragments and crumbled down upon the leaves.

The preacher had straightened in the saddle and sat watching the wonderful marksmanship with an eye that suddenly kindled to flint and flame; but as the third walnut shattered to dust and crumbs, the stoop came back to his shoulders, the air of dried studiousness to his face.

The girl turned to the woodsman, her [illegible] eyes alive.

"You [illegible] 'a' [illegible]"

The light [illegible] eyes kindled [illegible] a response in the gray, a slow smile crawled across his bold features.

"It's [illegible] the [illegible] woods [illegible]," he said with a seriousness that set her wondering as he felt for the powder flask and bullets in his pouch.

In the dusk [illegible] rode back [illegible] the house [illegible] girl stopped her horse [illegible] front [illegible] old cabin [illegible] that squatted against the [illegible] few yards back from the Eagle Hollow road—the uncanny hovel that the woodsman had gazed down upon from the top of the bluff that morning while watching the swallows dart in and out of its ruined chimney.

"That place is enough to give one the—creeps," was the preacher's comment as he reined in Rex beside Brownie.

The girl turned in her saddle and sat for some time looking the place over—the gate now long unused, its hinges black with rust; the rank weeds and sprouts growing close up to the sagging door; the single small front window now yellow with clay that the rains had washed from between the logs; the rude clapboards of the roof warped, loosened, displaced—the crumbling remnants of what had once been a home, now desolate and forsaken under its somber canopy of trees.

"It's the cabin of dead Henry Spencer," she said, "where he murdered his wife and infant daughter with 'is ax one bitter cold night when 'e was drunk, and then wandered out and froze t' death in the snow."

"I've heard the story—from your—ah—brother—and so this is the place?"

"This is the place."

"But not all the story—"

He glanced around at her quizzically.

"No, not all"—she spoke slowly; her words half a question—"they say he—comes back."

The preacher's teeth gleamed white through his heavily bearded lips; his sarcastic exclamation point of a laugh jarred the silence of the placid valley.

"Why, Miss Texie, this is the Nineteenth century, not the Fourteenth."

"Yes,"—in red embarrassment—"but that's what they say."

He looked around at her again, with that same half-cynical expression that came so easily to his face, as he gathered up the reins.

With the mountain girl's hurried warning still fresh in his mind, the woodsman glanced covertly about him as they rode on—something he had been constantly doing since first entering the hollow. As he did so, the uncanny cabin happened to come again under his eyes. A sight met them that for the instant shook even his iron composure—a face at the window was peering at them through the clay-smudged pane.

The face ducked out of sight, and, without so much as a flick of the bridle rein—precisely as if he had seen nothing at all—the woodsman rode on. He glanced at the preacher, but apparently he had not seen the face. If he had he gave no sign.

CHAPTER XIV

The Scrape of a Match.

While grooming Graylock in his stall that evening Jack Warhope thought of the face that had appeared for its startling instant at the smudged window of Henry Spencer's unhallowed cabin. As a matter of fact, he had been thinking of it ever since riding out of the jaws of the hollow.

He hung up the curry comb and stepped to the barn door. The sun glared red through a slit in the cloudbank, and still cleared the trees on the distant foothills by a yard—enough for the purpose he contemplated.

A moment later he was climbing the rough path that led to the uplands. Pausing, to search critically the woods in every direction, he then stole away toward the ill-reputed cabin of the dead woodchopper.

The sun just edged the tree tops when he came opposite the place. Down in the bottom of the hollow the shadows lay heavy, but the light still touched the uncanny hovel squatted against the hillside.

Stealing through the bushes and brambles, he crept up to the place under cover of the fallen oak with its festoons of wild cucumber vines. Near the corner most densely hidden by the vines a chink had dropped out from between the logs, leaving a narrow crevice. Shading his eyes, he peeped within. The cabin was empty.

Hugging the wall closely, he crept around to the sagging door, softly pushed it open. His eyes lifted at what he saw—an old box on end near what had once been the fireplace an empty whisky bottle on the box, with a lamp standing beside it ready to light; a blanket ready to hang over the smudged window.

The dusty floor was covered with tracks—man tracks—one man's. Stepping so as carefully to set his feet in the tracks, he entered the cabin and closed the door.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

SCALING HEIGHTS

YOU may often be filled with wonder at the apparent ease with which some of your friends, of no pronounced ability, climb steadily and unerringly to the heights.

To your mind they are deficient in mentality and power of endurance, yet, in spite of your doubts, they keep mounting surely day by day, brushing aside difficulties with no observable effort and holding fast to their places.

Opposing forces do not daunt or discourage them.

They plan and execute. They refrain from boasting, yet within their hearts there is an ironlike resolution to stay in the fight until they meet victory.

Often they are footsore, exhausted in body and spirit, but never are they in a mood to admit defeat. They know quite as well as you that their talents are limited and their faults many. It is this conscious knowledge of their frailties that makes them persist without pause in their commendable effort.

While you are having jolly times at night among the bright lights, they are seeking in the solitude of their room the precious nuggets of wisdom, digging deep below the surface.

They have become students of biography, following seriously the blazed trails of the noble men and women who only a few years ago passed over the highway to fame and left their signboards at the fatal crossroads, where all later travelers may stop, read and gather new courage.

It must be a shallow sort of human being indeed who cannot see the value of such observation and study.

But whatever it may be with regard to the frivolous and fun-loving, this idea of following step by step the rugged paths of the great, striving to comprehend their emotions and to emulate their examples, is not only profitable to the earnest student but extraordinarily inspiring.

What dullard seeking improvement fails to find encouragement in reading of such men as Washington and Lincoln?

Those who cry "impossible" are those who need most to familiarize themselves with the trials of the immortals who overcame and won imperishable crowns.

You use perfume?

You evidently don't use enough. Perfume is a lovely thing in moderation. The flowers profit by it, the world profits by it. Why shouldn't you add to the beauty of things too? Of course when perfume covers a deficiency of the sanitary code and when it annoys people, then it is the time to put on the stop code! Perfume is lovely when it is, but baleful when it "ain't."

Your get-away here is:

SHOW THE RIGHT

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

I RECOLLECT Old Henry Smith,
Remember Hiram Brown;
No better folks to neighbor with
There are in any town.
They hated sinners, hated sin,
Idolatry, and doubt;
When things were wrong they started in
At once to point them out.

And yet there was a difference
In Henry Smith and Hi:
Both had uncommon common sense,
And couldn't stand a lie;
Old Henry hated good and strong
Whatever wasn't white;
But Hi not only saw the wrong
But also saw the right.

Old Henry was the kind who pass
Upon the other side;
But, fallin' man or fallen lass,
Old Hiram always tried
Not only sinners to condemn
And scripture to repeat,
But tried to lend a hand to them
To help them to their feet.

Well, lots of us are Henrys, yes,
And some are Hirams, too.
Condemnin' sinners ain't, I guess,
Not all there is to do,
But lend a hand, and help along,
And do your little mite—
Not only try to show the wrong
But try to show the right.

MISS STAR

"WHAT a charming person Miss Star is, and what interesting things she has done!" one of her guests said to Mrs. George the day after her dinner party.

"Miss Star told me all about knowing this explorer who's just come back from Greenland, and described some of the things he told her. I've never enjoyed a dinner more."

Mrs. George of course repeated this conversation to Miss Star on their next meeting. Miss Star looked confused. "Oh, ah, yes," she said vaguely, "I went to the illustrated lecture the other night."

Then Mrs. George forgot her impression of discrepancy. It was a month before she saw Miss Star again. Miss Star was drooping about, decoratively watching a tennis tournament. Mrs. George asked why she wasn't playing, and Miss Star replied, "I don't wish to alarm my friends; but the doctor as good as told me this morning that I could never play again. Heart," she whispered mysteriously. "I've got to be very careful for a long while!"

Mrs. George was really concerned. She spent the afternoon making herself useful and delightful to poor Miss Star, who was so good looking. She was surprised, therefore, the following day to find Miss Star out on the courts as usual.

"Oh, I guess the doctor was mistaken," was Miss Star's somewhat unconvincing explanation.

A month later Miss Star was asked to come informally to family supper with the Georges. The evening passed pleasantly and quietly. Not long afterward an acquaintance asked Mrs. George about her banquet for a certain feted foreigner—Miss Star, who had been present, had described the occasion to the acquaintance as very brilliant. And Miss Star's subsequent explanation to Mrs George that the acquaintance must have misunderstood somehow didn't hold water.

After that, when Miss Star talked about her admirers and her engagements and her adventures, Mrs. George deducted a large percentage, and then accepted the remainder tentatively. So she got on with a good deal of amusement and no disillusionments.

Then one day Miss Star told her that she was going away to live, that she was leaving in a week, and that probably they would not see her again. No one believed the news, Mrs George least of all. She felt a good deal of attachment for Miss Star, and was glad that she did not have to accept this announcement for fact. Having forgotten the incident she stopped one day to call. Miss Star's house was empty. Her habit of so dramatizing every situation that people discounted everything she said, had left her farewell performance without an audience.

They are such dear feet that go
Along the path with ours—feet fast or slow
And trying to keep pace, if they mistake,
Or tread upon some flower that we would take
Upon our breast, or bruise some reed,
Or crush poor hope until it bleed,
We must be mute.
Not turning quickly to impute
Grave fault; for they and we
Have such a little way to go—
Together such a little while along the way
We will be patient while we may.

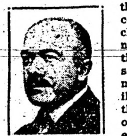
Judging a Great Institution by Small Defects

By J. H. PUELICHER
President American Bankers Association.



J. H. Puelicher

It would be difficult to find a banker, understanding thoroughly the Federal Reserve System, willing to admit that we could continue a first-class commercial nation, without the Federal Reserve Banks, or mechanisms similar to them. Yet there is antagonism to the Federal Reserve Banks based in a measure on some minor mistakes in administration, but more generally on a misunderstanding of their purposes, of what should be expected of such a system.

The banker, as much as any man, is to blame for the present misconception. He found Federal Reserve Banks a ready scapegoat to blame for no matter what happened. If it seemed desirable to refuse or call a loan it was easy to say that the Federal Reserve Bank wished it, although it should have been refused because contrary to good banking practice.

Most of all was the system blamed for the fact that violent inflation which hundreds of business men and bankers hoped might be continued forever was finally checked by putting up Federal Reserve interest rates. There were those who blamed the system for not having put up the rate soon enough and others who blamed it because it put up the rate at all.

The penalty for thus blaming every business mishap on this valuable system may be the loss of its much needed benefits. If we wish to save the present bank of the United States from the fate of its two predecessors we must make known to America, to its rank and file, the splendid usefulness of these institutions.

We must admit at the outset that in their administration mistakes have been made, that governors of Federal Reserve Banks and members of the Federal Reserve Board are human beings, and in the administration of the affairs of any institution by human beings mistakes will be made, but these have been so insignificant as compared with the outstanding usefulness of the institutions themselves that they should be judged by the good which they have performed, which, after all, has been along the line of their designed achievement, rather than by those errors which time and experience can easily eliminate.

COOPERATIVE FARM MARKETING NOTES

Progress of the Movement to "Put Farming on Par With Other Big Business."

A pamphlet and questionnaire on cooperative farm marketing recently issued by the State Bank Division, American Bankers Association, has brought out valuable information on the subject from bankers, farmers and state agricultural departments. It is being used as a campaign document in the organization of co-operative marketing associations in various sections of the country, farmers having adopted its slogan: "Put Agriculture on a Par with Other Big Business."

The movement on the part of farmers toward co-operative marketing as a cure for their present economic plight is nation-wide. There has been notable progress in the development of such associations, some conspicuously successful ones being in operation at the present time. There have also been some disastrous failures among these ventures in co-operative marketing, which is the inevitable accompaniment of the progress of any movement. The "Banker-Farmer," published by the American Bankers Association, says:

"Cause and effect are operative in co-operative marketing as truly as they are in every other business enterprise. An association will not necessarily succeed or fail merely because it is a co-operative association, but because it conforms to or transgresses from the underlying principles of successful business operation. The movement itself is of great national import and the bankers of the country can materially aid or retard its progress. The responsibility of leadership in rural communities rests very largely with the country banker. It is his duty to be informed on all matters relating to the farmers' well-being."

Modern conditions are such that agriculture cannot be successful by individual effort. To regain its position as a basic industry, and as a force in national affairs, agriculture must depend upon organization and co-operation for economic production, for economic marketing and for the establishment of its proper relationship in community life.—Howard Leonard, President, Illinois Agricultural Association.

Brown, the assignees and holders of said mortgage, on February 20th, 1924 paid delinquent taxes upon the mortgaged property hereinafter described in the sum of Two Hundred Seventy-four and 34-100 ($274.34) Dollars; and whereas, the said Edwin A. Brown and Martha G. Brown, the assignees and holders of said mortgage, have duly elected and do hereby elect to declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice, under the terms and conditions of said mortgage and the Power of Sale therein contained; and whereas, there is actually due and claimed to be due at the date of this notice, the sum of Three Thousand ($3000.00) Dollars, with accumulated interest from the 9th day of August 1920, at the rate of six per cent per annum; and whereas, the said Power of Sale has become operative and no action or proceedings having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Now, Therefore, Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the Power of Sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and covered by said mortgage, viz:

The North Half of the Southeast Quarter, the East Half of the Northeast Quarter, of Section number Twenty-three (23), in Township number One Hundred Fifty-six (156) North, of Range number Forty-one (41) West of the Fifth Principal Meridian, containing according to the United States government survey thereof 160 acres, be the same more or less, in Marshall County and State of Minnesota.

Which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Marshall County, at the Front door of the County Court House, in the City of Warren, in said County and State on the 29th, day of April 1924 at 10 o'clock A. M. of that day at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash, to pay the amount then due on said mortgage and interest and the sum of $274.34 for taxes paid on said described premises, with interest from date of payment, together with the costs and disbursements of such sale and Seventy-five Dollars attorneys fees stipulated in said mortgage in case of foreclosure.

Dated March 7, 1924.

Our Business System

For the benefit of all our patrons, it should be of interest to them to know our method and system of doing business.

We pay according to quality, 3 cents more per pound for the butterfat in first grade cream. All shareholders receive an 8 per cent dividend on shares of $25 00, which means $2.00 every year for each share. Besides the dividend, shareholders receive one-half cent more per pound for butterfat than non-shareholders, regardless of whether they are monthly or cash patrons. To illustrate what this amounts to, let us figure what the amount would be on our largest patron for 1923. His total pounds of butterfat was 3593, times one-half cent equals $17.96, plus a $2.00 dividend would make the extra amount, by being a shareholder, the neat sum of $19.96. Shareholders are part owners of the creamery, have a vote and something to say at the annual meetings, can hold office and help all the rest of the shareholders in making this the best creamery in the northwest. We are the biggest in the county, let us hold our own. It is advertising of this kind that shows others what is being done in the vicinity of Holt.

THE RED LOCK

A Tale of the Flatwoods

By DAVID ANDERSON
Author of "The Blue Moon"

Copyright by The Bobbs-Merrill Co.

The tracks had been made by a boot much worn and frayed. The man that made them must have been large and heavy, for his boot heel had dented deep into the floor boards, and the length of his stride indicated him to be little, if any, under six feet. The profusion of tracks, together with a number of half-burned matches scattered about the floor, indicated that he had been there some time—possibly several times.

The woodsman found himself wondering what manner of man he could have been, and what his purpose. And why did he bring a lamp instead of a candle? Lamps were none too plenty in the Flatwoods. Again there came over him that strangely disquieting premonition of danger—intangible; indefinable; deadly deliberate.

Everything pointed to the conclusion that the cabin's unknown visitor would come again—probably with the night. The lamp on the box, the blanket ready to hang over the window, were not without a purpose. What that purpose might prove to be could only be conjectured—possibly horse stealing. But no, or why a lamp instead of a candle?

He glanced up at the loft—except for a few boards lying loose and scattered about upon the joists, the cabin was open to the roof; he looked around into the dim far corner back of the door—it was half filled with a clutter of rubbish, broken boxes and the like—but no tracks led that way.

Using the greatest care to conceal his footprints, he opened the door, stepped cautiously out, closed it and, after a critical look about the surrounding weeds and bushes, slipped away up the side of the timbered bluff, through the woods and back to his unfinished chores.

After a hasty supper, he drew out his revolver; bent over it a brief but thoroughly competent instant of inspection by the candle; tried the trigger-pull; twirled the cylinder; dropped it back in the holster; blew out the candle and laid his hand to the door-latch. The warning of the mountain girl crossed his mind—he turned back; closed the hearth of the cook stove to hide its light; opened the door softly and stepped out into the gathering night toward the dead woodchopper's cabin.

The cloud-bank had dissolved in the west when he again reached the ill-omened hovel and the sky was hanging out its stars—the big ones already out, and the little ones coming.

He again crept down the wooded face of the bluff and, under cover of the fallen oak, festooned with the wild cucumber vines, stole up to the chink in the wall and peeped between the logs. The cabin was apparently empty of its unknown intruder.

After listening intently for some time he again stole around the wall to the door, pushed it slowly open and entered. As soon as his eyes grew accustomed to the gloom, he saw that the room was just as he had left it a few hours earlier.

Not daring to venture out on the floor, the light being too dim again to risk hiding his trail by stepping in the tracks, he reached up, caught one of the joists and, swinging from hand to hand, crossed to the far corner of the room; concealed himself behind the old boards and boxes of the rubbish heap and sat gripping his sore shoulder—the exertion had opened the gash, and he could feel the blood crawling down his side.

There is something depressing, fearsome, about entering an old deserted house—especially after nightfall. And this was the cabin of dead Henry Spencer. Few flatwoodsmen would care to go near it—much less into it—at such an hour.

Jack watched the last faint light from the west die out in the smudged window—so foul with clay that he had not been able to make out more than the bare outline of the face that had peered through it a few hours before. He knew the bats were darting about in the cabin, for the dark was alive with the click of their teeth. A screech owl shivered his lonesome wail from an upstanding branch of the fallen oak.

The woodsman half started, listened closely, smiled. The sound was genuine—it was a screech owl.

The low wash of Eagle run, lapping the rocks in its shallow bed, came up across the lonely road; the melancholy note of a whippoorwill carried down out of the woods.

A sound fell upon the night—the low swish of weeds in the yard—and the woodsman grew tense and strained. There followed a guarded footfall; a hand fumbled over the door. It opened; a heavy step creaked the sagging floor; a form bulked huge and black in the gloom; a hand and arm passed across the window and hung the blanket into place.

A match scraped—one of the old-fashioned kind that sputter a while before making much light—the chimney of the lamp was raised; the match laid to the wick. Out of the dark flared the powerful form and truculent face of—Black Bogus.

After a somewhat close study of the tracked floor, he went around on the other side of the lamp to the ruined hearth, lifted up a loosened slab of stone and felt under it.

Apparently what he expected to find was not there, for he swore, put the slab back, rose and slouched across the floor toward the rubbish heap. The man hiding behind it crouched still as one of the cabin logs and fingered the pistol butt at his hip. But the ruffian only rummaged out an old box, carried it back to the light and sat down.

Drawing a short pipe from his pocket, he filled it from a grimy tobacco sack, lighted it with another of the sputtering matches, and, with the air of a man quite at his ease, began to smoke.

As he smoked, the bitter lines of his face relaxed a trifle, and its half-haunting resemblance to a face that dwelt—and would ever dwell—in his memory again stole across the mind of the watcher.

But Black Bogus had not smoked long until it became apparent that he was anything but a man at his ease. Every sound outside received his strained attention, and when not listening, he smoked viciously.

At last he shuffled himself erect, felt of his elbow where it had rested heavily upon the larger box, knocked the ashes from his pipe, dropped an arm across his knee, bent forward and seemed lost in thought.

Shifting his pose after a time, he straightened, put away his pipe, reached into the inside pocket of his faded coat and drew out a thick bunch of greenbacks—a handful of bills that appeared to be an assortment of tens and twenties.

The woodsman guardedly shifted his position so as to get a better look. As he did so, his knee accidentally jostled the rubbish heap.

With an oath Black Bogus chucked the money back into his pocket and leaped at one bound into a corner out of range with the window, a heavy revolver balanced in his hand, his eyes sweeping every nook and cranny from which the alarming sound might have come.

Out of the Dark Flared the Powerful Form and Truculent Face of Black Bogus.

At that tense instant a bat, darting about under the rafters, blinded by the light, dashed itself against the cabin gable and fell almost at the desperado's feet.

"Damn the thing!" he growled, placing his foot upon the half-stunned creature and grinding it to death, at the same time thrusting the heavy revolver into his pocket and turning back to the light.

He slouched down on the smaller box; took the money out of his pocket again and began a close inspection of each bill, one by one. Ten of the bills—the ones that appeared to the man watching him to be the newest—he laid out upon the box. The others he put back in his pocket.

Then an astonishing thing happened to the ten new bills. He took from his greasy, wrinkled trousers a plug of tobacco and snipped off a chew with his powerful teeth; drew from the side pocket of his coat half a handful of what looked to be ordinary black soil of rotted leaf mold; moistened it very slightly with tobacco juice; rubbed a little of it on each bill and scoured them between his hands, rumpling and crumpling them in every conceivable way. He rolled the corners between his fingers and thumbs; bent the corners down; twisted and scoured the bills as if he would wear them out.

It soon appeared that to wear them was the very thing he was attempting to do, for as he worked them and broke them in his powerful hands, they lost their newness and took on the look of bills that had been long in circulation. He was making old money out of new. Light began to dawn on the man watching him.

An hour or more he spent at the task. When at last it appeared to be finished to his satisfaction, he examined them all close to the light, bill by bill.

They appeared to pass the very painstaking and critical inspection, for, with a satisfied grunt, he picked up his pipe, relighted it and smoked nervously.

Another hour or more he smoked and fidgeted; finally turned the lamp low, strode to the door, opened it a narrow slit and peeped out.

But apparently enough of the night had not gone for whatever purpose he had in mind, for with a muttered grunt, he closed the door; strode impatiently back and forth across the floor a time or two; slouched down upon the box and, without turning up the light, again hunted his pipe.

It must have been well toward midnight, and the cramped position of the man behind the rubbish heap had grown almost unbearable, when, after many peeps through the narrow slit at the door, Black Bogus blew out the light and very softly slipped out of the cabin.

The woodsman rose, listened to the low swish of Black Bogus' receding steps among the weeds until there came the creak of the rails as he climbed the fence into the Eagle Hollow road. Opening the door with the utmost caution, Jack slipped out and stood listening—the steps had turned down the road toward the village. He closed the door and followed.

He had not shadowed the renegade far until it became plainly evident that he was a very indifferent woodsman. Sticks snapped under his feet, bushes slapped back into place as he brushed against them, and once or twice his boot struck the ground with a clumsy thud. Clear down to the mouth of the hollow Jack stalked him. He took the path that led along the east bank of the stream, and, when he came to the fork, followed the branch that led to the little park.

The woodsman stole after him, taking the path himself this time and grinning dryly at the compliment he had paid the fellow the night before in thinking he might notice the croaking of the frogs. It was a refinement of woodcraft of which Black Bogus had probably never dreamed.

Down into the little park and to the seat at Whispering spring the hulking shadow crept; again, as on the night before, the man crouched down among the gnarled maple roots by the rustic seat.

The windows of the red-roofed cottage were dark. The place lay serene and peaceful, with no spark of light alive to show that it was awake to the sinister web of evil slowly weaving about it.

After an interval spent in listening, the crouched figure among the gnarled maple roots lifted his hands to his mouth and again the lonesome wail of the screech owl shivered out upon the night. The woodsman seized the favorable moment to steal closer and to conceal himself in a clump of shrubbery much nearer than he had ventured the night before.

Black Bogus had given his rather clever imitation of the screech owl three times, and was on the point of giving it again, when the parlor door opened and the tall figure of the preacher, without his glasses and with the stoop gone from his shoulders, came out on the porch. With a step that carried no suggestion of mincing nervousness he came down across the yard. The white butt of the six-gun at his side looked as if it belonged there.

He went straight to the spring; took down the dipper, making a very obvious amount of clatter in doing so; dipped himself a drink; hung up the dipper; turned back toward the house; stopped by the rustic seat, and held out his hand.

Black Bogus reached in the breast of his coat, drew out a package, the bunch of bills, without a doubt—and laid it in the waiting hand. The preacher put it inside his shirt bosom; turned away; hesitated; came back a step.

"Bogus, be ready any night now"—the hurried tones barely carried to the man hidden in the shrubbery—"there's a barrel o' money in there. I wouldn't 'a' believed any man would risk so much about 'im, and that old, out-o'-date safe—a horse jockey could open it. It's all right slippin' the goats"—he patted his breast—"in among the sheep like we're doin'; and it's lucky we printed a-plenty down the river off o' them new plates; and that was a great idea of mine—mussin' 'em up in leaf mold dampened with tobacco spit so's they'd look like old bills. The devil 'imself couldn't tell 'em.

"It works, and we'd carry it through, only for one thing—Warhope! He's suspicious. I saw it that first evening at the supper table. That's why I went on that fool seinin' spree—t' throw 'im off; and that's why I couldn't leave no notes under the slab at the old cabin as we'd planned. Where he got his clue I don't know, but he's got it. I had the devil's own time blindin' them hawk eyes of his this afternoon.

"Warhope!—and t' think Loge had 'im right at the point of a six-gun and let 'im beat 'im on the draw."

"An' me—had 'im at the point of a knife there in the schoolhouse," the man among the maple roots broke in—"why didn't y'u let me alone?"

The other whirled on him, and his voice thickened.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Couldn't Fool Him.

Vesuvius always has a plume of smoke waving over it. This caught the eye of one visitor to Naples to the exclusion of all else.

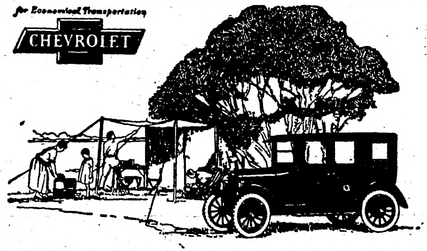
Proceeding then to make the acquaintance of some city officials, he asked the name of the mountain. They told him it was Vesuvius.

"Well," he stated, "I'm a revenue officer at home, and I'll just give your police a little tip. I have been watching that hill for a week now. I've had experience in such matters. They can't fool me. Somebody is running a still.—Pittsburgh Chronicle Telegraph.

A man is not always known by the company he associates with—as the company sometimes discovers to its cost.

Love in a cottage may depend somewhat on the location of the cottage.



Will Your Family Be Happy This Spring?

If yours is one of the few remaining families lacking an automobile, no doubt you have finally decided to get one within the next four months.

A low-priced modern automobile like the Chevrolet has become indispensable to the family of ordinary income. A million other families can easily prove to you that the better way is with Chevrolet. The beauties of nature, the interesting and educational features of other places and ways of living, remain things to read about or seen dimly in cold photographs until you are free to get to them at your convenience and pleasure.

But, suppose you have definitely decided to buy a Chevrolet this spring. This does not necessarily mean you are going to get it. Anyone posted on conditions in the automobile business will tell you that thousands of families are going to be unable to get cars this spring. This has been true almost every spring for the last ten years. There are just two ways of making sure of getting your Chevrolet for use when the flowers and balmy breezes of spring lure you to the country roads—buy it now or order it now.

If you do not want to pay for it in full at this time, any Chevrolet dealer will arrange terms to suit your convenience. You will be surprised to learn how easy it is to pay for a Chevrolet and use it while you are paying for it.

Please realize these statements are made by us in good faith and we mean just what we say about the possible difficulties of getting a car delivered to you this spring if you wait until then to order it. The only way to be sure of a Chevrolet this Spring is to order it NOW.

Learn Eyelid Talking

Detectives in Canada are being taught a code by means of which they can communicate with one another by dropping, raising or other movements of the eyes, and also how to "talk" secretly by means of finger touches, by twisting of a cigar, fingering of a mustache and twiddling fingers behind the back. This is being done so that they can transfer their thoughts when in the presence of criminals or prisoners. It is declared that communication with the eyelids can be as rapid as the ordinary man typewrites.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

That Head Hum

Sounds which are too rapid or too faint for the human ear to distinguish are plainly audible by means of a new type of electric microphone. By use of it even the finer vibrations of the human body, as in the brains and heart, can be studied. With it you can hear the "wheels in your head" go round.

The Revivalist's Conclusion

A revivalist preacher, at all times forceful in his language, his religion being of the "shirtsleeve" order, had taken for his text "Vanity." To point his moral, he said:

"Now, if there is a woman in the congregation who didn't look in the mirror before coming to the meeting this morning, I want to see her; I want her to stand up."

A single woman rose and stood with meekly downcast eyes. To describe her in a kindly way one would say she was homely. The revivalist rested his earnest eyes upon her.

"Well, heaven bless you, sister," he said. "It certainly is a pity you didn't."—Boston Globe.

INVESTIGATION REVEALS GRAFT

Allegations Pile Over Each Other In Senate Probe Of Daugherty

New and surprising allegations of deals and frameups, of unprosecuted violations of the law and of money payments for protection, were tumbled across the committee table Saturday in the senate's whirlwind investigation of Attorney General Daugherty at the department of justice.

Gun running, bootlegging, and unlawful circulation of prize fight films were the subjects around which the testimony centered throughout a four-hour committee session scarcely less colorful than those who have preceded it.

From his office at the other end of Washington Mr. Daugherty again struck back at his accusers. He reserved until a later time, however, the detailed statement he is preparing in refutation of insinuations made against him on the witness stand and contented himself with a brief announcement that in due time he would "advise the public of the influences behind these malicious and scandalous attacks and the character of the tools that are being used in this cowardly manner by my adversaries."

How the Dempsey-Carpentier prize fight films were exhibited with profits of $125,000 and in 22 to 25 states with an "understanding" against department of justice interference despite the law was related on the witness stand by Fred C. Quimby, New York producer of the films. In many particulars his story followed the previous testimony of Gaston B. Means and Miss Roxie Stinson, divorced wife of Jess Smith, dead friend of Mr. Daugherty. Both of these witnesses had testified that Smith was interested financially in the film deal.

Other witnesses made charges of derelictions in prosecuting Mexican gun running, bootleggers, and Texas oil stock promoters. Friends of former Secretary Fall and prominent Texas Republicans were named in this connection, and Federal District Attorneys Henry Zweifer and John D. Hartman were charged with delay and failures of prosecution. One witness said he "believed" Zweifel was involved in a "blackmail" scheme against all oil stock promoters.

While the committee was in session, Chairman Adams of the Republican national committee issued a statement that "nothing discreditable" to Mr. Daugherty had yet been developed, but Republican leaders in the senate were known to be studying the developments carefully with a view to possible renewal of pressure upon the administration for action.

TWO BANKS ARE TO REOPEN

Agricultural Credit Corporation Is Starting to Function.

Minneapolis.—Reopening this week of two banks in North Dakota through first direct assistance from the new $10,000,000 Agricultural Credit corporation, financed by private capital, was forecast by officers of the organization.

The corporation also expected to begin to function in aiding farmers to pay delinquent taxes through the tax department of the corporation.

Cases of at least two banks are ready to be submitted to the executive committee of the corporation for approval before actual loans are made. All of the necessary legal steps have been taken, including signature of depositors, following application for assistance and examination by the corporation's field representatives.

The reorganizations held necessary are ready to be perfected and the banking department and depositors loan fund commission have approved the plans in North Dakota.

Likewise the tax delinquency functions of the corporation are expected to begin in North Dakota.

'PITTSBURG PLUS' ATTACKED

Briefs in Case to Be Filed With Federal Trade Commission.

Chicago.—The fight of the middle west and Pacific coast states against the "Pittsburgh plus" basis of steel pricing will be continued before the federal trade commission next month, Attorney General Hilton of Minnesota has announced.

Following discussion of the issue with interested members of the executive committee of the national conference of attorneys general, which met here, Mr. Hilton stated the briefs of the states leading in the fight would be filed with the commission in Washington April 15. Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin and Minnesota are the principal states financing the campaign against the practice of fixing all steel prices on the basis of Pittsburgh cost plus freight to the point of delivery.

ASK MOTORISTS TO PAY FOR HIGHWAYS

(By ROY D. CHAPIN, Chairman Highways Committee, National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.)

Highway engineers of the United States have carried their task forward to a point where the public can now obtain a visual demonstration of results in every state in the Union. At the end of 1918 there were 12.5 miles of completed federal aid projects in the country. Since then projects amounting to 29,772 miles have been completed, 15,318 miles are under construction, and an additional 6,000 miles have been approved for construction.

Virtually all of this work has been done on those main highways which constitute the selected federal aid system of 7 per cent of the highways of the country, and yet the funds so expended from both federal and state sources are less than one-half of annual expenditures made for rural highway purposes.

The other funds have been expended, first, under state jurisdiction on the secondary roads, and, second, under county and local supervision, on the county and purely local roads.

The net result is that as we swing into 1924 there are approximately 430,000 miles of highways in the United States on which there has been some degree of improvement from those of sand-clay up to the heaviest and most durable roads known to modern engineering. The total mileage of all types of roads in the country is 2,941,294.

This achievement, which gives us a mileage of improved roads almost four times as great as all of the roads in the United Kingdom, has been attained just in time to take care of the swelling army of motor car drivers and it will be only by a continuation of the present program for the next ten years that we can finally arrive at a completed system approximating the needs of highway traffic.

The principal problem to the student of highway transport is that of how an undertaking of this size is to be financed, requiring as it does, and will for a decade, an annual appropriation of at least $1,000,000,000 from national, state and local sources.

The answer has been obtained, in part, through conferences between officials of the American Association of State Highway Officials, the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, the Investment Bankers of America and the bureau of public roads.

The chief points were that all who benefit from highway construction should join in paying for them, that maintenance of the interstate and state systems is justifiably chargeable against the motor user, that highway expenditures should be based upon budgets and should not be out of line with other public needs, and finally that depending upon the comparative stage of the highway program, long term bond issues should be voted to provide for immediate construction of the principal systems which must inevitably cost the public less to build and maintain than to go without.

Miles of Paved Streets in American Cities Big

If the paved streets of 290 leading American cities—which in the first national census of city paving ever made in this country have reported officially their paving yardages last year to the Asphalt association in New York—were merged in a single great highway eighteen feet wide that highway would more than twice encircle the globe. The survey, the results of which have just been announced, shows that, with an average of eighteen feet of width, there are 56,974.8 miles of paved streets in American cities of 10,000 or more population. This mileage by far exceeds that of almost every other country in the world.

Benefits of Dragging

What a difference it makes in frozen roads if they are dragged before the cold wave comes! It is evident in some of our own highways here in the county says the Rochester (Ind.) Sentinel. Some that were dragged during the recent rains are now regular boulevards. Others that were not are full of ruts and while passable, practically tear a car to pieces. The money spent in dragging those roads has paid the taxpayers many times over on wear and tear on their vehicles.

It would be hard for me to describe how I was, for I was a perfect wreck. I suffered with a pain in my left side, then I would have numb spells and I would think I couldn't live. I would have hot flashes, then would come weak spells. I was so weak I would think I couldn't ever get a meal ready. My work was a burden to me. I was not able to do my housework half of the time. A friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it has given me strength and health. The hot flashes left me and I got better of the numb spells. EDISON-FORD PLAN UNFAIR TO FARMER

Third Article Shows How Credit Test Would Fail Him in His Need.

The unfairness to the farmer of the Edison-Ford "commodity money" scheme, although ostensibly aimed to improve his economic position, is discussed in the present article, which is the third in a series prepared by the American Bankers Association, reviewing the exposure of the weaknesses of the plan as presented by William T. Foster, Director of the Pollack Foundation for Economic Research.

Briefly, the plan, sponsored by Thomas Edison and Henry Ford, would provide for Government warehousing of basic commodities, against which currency would be loaned, during storage, to the producer without interest, up to half the average value of the products for the previous twenty-five years. On the other half of the value the producer would receive certificates which he could sell or use for bank loans.

Restricted Credit

In that provision allowing for Government loans only up to half the average value for twenty-five years Mr. Foster finds particular weakness in the scheme. He points out that prices have risen so high since 1896 that the farmer could borrow on most products much less than half the present value of the products—much less, in fact, than he could borrow directly from the banks. Loans on the other half the value, which would be on virtually a second mortgage basis, he says, would not be desirable for the banks.

"The plan is not fair even to farmers; it involves unjust discrimination," Mr. Foster says. "The Edison plan fixes the loan values of all products absolutely, uniformly and arbitrarily. It ignores the relative prospects of different commodity markets. Only by the merest chance would such a method give a fair loan valuation. Fifty per cent of the average price for the previous twenty-five years would be too high for some commodities and too low for most of them. With such details the Edison plan is not concerned.

Banks Fairer to Farmers

"The general practice of the banks is not only fairer to farmers, but it is sounder business. There is no justification for basing the loan value of anything upon average prices in past years. Sound banking practice looks to the future. A bank—for the protection of its depositors, if for no other reason—must consider above everything the prospects of getting its money back. And a farmer's prospects of repaying a loan from the sale of his product depend entirely on future prices, not at all on past prices. Last year's runs do not count in this year's game."

As to the claim that the Edison plan would curb speculation in farm products, Mr. Foster says:

"There is nothing in the Edison plan that would tend to abolish speculation. Even after the farmer had stored his products and obtained a loan from the Government, he would still be free to sell his products outright to speculators. The farmer would have all the inducements to sell that he has today, and speculators would have all the inducements to buy.

"Clearly, then, the Edison plan would not provide a money that is sounder than gold money; it would not provide a money less subject to fluctuation in value; it would not enable farmers to obtain larger loans than they can now obtain; it would not divorce agriculture from the banking system; and it would not eliminate speculation in farm products."

PAPER MONEY PIPE DREAMS

By JOHN OAKWOOD

Hitting the pipe seems like the greatest way in the world to get something for nothing,—a whole paradise full of joy for a few whiffs of opium smoke. But—

* * *

By the way, the big lure about fiat money is that it seems to promise about as much for nothing as a whiff on the pipe. They are just coming out of such a dream now in Germany.

* * *

Here is the way that German soft money dream goes. Say in 1913 a man put a ten year mortgage for 20,000 marks on his farm. Marks were then worth, in gold, about four to the dollar. The debt, therefore, was equivalent to about $5,000.

* * *

In the ten years since that debt was contracted, the German Government has published, so to speak, trillions of paper marks. What happened? What would happen to the price of eggs if they had a hen at Washington laying a billion eggs a day,—even if they put a government stamp on them saying eggs were worth a quarter a piece? German marks have gone down from four to the dollar to 120,000 to the dollar.

* * *

Here is where the pipe dream gets

KEEP AMERICA'S WAMPUM SOUND!

By SAMUEL H. BEACH,

President, Savings Bank Division, American Bankers Association.

Although the United States is today upon a solid gold basis, we nevertheless know of our own knowledge what inflation means. It would take long to recall in detail the bitter experiences which this nation suffered during the Civil War and the years which followed it, and, in our present easy condition we might think such conditions could never again arise. But with such men as Henry Ford and Thomas A. Edison talking about commodity money there is no foretelling what may happen.

S. H. Beach

One of the plainest lessons taught by financial history is that whenever a nation issues paper money with nothing back of it, that nation is on the road to disaster. Look at Russia with its worthless rubles and Germany with its worthless marks. Think of what happened in France during the years immediately following our Revolutionary War.

The common people of France rose in their might, tore down the Bastile, and made reprisal for centuries of kingly crime and oppression. The profligate court had piled up taxes until they were unbearable. The enraged populace killed King Louis XVI, and also his queen, Marie Antoinette. But they only threw themselves out of the frying pan into the fire so far as finances were concerned.

Unsound Money Tyranny

At the very worst point of their currency inflation they found themselves under the absolute domination of Robespierre. In order to meet the growing scarcity of coin, paper money called assignats were issued. First 400,000,000 francs worth, then 800,000,000 were added with the distinct understanding that the 1,200,000,000 would be the full extent of the issue. This pledge was soon broken and further issues brought the total up to 3,700,000,000 francs.

Frightful depreciation was the inevitable result; and legislation was passed making it a crime, with six years' imprisonment as the penalty, if any one should refuse to take the paper assignats at their face value. Just think of it! A French peasant after working the entire year to produce a crop was compelled by law to accept payment for that crop in paper money, which he knew to be worthless, or go to prison.

It was simply legalized robbery. When the penalty was increased to twenty years imprisonment the inevitable climax came. The Reign of Terror was at its height. Robespierre was in supreme power. He suggested that more assignats be issued and if the people did not take them the guillotine should be the penalty.

Robespierre's End

This unheard of outrage was more than the people could stand. An unknown man arose on the floor of the convention and denounced Robespierre, reciting the heinous crimes he had committed, and so worked upon the feelings of the audience that Robespierre, the tyrant, became Robespierre, the convicted criminal. Two days later he was led to the guillotine. France had learned her financial lesson well—that money must have value back of it.

The fallacy of unsound money is sure to confront us again. Never is there enough of everything for all the people. The struggle for existence is a real struggle, and those who find themselves in the lower strata of human society are ready at any time to grasp at fiat money or any of the other things which misguided politicians hold out to them.

My whole purpose is to drive home the fact that danger lies ahead and to urge every one to let no opportunity go by to use voice and influence toward keeping the wampum of these United States, as it is today, the soundest currency in the world.

SOME BANK SALARIES

Investigations made by the Missouri Bankers Association have revealed that 368 banks in the state in towns of under 2,000 population are paying their cashiers and chief executives an average of only $110 a month. Only 273 of the 1,162 reporting banks in towns under 5,000 population pay the president a salary. The report says:

"It indicates that, even allowing for the economy of living in small communities, the cashiers and managing officers of those 1,162 banks, who receive an average of $140 per month, either must have personal means to begin with, or must maintain the standards necessary to their positions as the leaders of their communities and the builders of the commonwealth by means of 'side lines,' such as selling insurance, collecting commissions on farm loans, and trading in real estate."

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale

Default having been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage containing a Power of Sale, by reason of which default said Power of Sale has become operative, and the Assignees of the Mortgagee hereinafter named are authorized to declare the whole sum due, and they hereby do declare said sum due, which mortgage was executed by Albin Dahl and Alice Dahl, his wife, and Selmer Dahl, single, Mortgagors to Deposit Trust & Savings Bank, Winona, Minnesota, a corporation under the laws of the State of Minnesota, Mortgagee, dated August 9th, 1920 and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County, Minnesota on the 4th day of September, A. "INTERNATIONAL BANKER" A MYTH

Otto H. Kahn Refutes Idea That Foreign Finance Activities Dull Allegiance to America.

BANKING REFLECTS BUSINESS

"International Farmer" and Other Business Men Who Sell to Foreign Markets Create Demand for International Financial Service.

The idea that bankers engaged in financing foreign trade and in handling foreign bond flotations are a particular cult of "international bankers" actuated by motives differing from those of other bankers was refuted recently by Otto H. Kahn of New York, in an address before the Rochester Chamber of Commerce.

"There is no such thing as an 'International Banker' in America, as the meaning of the term is generally understood," Mr. Kahn said. "He exists in the imagination of people all too numerous, but he does not exist in the flesh. You might just as well speak of the 'International Farmer' because the farmer sells a certain percentage of his crops to Europe, or of the 'International Manufacturer.'

"The banker maintains, and can maintain, international contact, and conduct international business, only to the extent that American industry, commerce and agriculture are international. True, the banker must take within his purview continuously the conditions of affairs and the current of things throughout the world, but so must the exporter and importer, and so must the farmer take into account the prices and tendencies of the world market in Liverpool.

Banking Mostly Home Business

"The American banker's market is the home market. His success is conditioned upon the capacity and willingness of the American investor to absorb the securities which he offers. His very existence depends upon the confidence and co-operation of the public and of his fellow-bankers—and any banker whose activities would justly create the impression that he was actuated by cosmopolitan rather than by American interests would very soon lose that confidence and following.

"The business which he does for his own account in, with, or for Europe, is inconsiderable as compared to the business he does in America. His principal functions in relation to Europe are to provide the requisite banking facilities for export and import and for travelers. That part of his functions which consists in financing loans of foreign governments or industries has hitherto been, with sporadic exceptions, of relatively inconsiderable proportions as compared to the vastness of the volume of his transactions in financing American industry, commerce and enterprise.

Necessity for Foreign Credits

"In saying this, I do not mean to imply that there is anything that calls for apology in the floating of foreign loans in America and in the loaning of American funds to Europe, provided such loans are considered sound as to security and are made for legitimate, constructive purposes. Indeed, such loans ought to, and I believe will, be made in increasing measure, when conditions in Europe will have become such as to warrant it.

"It is manifest that the promotion of our export trade, including, of course, the export of farm products, requires us, under the circumstances as they now are and are likely to remain for some time, to aid the purchasing power of other nations by extending to them financial facilities to a reasonable extent.

"It is the function of the banker to be instrumental in carrying out such transactions. In doing so, he is the means of serving a useful national purpose, just as he served a useful, indeed a highly important national purpose, in being the means of attracting and bringing European capital to America in former years when conditions were reversed and such capital was nothing less than vital to the development of this country and the realization of its opportunities."

FOR SOUND MONEY

Senator Oddie of Nevada, chairman of the United States Senate commission to investigate the problems of gold and silver mining, has allayed the fear that Western Senators, in their zeal to aid the cause of silver, might launch an unsound money wave. "I am for sound money," Senator Oddie says. "There is no thought of bimetalism or departing from the gold standard. We desire to help the great mining industry, but not through the creation of an unsound currency."

The commission is to study and report on the causes of the continuing decrease in the production of gold and silver; the causes of the depressed condition of the gold and silver mining industry in the United States; the production, reduction, refining, transportation, marketing, sale, and uses of gold and silver in the United States and elsewhere; and the effect of the decreased production of gold and silver upon commerce, industry, exchange and prices.

THE FARMER'S NEW POSITION

By WALTER W. HEAD,

First Vice-President American Bankers Association

The farmer today is more than a tiller of the soil. He is a business man. Raising crops is only a part of his business, if he is a real up-to-date Twentieth Century farmer. Problems of marketing, distribution and financing are equally important.

Walter W. Head

The complexity of our modern economic organization makes it necessary for the farmer to understand and assist in solving these problems if he is to succeed. In this new role—as a business man—the farmer steadily has advanced to a better position.

There was a time when the farmer was dependent wholly upon private marketing agencies, whose interest was not always identical with his own, whose greed for profits sometimes outmatched consideration of the farmer's need. Today there are many great co-operative marketing organizations that handle a large part of the farmer's crop and win for him more liberal treatment from the private agencies which still handle the bulk of his production.

Today the farmer also has his own co-operative agencies of credit. If not satisfied with the terms upon which his local capitalist is willing to advance money upon a land mortgage, the farmer can go directly to the Federal Land Bank, which, by reason of tax-exemption and other advantages incidental to its governmental character, can loan money at a rock-bottom rate of interest.

In addition, the federal government has established another group of banks which permit the local bankers—by rediscount privileges—to extend the farmer credit for his current operations on a more favorable basis than ever before. If he thinks his local bank is not sufficiently responsive to his need, this same legislation enables him to join with other farmers in a co-operative marketing association and arrange for credit direct from the government banks.

New Credit Facilities

For years it has been the farmer's complaint—with considerable justification—that he, alone of all producers, has been forced to market his crop on the buyer's terms because of his inability to use his products, in storage, as a basis for credit. Today the agricultural credits act authorizes the acceptance of warehouse receipts, on non-perishable agricultural products, as collateral for loans, the same as is the case of sugar or other commodities of commerce.

These developments have relieved the farmer from what seemed to be persecution by short-sighted, tight-fisted, grasping grain dealers, landlords and bankers—for there were some bankers who were guilty of this very thing, who thought of the farmer principally as a weak and ignorant opponent in a game whose only stake was the collection of a high rate of interest. The farmer's suspicion of the banker arose because of misunderstanding, because he judged bankers as a class by the derelictions of a few. Today, with these sources of government-controlled credit available at his call, the farmer cannot charge or even suspect that the bankers are conspiring to do him harm.

As the real farmer has taken advantage of these opportunities, he has made himself a business man. Like other successful business men, he is equipped with credit to finance his operations, he is able to make use of labor-saving machinery, he is able to barter with buyers of his products as their equal.

COMPULSORY THRIFT

In Kansas a group of power and telephone companies is trying a compulsory thrift plan, which affects about 1,200 employees and applies to every member of the organization from the president to the humblest day laborer. The plan requires that each shall save and invest monthly at least 10 per cent of his income.

Every month each employee must make a report to the general office of how much he has saved, and in what he has invested it. The investment must be approved by a committee competent to advise. Government securities, savings bank accounts, building and loan stock, payment on a home, even payments on furniture are allowed. If debts have been incurred, these must be listed and payments may be arranged on them, but no more are to be assumed. The idea is to make the employee live within his means and also lay aside something in a definite form.

Reports for the first nine months show that about 13 per cent of the wages have been saved, no single employee falling below 10 per cent. This amounts to over $100,000. Failure to report or to save brings dismissal, but in only two instances among the 1,200 employees was such action needed. Budget books are distributed and their use explained as a helpful method in establishing a working scale of living that will allow for thrift.

Breadfruit.

The breadfruit, with the cocoanut and banana, furnishes the chief food of the natives of the Pacific islands. That is why we call it "breadfruit," because, for them, it takes the place of bread. Apart from its fruit, the tree itself is a very useful one, for, when beaten out, the inner bark forms a fine white cloth called tapa cloth.

Van Fleet, a member of the commission, was called into conference by the president for advice as to the respective needs of the farmer and business representation on the commission.

Washington—Gratitude for the rescue of the captain and 46 members of the crew of the Japanese steamer Kyosel Maru after it had been drifting 18 days with damaged hull in the Pacific is expressed by the Japanese foreign office in a letter to the state department for conveyance to officers and crew of the shipping board steamer, President McKinley.

Washington—Provisions of the White Radio bill, which would give the secretary of commerce sweeping powers over transmitting stations, was opposed before the house merchant marine commttee by Major J. A. Mauborage, of the army signal corps. He read extracts of a statement by Secretary J. W. Weeks declaring the war department must be given wide latitude in use of its radio facilities both in peace and war.

Domestic

New York—Charles Peter, Salt Lake City, president of the International Mascot Mining company, Pocatello, Idaho, was held under $25,000 bonds here on a charge of grand larceny in connection with alleged stock swindles.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Warren T. McCray, governor of Indiana, pleaded not guilty when arraigned in federal court on two indictments returned by the grand jury charging violation of the national banking law and using the mails in furtherance of a scheme to defraud. He will be tried April 21 on the latter charge.

New York—A North Atlantic blizzard accompanied by a 75-mile an hour gale and alternating squalls of torrential rain and flurries of moist snow, swept over the Eastern seaboard, paralyzing shipping, seriously interfering with telegraph communication and causing great property damage.

San Diego, Calif.—In accordance with his previously expressed determination to overlook nothing which might prevent the complete success of the army's world cruise, Major Frederick Martin, commander of the squadron of four planes scheduled to undertake the greatest flight in the history of aeronautics, announced that he had postponed the start on the first lap of the flight.

Castle Gate, Utah—One hundred thirteen bodies have been taken from Mine No. 2 of the Utah Fuel company where 173 men were entombed by a series of explosions last Saturday. Sixty still remain within the mine chambers. Helmet crews have penetrated the last of the lower workings and have gone into the rises. Fresh air men are exploring in entry eight right where a number of bodies have been uncovered.

Chicago—A dog's frantic attempt to effect the rescue of its mistress ended in failure when Mrs. Mary Ramm died in a hospital here. The dog ran a quarter of a mile to the woman's husband and barked furiously for several minutes to attract his attention, when Mrs. Ramm fell in a faint across a hot stove in a railroad construction camp near Dixon, Ill. The animal's barking and wild dashes toward the house were not heeded by the man for some time.

New York—Disappointed by his failure to find health in California and embittered by lack of the literary and artistic success he sought in this country, Robert Wilson Stevenson, a second cousin of Robert Louis Stevenson, lies ill and penniless in the Ellis Island hospital, awaiting deportation on the liner Assyria. The warrant of deportation for which, it was stated, he had applied himself, said he was being sent to his native Scotland because he was likely to become a public charge.

New York—Prince Jean Paleologue, Rumanian descendant of the last eastern Roman emperor, renounced his title to become an American citizen.

Dayton, Ohio—Backed by Dayton and New Central capital, an organization to carry passengers over the model airways between Dayton and Washington is in process of formation, it was reported here.

Los Angeles—Mrs. Minnie Chaplin, wife of the movie comedian, Sydney Chaplin, and sister-in-law of Charlie Chaplin, has filed suit for $100,000 against Dr. Robert Griffith, a rhinologist, charging he ruined her nose.

New York—Prohibition agents captured a $50,000 redistilling apparatus capable of an estimated daily output of 20,000 gallons.

Sports

Minneapolis—Willie Hoppe, world's billiards champion, won both blocks of his exhibition series with Jake Schaefer, his closest rival, at the Dryer recreation rooms. The champion won the afternoon block, 400 to 129, and the evening match, 400 to 294.

Sarasota, Fla—The Giants will have to beat the Cincinnati Reds to win their fourth straight pennant this season, in the opinion of John J. McGraw. The Giants' leader expects both New York clubs to repeat for the fourth time handrunning, but he predicts that the National league race will be an open contest with several clubs fighting it out for premier honors.

St. Paul—Eddie Kane, manager of Tommy Gibbons, is indignant over the attitude taken by Jack Dempsey and his manager, Jack Kearns, in regard to a return championship match with the St. Paul boxer. He accuses the champion of running out of a match with Gibbons for fear that he might lose the championship in a decision bout. Dempsey has promised Gibbons a return encounter on a number of occasions, Kane stated, but when it came to putting his promise in writing Dempsey became shy, dodging offers made by Tex Rickard to come to terms.

New Orleans—Miller Huggins, diminutive pilot of the New York Yankees, in training here, is frankly worried over the effect of Babe Ruth's recent illness on the playing of the Big Bambino. In the club's workouts at the camp here the Babe's hitting was noticeably weak. He fouled off so many that Huggins gave indications that he believed the king of swat had not fully recovered from the attack of influenza which sent him to bed at Hot Springs. Ark.

St. Paul—Tommy Gibbons and Georges Carpentier of France will meet in a 10-round fight to be held near Chicago July 4, according to a cable from Paris. From Chicago comes the report that Floyd Fitzsimmons will promote the battle. Fitzsimmons in the past staged boxing shows at Benton Harbor and Michigan City, Mich. He is the man who promoted the fight between Champion Jack Dempsey and the late Billy Miske at Benton Harbor on Labor day, 1920. He also handled the lightweight championship fight between Benny Leonard and Charley White at Benton Harbor July 4, 1920.

Foreign

Teheran, Persia—Republican propaganda started by the Persian press has resulted in antiroyalist demonstrations. Opposition which has arisen is considered a death blow to the present regime. The present premier may be the first president.

Berlin—Hugo Stinnes, the German industrial magnate, must undergo an operation or long cure for gallstones. His doctors declared that he had been suffering from stomach grip, with complications. His condition is considered serious.

Budapest — Rilda Bethmann-Hollweg, niece of the former German Chancellor, has disappeared from the home of friends where she was staying here and the police are searching for her. She is 25 years old and an actress.

Moscow—In order that the person closest in life to Nicolai Lenine may advise the late bolshevik premier's followers in the ways he wished followed after his death, Kaupskay, Lenine's widow has been made a member of several important soviet government bureaus. Chiefly, she will work along educational lines.

Mexico City—General Plutarco Elias Calles continues to be a candidate for the presidency, announces the Calles party. He has a majority in congress and in the Obregon cabinet. He is the only prominent candidate, as the De La Huerta party refuses to present a candidate. The agrarians, revolutionists and workingmen's unions are behind him.

Rome—What is said will be the most imposing consistory ever held in the history of the Catholic church will be that for Cardinals Hayes and Mundelein on March 27. Pope Pius decided to hold the impressive public consistory in the basilica of St. Peters. It will be exclusively an American function, insofar as new cardinals are concerned, for no other names of prelates have been mentioned as the recipients of the red hat.

Tegucigalpa, Honduras—General Rafael Lopez Gutieerez, former president of Honduras, who, since the expiration of his term on February 1, has been dictator in Honduras, is dead. The cabinet of General Gutieerez, presided over by Dr. Francisco Buesco, the foreign minister, has assumed all powers of state. The revolutionists have rejected the overtures made by the Central American republics for an armistice, and have issued an ultimatum to the government, giving it 24 hours in which to surrender the capital. If Tegucigalpa is not given up, they announce that an attack will be begun upon it.

Paris—Ambassador Herrick has entered into a preliminary contract for the purchase of a residence in the Avenue d'Iena for the American embassy. The transaction will be closed and the property transferred in a few days.

Tokio—Reports from Vladivostok state that 17 volcanoes at Kamchatka are intensely active, with frequent earthquakes. A gale of extreme violence destroyed houses and communications. Scientists visiting Atami, where geyser phenomena are unsual, agree that another heavy shock in the Tokio region is due.

ARMY AIRMEN START FLIGHT

Three Planes Hop Off From Clover Field On 33,000 Mile Cruise Around World

Santa Monica, Calif.—The army flight around the world started Monday at 9:32 a. m.

Major F. L. Martin, was the first to get away.

Lieutenant Leigh Wade, photographer of the flight, was the second world flier to get away, and Lieut. Lowell H. Smith, pilot of the flight, was third to take off.

A Pioneering Expedition.

The flight starting Monday is not a race around the world but is a pioneering, exploration trip, carefully mapped out to determine a practical airway around the world and to obtain scientific data on the effect of various climates on modern aircraft. There will be no spectacular dashes, although many legs of the great journey will be replete with thrills in the variety of climate experienced, from Arctic to tropic variations.

During the four or more months of the flight, the aviators will be out of sight of land only four times.

The longest jump will be some 700 miles and stations have been established around the earth, with experienced American army fliers already there, or in more remote cases, en route. From these stations information will be relayed back to earlier points to provide the fliers with complete information on terrain and on meteorology.

Journey With the Sun.

It will be a journey with the sun, so arranged that the most desirable climatic conditions in each section may be met. The Actic region is accessible only in the spring, therefore it is best suited to go through the Aleutin islands across the Pacific in April. This will bring the fliers into the far eastern littoral in time to clear through typhoon season and through the Greenland, Iceland region before the winter season starts.

NAMED HEAD OF CONSPIRACY

Witness Tells of Fight Film Plan Suggested by Daugherty.

Washington.—The Daugherty investigating committee heard a story Monday that rivalled in lurid detail any of those that startled the country in the opening day of the inquiry.

Its salient features were based on allegations that Attorney General Daugherty himself was the head of a conspiracy to display the Dempsey-Carpentier fight films throughout the country, and that Mr. Daugherty suggested to those who first formed the plan that its backers should receive a 50 per cent "cut" of the profits.

The witness was Gerald O. Holdridge, a former department of justice agent, and the story he told was based on "information" he said had been given him by Jap Muma, New York correspondent for the Cincinnati Enquirer. Muma he said, "practically accused" Daugherty of being head of the conspiracy; told him of an exhibition of the pictures at the home here of E. B. McLean with President Harding and members of the cabinet present; and asserted that in the talk that followed Daugherty discussed the possibility of exhibiting them.

Holdridge said Muma had quoted Daugherty as saying: "If you put this across, you ought to get a big cut-in, not less than 50 per cent."

Muma said later, according to the witness, that they had succeeded in getting the pictures into 21 states, and that "the profits were very large."

TEAPOT OIL SUIT IS STARTED

Bill Asking Cancellation of Lease Is Similar to Teapot Dome Case.

Los Angeles.—Suit to cancel the lease of California naval oil lands to the Pan-American Petroleum & Transport company, as well as its accompanying agreements for construction and stocking by that company of naval oil storage facilities at Pearl, Hawaii, was filed Monday by the government here.

The bill of complaint charges that bribery entered into the making of the leases as well as alleging fraud, conspiracy and illegality as in the case of the suit filed March 13, at Cheyenne, Wyo., with reference to the Teapot Dome lease and contracts.

The Pan-American Petroleum & Transport company and its subsidiary, the Pan-American Petroleum company, were made defendants in the action, and E. L. Doheny, president of the oil company, and Albert B. Fall, former secretary of the interior, are charged in the bill with conspiracy to defraud the United States "for the private gain of said Fall, and of defendants, for whom said Doheny acted."

May 4 Election Stirs Germany.

Berlin.—The German political party leaders are beginning organization for the reichstag elections on May 4. The elections are expected to bring about marked changes in the political complexion of Germany's legislative body through an increase of the communists and the extreme nationalists, or Deutschvolkische party, and a lessening in the number of votes controlled by the moderate parties, standing between the extreme nationalists, who are antisemitic and pan-German, and the avowed communists.

Rejuvenated

Prominent retired merchant says he feels like new man since Tanlac relieved him of his troubles. Can now outwalk men 20 years younger.

R. E. Boyd, 5000 Fourteenth St., N. W., Washington, D. C., for forty-eight years prominent hardware merchant in the national capital, but now retired, lends his name to further the cause of Tanlac.

"Indigestion and stomach weakness of a very pronounced type had troubled me for several months prior to last October fifteenth," said Mr. Boyd, recently, "but since that date the Tanlac treatment has made a new man of me. Now I eat heartily, never have a sign of indigestion, sleep like a log, and get up mornings feeling like an athlete. Today I can outwalk men twenty years younger. Tanlac alone put me in my present fine physical condition, enabling me to get more real pleasure than ever before out of meeting and mingling with friends. The DAIRY

INCREASED INCOME DERIVED FROM COW

The number of dairy cows and the interest in dairying has increased greatly during the past few years. This has been due to the greater income to be derived from dairy cows during the period of depression. The question of overproduction has been brought up in view of this dairy interest.

It is not the problem of overproduction which should concern us, but rather the problem of encouraging real dairymen to take up dairying and how to keep them in business permanently after they are once established. Periods of depression have come before and many have taken up the dairy cow. The fact to be regretted is that as soon as grain or cattle or any other agricultural pursuit became profitable again, a large number divorced the cow and gave up the business. Will this occur again, and if so, how can it be prevented?

No man should undertake dairying unless he really likes cows, and no man should begin before first making the firm determination to stay with the industry. Nothing is more disturbing to agricultural economics than the lack of permanency, consistency, and stability. The farmer who is constantly changing his agricultural business is usually "out" in times of high prices for that industry and "in" during the times of low prices.

Since 1850 the ratio between our population and our dairy cattle has remained practically constant. From 1900 to 1920 our population increased 39 per cent. If this increases at the same rate in the future, our population will need more cows to maintain the ratio. During recent years our consumption of milk has increased, and it will continue to increase as the value of milk as a food is realized.—B. W. Fairbanks, Colorado Agricultural College.

Balanced Ration Is Best for Producing More Milk

Twenty good cows were recently placed in an experiment at the Illinois agricultural experiment station, and the results are very definitely in favor of a balanced ration. The 20 cows were divided into two lots, and during a preliminary period, both received a balanced ration, which consists of 30 pounds of corn silage, 8 pounds of clover hay, 4 2-3 pounds of gluten feed, 3 1-3 pounds of ground corn. The nutritive ratio of the ration is 1:6. After the first period, one of the lots was taken off of a balanced ration, and given the following instead: Thirty pounds of corn silage, 5 pounds of timothy hay, 3 pounds of clover hay, 8 pounds of ground corn; nutritive ratio of 1:11.

At the end of 131 days, lot 1, which had a balanced ration, had gained from 1.7 to 10.65 pounds of milk per day. The lot which was changed to an unbalanced ration gained from .09 to .305. In other words, even though the second lot was getting what many dairymen might call at a glance a good variety of feeds, it was failing to gain along with the balanced ration by a long ways. This illustrates very well the point we have made before: Even though you may be feeding roughage and a grain you are not getting all the milk you could from the same cows unless you know that the feeds are balanced.

Producing Quality First Is Aim of Good Dairyman

The far-sighted dairyman has no trouble in realizing that one of the biggest factors in his business is to market a first-grade product. During the past few years, attention has been more forcibly paid to dairy products as an essential human food. Through the efforts of the National Dairy council, the great army of physicians, nurses, state and federal institutions, the consumption of dairy products has been slightly increased per capita.

This increase per capita can be advanced tremendously when each and every man who milks cows realizes that he is like every one else in business namely, that when he produces quality first, volume always follows.

The best buttermaker on earth cannot make first-grade butter from second-grade cream. This summer let us all renew our efforts to market a product of which we can be proud.

Get out the milk cooler, keep the barn and surroundings clean and sweet, wash the separator after every time it is used, wash the cow's udders and brush them off a little oftener; the details count, and attention to details pays.—H. R. Lascelles, Fieldman for the Colorado State Dairy Commission.

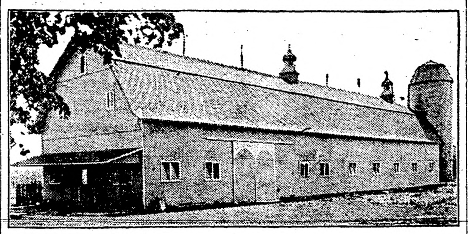
Solve Problem of Feeding

Ensilage when fed along with alfalfa hay or even native hay solves the greatest problem of feeding cows to keep them in milk flow. When a farmer has ensilage, alfalfa hay and some other good hay, the amount of grain necessary is greatly reduced.

Need Good Winter Feed

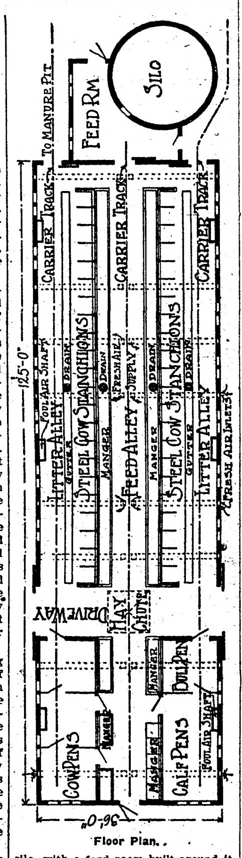
Dairy cattle need good winter feed. They do not carry as much flesh as beef cattle and therefore need more protection.

Modern Dairy Barn Reduces Labor; Increases Production



By WILLIAM A. RADFORD

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building work on the farm, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1827 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.



Floor Plan.

The barn on a modern dairy farm is a combination milk factory and warehouse for the storage of raw materials which the cows turn into milk. The manufacturing processes are performed on the ground, or stable floor. Above is the storage or warehouse, where the raw materials in the shape of feed are readily available.

Production, or rather the labor attendant upon production, is performed efficiently, at the least expenditure of labor. To accomplish this labor-saving equipment is installed. There is the litter carrier which serves the double purpose of transporting feed direct to the cows' mangers and taking the refuse out of the stable. There are the drinking bowls at each cow stall which automatically provide the cows with fresh drinking water whenever the milk-making plant needs it. There is the ventilating system that carries out the foul air which the cow has breathed and sucks in the fresh air that she needs. There are the stanchions which hold the animals securely in their stalls, but permit the greatest freedom of movement. And then there is the sanitary steel stall partition. All of this equipment is found in the modern dairy barn, and with it dairymen are performing the regular tasks of caring for a dairy herd at the expenditure of the least amount of labor, which means greater profits.

The barn shown in the accompanying illustration is the modern type of milk-manufacturing plant. This barn is efficiently planned. It is of the required size to house the cows comfortably and at the same time there is no waste space. The building is wide enough to permit two rows of stalls, a driveway and feeding alley through the center, and litter alleys along each wall. Forty-four cows are held in stanchions, 22 on each side and facing the central feed alley. Besides there are pens for the bull, the calves and for three cows.

The barn is 36 feet wide, which is an economical width, and 125 feet long. The concrete foundation also provides a concrete floor. The superstructure is of plank frame construction, with a gambrel roof. This method of construction eliminates supporting columns in the hay mow above the stable floor, the roof being self-supporting. The building is provided with lightning rods and suction roof ventilators, which suck the foul air out of the stable through the ventilating flues.

At the far end of the building is the silo, with a feed room built around it. The overhead track extends to the feed room, so that the silage may be shoveled into the carrier and taken directly to the mangers, where it is fed to the cows. How the interior of the barn is arranged, and the location of the labor-saving equipment is shown on the floor plan.

Cows to be productive must be well fed, have plenty of water and fresh air, and above all things be comfortable. Such a modern dairy barn as the one illustrated provides all of these features.

Weather Strips Will Keep Your House Warm

A warm house in winter time is practically impossible without weather stripping. The settling of the house, even on the best foundations is sufficient to cause air passages to appear with resultant drafts and waste of heat.

The metal weather strip is the only means by which a permanently airtight window can be adjusted. These strips cost very little in comparison with the saving in fuel, the comfort attained through a warm home and the economy in cleaners' bills caused through the lessening of infiltration of dust and soot.

Metal weather strips are so firmly adjusted to the window casing and frame that all shrinkage is taken up without interfering with the ease of opening or closing, a point highly appreciated by those who have had trouble with windows sticking.

Concrete House May Be Built in One Day

Utilizing principles that he developed in designing concrete ships, a well-known inventor of submarine boats has perfected a method of manufacturing houses of any size and any style of architecture and slabs specified, from precast concrete clabs of standard sizes which he declares can be put up like Aladdin's palace, virtually overnight.

The houses, their inventor writes in Popular Science Monthly, may be of any type, from a small bungalow to a skyscraper, according to the architect's plans. The exterior finish may be brick, stone, shingles, stucco or whatever else is desired. The houses are said to be rainproof moistproof, cold and heatproof, and all but indestructible and their inventor declares they can be built for one-half the cost of brick or frame construction. Small houses, he says, can be built in a day.

Many methods have been devised for constructing buildings from precast slabs, but the houses, according to their inventor, are unique in that each house built by this method will be different from every other house, even though slabs of the same standardized sizes are used in the construction of all. Distinctive decorative effects, the inventor explains, are produced by placing a "veneer" of the desired material on the surface when casting, while different good-sized rooms and walls of varying heights may be obtained by combining slabs of various sizes. All construction work is performed by machinery, the slabs being cast at a central plant, transported to the building site and there lifted into place by derricks.

Winter Time to Make Renewal and Repairs

Stucco can be applied as an exterior covering, no matter how cold the temperature; in fact, winter is the best time in which to do this work, as labor is more available and, not being rushed, will do a much better job.

The home owner contemplating changes in the interior of his house will by the same token find he can do his work with much less expense and at the same time secure the necessary skilled labor, which in a few months will be in such demand that their services will be almost impossible to secure.

Value of Rear Entry

The rear entry or vestibule serves a number of very important functions. It provides a convenient alcove for the refrigerator and makes possible the delivery of ice and groceries without tracking up the kitchen. The rear entry also serves the purpose of the storm door arrangement, keeping drafts from the kitchen.—Home Exposition Article

Big Increase in Rye Production

Caused by Development of New Varieties and Heavy Foreign Demand.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The production of rye in the United States has increased rapidly within the last few years due chiefly to a heavy foreign demand, high-priced labor, low yields of wheat, and the development of improved varieties of rye, including Rosen, Dakold, and several others. The hardiness, vigor, earliness and low production costs of winter rye have permitted it to compete successfully with spring wheat. Recent low prices of rye, however, have made the crop less profitable than formerly. If rye is to maintain its importance in the future it must be fitted into its proper place in the farming system. Suitable cultural methods and good varieties are equally essential. A continued foreign market for our surplus also is necessary. These problems are discussed in a new bulletin just issued by the United States Department of Agriculture, as Farmers' Bulletin 1358, "Growing Rye in the Western Half of the United States."

Rye Is Cash Crop.

Rye is grown largely as a cash grain in the western half of the United States, but is also used for pasture, as a green manure or nurse crop, and to smother weeds. The growing of winter rye permits a better distribution of labor, because it can be sown in grain stubble in the fall and is harvested before other grains are ripe. Winter rye can be sown on grain stubble, corn-ground, fell-plowed land, or summer fallow. Sowing on grain stubble often is the most profitable because of the cheaper cost of production.

Rye can be grown in practically all parts of the United States, although it is more productive in some sections than in others. Its culture is limited in most regions because other crops are more profitable. It is most profitable in the northern and eastern states. North Dakota, Michigan, Minnesota, and Wisconsin now lead in the production of rye. In the western half of the United States rye in general is best suited to the climate and agricultural conditions of North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota, Nebraska, and northeastern Colorado. Hardy winter rye is successfully grow in all parts of the Dakotas and Minnesota, while winter wheat usually will not survive the winters in North Dakota, not always in Minnesota, and usually only in the southeastern and Black Hills sections of South Dakota. Rye is the best small-grain crop for sandy lands of northeastern Colorado and adjacent states.

Less Valuable Than Wheat.

In the important rye producing western states the average acre value of the rye crop is somewhat less than that of wheat. The net returns from rye usually are higher than those of wheat because of the lower cost of production. The price of rye is determined largely by the foreign demand, and with the resumption of normal production in Europe the demand for the American crop probably will be lessened. At low prices rye cannot be grown for grain at a profit except under good management and in favored localities, but this crop will continue to have a wide use on sandy lands and for pasturage, hay, green manure, and as a nurse crop for legumes.

A copy of the bulletin just issued may be secured, while the supply lasts, from the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Reduce Damage by Weeds by Clean Farm Methods

Weeds will probably always be with us. By the use of good farming methods their damage can, however, be held at a low figure. Clean seed should be the first consideration. It may be bought from a reliable farmer or seed firm and the state experiment station will test it free of charge for weed seed. If home-grown seed is used, and you know certain weeds went to seed in the field, then a good fanning mill will remove the weed seeds.

After clean seed comes crop rotation. While certain weeds thrive in wheat or oats, they are easily destroyed by clear cultivation as practiced in the cornfield. Other weeds that persist in corn can be smothered by heavy crops of grain or sorghum. It is by studying weeds and knowing why they are weeds that we can discover their weak spots and destroy them.

Length of Time Seeds Retain Their Vitality

The length of time seeds retain their vitality varies according to storage conditions, temperature, moisture, degree of maturity when harvested, and manner of curing. The germinating power of most seeds deteriorates after the first or second year, being greatest after three years. Hard-coated seeds, such as clover and alfalfa, usually retain their vitality longer than soft-coated seeds. The average life for a few crops is as follows: Alfalfa, six years; alsike clover, two years; barley, six months; corn, two years; clover (red), three years; oats, six months; cucumber, ten years; wheat, six months; lettuce, five years; pumpkin, five years; radish, five years; red top, six years; soy beans, one year; timothy, five years; tomato, four years. It always pays to test old seeds.

Success With Clover Depends on Factors

Make Simple Test to Determine Needs of Soil.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A successful stand of red clover depends on a number of factors, the absence of any one of which may seriously affect the crop. A simple test to determine the needs of the soil on the farm or in the field where it is desired to grow clover may be made by setting aside a small plat of ground in the field for experimental purposes and trying different treatments of the soil as regards lime, fertilizers, etc.

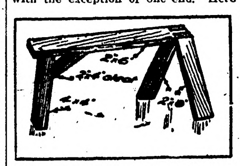
An arrangement of a series of eight plats for such a test is suggested by the United States Department of Agriculture. The strip of land to be used for the test should be as near representative of the field as is possible to determine from superficial observation. Divide it into eight plats of equal size. Leave the first plat untreated for a check on the treated plats. On the second spread lime alone, on the third lime and phosphate, on the fourth lime and manure, on the fifth manure alone, on the sixth manure and phosphate, on the seventh phosphate alone, and leave the eighth untreated for another check.

By this arrangement all the lime and all of the manure can be applied to the experimental plat in one continuous area. The phosphate alone must be applied to separate areas, and phosphate is the easiest to apply. A ton of ground limestone and 250 to 300 pounds of 16 per cent acid phosphate per acre is suggested unless the land is known to be very poor in lime, when two tons of ground limestone may be applied. In this outline no potash has been suggested. Potash plats can be inserted if desired, but over most of the clover area scarcity of phosphate is much more common than scarcity of potash, and by following the outline suggested here the farmer is likely to find which fertilizer is best to use. This outline illustrates the principle of definite experimentation and can be varied to suit the kind of information wanted.

Three-Legged Sawhorse Is Useful Implement

There is a particular advantage in owning a sawhorse like the one shown when it is to be used out of doors. The ground is seldom level, and the horse with four legs tips back and forth when one attempts to use it, unless one leg is blocked, says a writer in Successful-Farming.

The horse is made in the usual way, with the exception of one end. Here a single leg made from a 4 by 4 supplants the two. It is braced with a short piece as shown.



A Three-legged Sawhorse.

Fir is ideal for making this sawhorse because it is tough, firm and relatively light.

The third leg in no way prevents its use on floors and other level surfaces.

Control of Corn Rot Is Aided by Crop Rotation

"Good seed, good soil and careful culture are required to meet the problem of corn rot," thinks M. T. Myers, who has been making a careful investigation of the corn-rot situation in Ohio.

Root rot and ear rot are caused by different organisms, he finds. The rot that attacks the roots comes from a spore that stays in the field from year to year. It winters over in stalks and other crop debris left in the fields, particularly fields that are low in fertility. Rotation of crops, thorough tillage and fertilizer are the most important weapons with which to fight this disesase, Myers finds.

Ear rots, indicated by molds and discolorations ranging from pink through white, gray or brown at harvest time, are caused by spores carried in the wind. Careful seed selection and germination tests are the main line of defense against this disease.

Agricultural Notes

It is safer not to farm at all than to farm half-way

WEEKLY MENU SUGGESTIONS

When one has a cupful or less of any good canned fruit two or three kinds may be cooked together, adding an orange, rind and all, discarding the seeds, or a lemon will accentuate the fruit flavor. Cook until thick and make three or four nice glasses of conserve.

SUNDAY — Breakfast: Cinnamon rolls. Dinner: Roast leg of lamb, stuffed. Supper: Oyster stew.

MONDAY—Breakfast: Drop doughnuts. Dinner: Baked potatoes, apple pie. Supper: Sliced roast of lamb, escalloped potatoes.

TUESDAY—Breakfast: Oatmeal, top milk. Dinner: Sausages and creamed potatoes, Johnny cake. Supper: Hash of lamb, baking powder biscuits.

WEDNESDAY—Breakfast: Griddle cakes. Dinner: Cherry pie. Supper: Sour cream cake.

THURSDAY—Breakfast: Buttered toast, omelet. Dinner: Cottage pudding. Supper: Milk toast.

FRIDAY—Breakfast: Eggs on toast. Dinner: Fried fish. Supper: Hot potato salad.

Sausages and Creamed Potatoes.

Place a dish of creamed potatoes in the oven with enough small pork sausages to cover the top and bake.

Johnny Cake.

Take one cupful of sour milk, one-half teaspoonful of soda, one-half teaspoonful of salt, two well-beaten eggs, two tablespoonfuls each of sugar and shortening, one-fourth of a cupful of flour and three-fourths of a cupful of cornmeal. Mix and beat well, bake in a small dripping pan in a moderate oven.

Drop Doughnuts.

Beat two eggs well, add one-half cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of milk, a grating of lemon rind, a pinch of ginger, one and one-half cupfuls of flour sifted with a teaspoonful of baking powder. Drop by teaspoonfuls into hot fat. This recipe makes twenty-four. Roll in sugar when cold.

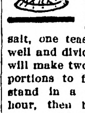
Cottage Pudding.

The sour cream cake left from Wednesday night may be used for the pudding. Cut in squares, steam and serve with the following sauce: One-half cupful of sugar, two tablespoonfuls each of flour and butter, a grating of nutmeg and half cupful of boiling water. Cook all together but the butter; when thick add two to three tablespoonfuls of vinegar and the butter. Serve poured hot over the pudding.

> We ought not to get books too cheaply. No book, I believe, is ever worth half so much to its reader as one that has been coveted for a year, and bought out of saved halfpence, and perhaps a day or two's fasting. That's the way to get at the cream of a book.—Ruskin.

SOME NATIONAL DISHES

It is pleasant at times to partake of some of the dishes which have been and are famous in other countries.



Danish Apple Cake.—Prepare the following cooky mixture, using one egg, one-half cupful of shortening, one-half cupful of milk, one cupful of sugar, three-fourths of a cupful of flour, three teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of vanilla. Mix well and divide into six portions. This will make two cakes. Roll each of the portions to fit a layer cake tin, let stand in a cool place for half an hour, then bake. Spread the three layers with apple sauce and over the top place whipped cream sweetened and flavored. Dot with bits of jelly and serve. The rest of the mixture may be made into cookies or baked and kept for another cake.

Jewish Fish Dish.—Take two pounds of salmon, halibut, haddock or cod. Use the bones and head to make stock. Place one cupful of chopped, mixed soup vegetables in a kettle, lay on them the fish and pour over the stock; cover and let cook until the fish is done. Lift the fish carefully to a hot platter and pour over it hot lemon sauce made as follows: Beat two eggs, add one-third of a cupful of lemon juice, enough fish stock strained to make a cupful; cook in a double boiler until thickened. Add butter, a few bits at a time and pour the hot sauce over the fish. Serve when cold.

Belgium Potatoes.—Fry six slices of bacon until half done, remove from the pan and add one sliced onion. Cut three potatoes into one inch cubes, add bacon, onion, two cupfuls of water, a bay leaf, a pinch of thyme and salt if needed. Cook uncovered until the potatoes are tender.

Peanut Straws.—Roll rich pastry to one-eighth of an inch in thickness, spread one-half with softened peanut butter, wet the edges of the crust, fold the remaining half over it. Roll lightly, prick here and there to prevent puffing, cut into strips half an inch wide and four inches long, brush with milk and bake in a quick oven. When done, sprinkle with paprika.

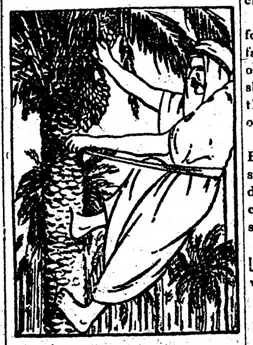
BIBLICAL HEALTH FOOD PRAISED BY SCIENTIST

Dates One of Man's First Foods; Eminent Health Authority Advises Their Daily Use at Breakfast.

Way back in the days of Abraham and even earlier the date was one of man's important foods. Ur, the birthplace of the Biblical patriarch, was in Mesopotamia, the home of the date, and this country still supplies us with the dates which we serve upon our tables.

In the Orient the date is a staple foodstuff and almost corresponds to wheat in this country. The Arab workman labors all day in the heat of the sun, sustained only by dates and milk. How is this possible? In the first place, the sugar contained in dates is the so-called "invert sugar," much more healthful than cane sugar. The date also has important amounts of food iron and lime—iron which gives energy and makes deep, vigorous living possible, and lime which forms sturdy bones and is so necessary for growing boys and girls.



Arab Gathering Dates

On this subject Dr. John Harvey Kellogg, eminent among American health food authorities, has written:

"The value of the date as a food is not half appreciated by the American public. The date not only furnishes a variety of sugar which is readily assimilated and which is much more wholesome than cane sugar, but it also supplies a fine quality of food iron which is entirely lacking in cane sugar. The date is equally superior as a source of food lime and other food salts.

"The American people are suffering greatly from lime starvation, which is resulting not only in a loss of stature, due to the lack of bone development, but an almost universal premature decay of the teeth. The free use of dates with milk as a part of the American breakfast would conduce greatly to improvement of the national health and the lowering of the mortality rate."

In view of these facts we can expect to find a great many different uses for a package of dates—and we will not be disappointed. One of the best uses is to put half a dozen or more of the dates into each school lunchbox every morning, or to serve them direct from the package at any meal. But there are also any number of delightful dishes that can be made with a package of dates, as you will see from the recipes below:

Economy Pudding

2 cups stale bread	½ cup milk
1 package dates	1 t'bl'spoon sugar
1 egg	grated nutmeg

Soak the stale bread in hot water for half an hour and then squeeze the water from it through a strainer. Mix with it the dates, stoned and cut. Grease a pie pan and put the mixture in it, shaping it to the pan. Beat egg and add to it the milk and sugar. Pour this custard over the bread and dates and add a little grated nutmeg on top, if desired. Bake until the custard is firm. Any pudding sauce may be served with this dessert.

Oriental Cream Pie

2 t'bl'spoons sugar	1 package dates
¾ cup flour	1 t'bl'spoon lemon juice
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ cup cold milk	2 egg whites
1½ cups hot milk	2 t'bl'spoon powdered sugar
2 egg yolks

Mix sugar, flour and salt. Add cold milk and mix until smooth. Add slowly to hot milk and cook in double boiler 15 minutes. Cut dates in small pieces. Add dates and beaten egg yolks to hot mixture and cook 2 minutes, stirring constantly. Add lemon juice and pour into baked pie crust. Mix stiffly beaten egg whites and powdered sugar and spread over top. Brown quickly in hot oven.

Date Conserve

1 package dates	1 orange
1 cups water	½ cup sugar
	¼ cup lemon juice

Chop dates. Add water and cook until soft. Add lemon juice. Slice orange very thin and add with sugar. Cook slowly until orange rind is tender and transparent. (Note—This conserve may be made in large quantities and stored in sterilized glasses.)

Hominy Temptation

Mound of steamed hominy	¼ package dates Milk or cream

Remove stones from dates and let them simmer in water for 5 minutes. Drain off water and arrange dates around a mound of cooked hominy. Serve with milk or cream.

If it hurts you to laugh, you better not go to the home talent play, as it is guaranteed to be a sure cure for the blues.

Rev. Raaum will hold services at 11 o'clock Sunday forenoon March 30th. at Ole Larson's. Mrs. Larson will serve for the Ladies Aid. Everyone welcome.

Alfalfa Seed

The Marshall County State Bank has placed an order for 1000 pounds of Certified Minnesota Grown Grimm Alfalfa which will arrive in Holt next week. Those who have ordered alfalfa seed will kindly arrange to get their seed at the Farmers Elevator where this seed will be distributed. This is the best lot of seed we could get at a reasonable price. We are very much pleased to note the great interest our farmers are taking in changing their methods of farming.

Now is the time to plan your feed for the coming year by seeding alfalfa and other tame grasses, also oats and corn. Every dairyman should study his farm in such a way that he will improve the condition of the soil by rotation of crops.

This year is a good year to start. Build up your farm by proper diversified crops and you are adding dollars and cents to your bank account together with raising the standard of your community.

Death of Mrs. Gust Johnson

Mr. and Mrs. Otto Johnson received the sad news Tuesday forenoon of the death of their daughter, Mrs. Gust Johnson, at her home in Duluth that morning.

Mrs. Johnson had been in poor health for sometime and a couple of weeks ago she had been vaccinated for smallpox. A few days later the mother and children were taken sick with scarlatina which apparently caused her death.

The grief stricken husband was permitted to bring his wife here in a sealed casket for burial, but the children were quarantined.

A short funeral service was held at the cemetery yesterday afternoon, Rev. Raaum officiating.

Mrs. Johnson was about 24 years old and leaves three little girls, the eldest 7 years old and the baby a little less than one year old.

The News extends sincere sympathy to the grief stricken husband, parents, brothers and sisters of the deceased.

Our Business System

For the benefit of all our patrons, it should be of interest to them to know our method and system of doing business.

We pay according to quality, 3 cents more per pound for the butterfat in first grade cream. All shareholders receive an 8 per cent dividend on shares of $25 00, which means $2.00 every year for each share. Besides the dividend shareholders receive one-half cent more per pound for butterfat than non-shareholdes, regardless of whether they are monthly or cash patrons. To illustrate what this amounts to, let us figure what the amount would be on our largest patron for 1923. His total pounds of butterfat was 3593, times one-half cent equals $17.96, plus a $2.00 dividend would make the extra amount, by being a shareholder, the neat sum of $19.96. Shareholders are part owners of the creamery, have a vote and something to say at the annual meetings, can hold office and help all the rest of the shareholders in making this the best creamery in the northwest. We are the biggest in the county, let us hold our own. It is advertising of this kind that shows others what is being done in the vicinity of Holt.

BEFORE BABIES WERE BORN

Mrs. Oswald Benefited by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Girardville, Pa.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before my last two babies came. It keeps me in perfect health and I am on my feet getting meals and doing all my housework until an hour before the baby is born. A friend told me to take it and I have used ten bottles since I heard about it. I recommend the Vegetable Compound whenever I can. Just yesterday a friend was telling me how miserable she felt, and I said, 'If you start taking Lydia E. Pinkham's you will feel fine.' Now she is taking it."—Mrs. P. J. OSWALD, JR., 406 W. Ogden St., Girardville, Pa.

Mrs. Nicola Paluzzi Says

Mishawaka, Indiana.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for weakness before my babies were born. I was weak and tired out all the time and it helped me. When I had inward inflammation the doctor treated me, but it did not help me, so I tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash and it helped me right away. I will always have your medicines."—Mrs. NICOLA PALUZZI, 415 E. Broadway, Mishawaka, Indiana.

Enormous Losses in Hatching Eggs

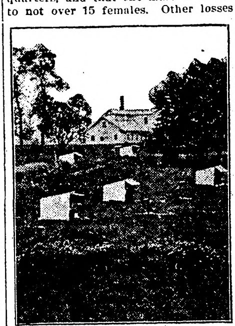
(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A good criterion of one's ability as a poultry raiser, the Department of Agriculture says, is the number of chickens raised to maturity in proportion to the eggs set. Success depends to a large extent on this one factor.

Causes for Losses.

The causes for enormous losses in eggs and dead embryos occurring annually in the country are many. A conservative estimate places the loss due to eggs that did not hatch in 1923 at over $8,000,000. Be sure, department poultrymen advise, that your breeders are in excellent health, have sanitary quarters, and that one male is mated to not over 15 females. Other losses are due to the fact that many poor eggs are set. Test your eggs carefully, and take out all with thin and spotted shells or those with cracked shells. Make sure that all eggs set are also of standard size.



Colony Houses Encourage Health of Fowls.

The greatest loss in incubation occurs in the embryos that die in the shell. This may be due to faulty methods of incubation or to eggs of poor hatching quality. Immature pullets, breeding stock that has been sickly and birds that have been forced heavily for winter production are apt to produce eggs that will not hatch well.

Use Healthy Breeders.

All breeders used should be thoroughly healthy; they should have abundance of constitutional vigor; and they should receive good breeding rations. The department advises against the use of too much protein, probably not over 15 per cent, in the mash rations; plenty of green food should be provided. Furthermore, give the breeders as much exercise as possible. In fact, do everything possible to insure the production of eggs of good hatching quality and many apparent troubles in incubation will be solved.

Hog Slaughter for 1923 Breaks Previous Record

More than 10,000,000 more hogs were slaughtered under federal meat inspection during the calendar year, 1923, than during any previous year, according to figures just made public by the bureau of animal industry, United States Department of Agriculture. The number slaughtered during the year was 53,333,708. The best previous record for a calendar year was made in 1922. During that year 43,113,620 hogs were slaughtered.

During December, 1923, not only the best record for the month of December, but for any month, was broken. During that month 5,903,759 hogs were slaughtered under federal meat inspection. The best previous record for a month of December was made in 1918 during which month 5,661,890 hogs were slaughtered. The best previous record for any month was made in January, 1919, during which month 5,845,696 hogs were slaughtered.

The practice of using dwarf instead of the ordinary standard trees is more or less prevalent among prospective planters of small areas. Dwarf trees are produced by propagating them on certain stocks of roots which because of their inherently restricted habit of growth restrict also the size of the tops that have been grafted or budded on them.

While earliness of bearing, and exceptionally high quality of the product are often claimed for dwarf trees, some of the best experience in this country has failed to substantiate the latter claim. Dwarf apple and pear trees have their place, however, in the garden or yard, especially under intensive methods of culture, where the space is too small to admit readily of the development of standard trees.

Common Grains for Hay

Any of the common grains, such as wheat, oats, barley, make good hay if cut at the proper stage of development, which is at the period of blossoming. That is when the plant contains the largest per cent of digestible nutrients. It is not common to use these plants for hay in this country. Most people seem to think they can get more out of them by allowing them to ripen, saving the grain and feeding the straw

Vegetable Garden Is Essential on Farms

Farmers Should Plan Having Supply During Year.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

While we are talking about the advantages of the kitchen garden in connection with the homes of those who live in the suburban districts sight must not be lost of the importance of good farm gardens. The United States census figures taken in 1919, showed that 78.9 per cent of all the farms in the United States have home gardens. This leads to the question, what did the other 21.1 per cent of the farm families have upon their tables. The answer would probably be mainly canned vegetables or no vegetables at all. It is safe to assume that the majority of these farm families who did not have a garden to fall back upon were often without vegetables on their tables. In view of the fact that vegetables furnish about four-fifths of the bulk of our ordinary diet, it would seem highly essential that every farm in the United States be well provided with garden facilities. When it comes to the matter of the actual value of the crops grown there is no comparison between general farm crops and those of the garden, as the average value of the garden crops is usually six to ten times that of a similar area in farm crops.

Not only should the farmers of the country give more attention to their home vegetable gardens in the spring, but they should so plan that a supply of vegetables will be maintained throughout the summer and plenty to can and store for winter.

Get Cows Into Condition by Liberal Corn Feeding

Cows that are milked down may be gotten in condition by feeding an extra amount of corn in the grain ration. A dry cow should always gain in weight and this gain can be made as quickly and cheaply with corn as with any other grain. A mixture of six parts of ground corn, two parts of ground oats or bran and one part of oil meal by weight is a very satisfactory mixture. Cotton seed should not be fed at this time owing to the lack of succulent feeds consumed. When the cow has gained as much weight as is desired, the corn should be replaced by bran and ground oats. At least ten days before the cow is due to freshen, bran, oats and oil meal should constitute the grain ration. Equal parts by weight of the first two with about one pound of oil meal per day forms a very satisfactory ration.

When the pregnant cow is within a few days of freshening, her grain ration should be considerably reduced. Bran mashes are excellent at this time because of the laxative and cooling nature. If constipation is in evidence, one quart of raw linseed oil or one pound of epsom salts should be given. Many cases of milk fever could be avoided if proper care were given just previous to freshening. With the exception of a few hours before calving, some roughage such as clover, alfalfa or soy-bean hay should be provided in liberal quantities.

Watermelon Seed Needs Best Kind of Attention

Many farmers fail to secure a good stand in their field of watermelons. Oftentimes they fail to secure as good a crop of commercial size melons as they should. Many melons show signs of disease. It is possible to protect against poor stands and poor crops if proper attention is given to seed as well as seed beds. Seed should be tested for germination. Then they should be disinfected. Specialists on truck diseases recommend the following: Take the amount of seed you have and soak them in a 1-to-1,000 solution of corrosive sublimate (bichloride of mercury) for ten minutes. Do not leave them in this solution longer than ten minutes.

Remove from the solution and wash thoroughly in three or four changes of clean fresh water to remove the disinfectant. The seed are now ready to plant.

This corrosive sublimate solution (1 to 1,000) is prepared by dissolving 1 tablet (which may be purchased at any drug store) in 1 pint of water. This amount is sufficient for a quarter of a pound of seed. Increase in this proportion for larger amounts.

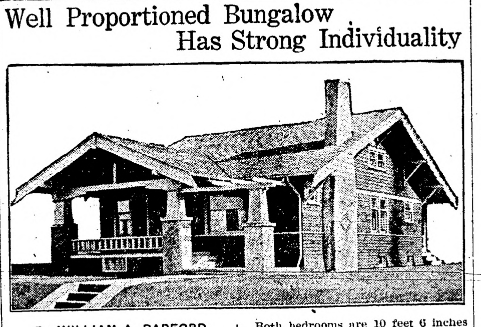
Butter, Milk and Cheese Selling at High Prices

Prices of dairy products did not suffer as much from the drastic deflation following the post-war period as did other farm products, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Butter, cheese, and milk have sold at prices remunerative to farmers. Butter is now higher than the general price level. Cheap feed in western butter districts, and high prices and some curtailment of production in milk districts, have enabled dairy farmers to weather the storm with less adversity than farmers producing commodities a part of which must be exported. Poultry and eggs have also continued on a fairly profitable basis.

Profits Don't Bother

Farmers who don't want to be bothered with keeping records and giving close attention to the details of farming as a business are not usually bothered with profits from the business.

Well Proportioned Bungalow Has Strong Individuality



By WILLIAM A. RADFORD

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1827 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

"There are so many novel designs and styles that it is very hard for me to pick out one that is to be our future home," said Annabelle. "Tonight we ought to make a selection, for I am anxious to plan the interior. Let's take six of the nicest and of these make a selection."

"I know just which one you will eventually choose," replied Harry. "It is the one you have always looked at just before we put them away every evening. When this one is compared with the others, it stands out by itself. And I like it."

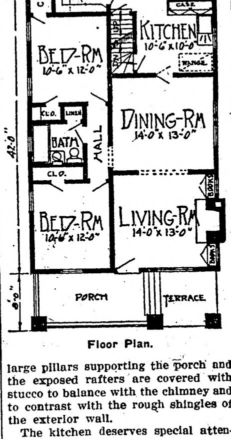
And so it came to pass that Harry and Anabelle decided on the cute little bungalow shown here. They had spent many a happy evening looking over the latest standard and novel designs, and each had secretly fallen in love with this one.

This bungalow is of standard design, and yet has enough points of individuality to create a more or less novel exterior. The low gable roof and the shingle walls when combined with the chimney of the fireplace tend to place it in the class of French homes.

Over all, the house measures 42 feet by 26 feet, not allowing for the 8-foot porch and terrace. Exposed rafters add to the beauty of the terrace. The front door opens to the living room, which is 14 feet long and 13 feet wide. A real fireplace about 6 feet wide with bookcases on each side, creates a very homey atmosphere, and the large window facing the street gives the room lots of light. The dining room connects the kitchen and a hall joins both bedrooms.

Both bedrooms are 10 feet 6 inches wide by 12 feet long, with large closets. The bathroom is centrally located and has a linen closet.

A bungalow such as described will create a very nice effect if placed on a 50-foot lot, although it may be comfortably placed on one 35 feet wide. The large pillars supporting the porch and the exposed rafters are covered with stucco to balance with the chimney and to contrast with the rough shingles of the exterior wall.



Floor Plan.

The kitchen deserves special attention. Doors leading to the basement and to the attic open to the kitchen. Two large kitchen cabinets are located in and a large pantry is built off the kitchen directly across from the vestibule. This may be glassed in and arranged to hold the ice box.

Strength of Wood Is Determined by Tests

Lumber used by builders has come in for a series of exhaustive tests to determine the relative strength of various sorts of woods under a compressional strain. By applying pressure to the end of a timber and increasing the force till the wood bursts, the compressional strength, or "column capacity," of the wood can be accurately measured.

For this purpose the United States forest service at Madison, Wis., used a tremendous machine capable of exerting a pressure of 1,000,000 pounds. This gigantic squeezer is large enough to take timbers 30 feet in length and a foot square.

In making the tests the remarkable fact was discovered that knotty wood was practically as strong for columns as clear wood, the knots apparently having very little effect on the breaking point of the timbers.

Knowledge of this fact should effect a large saving in building construction, according to the officials of the laboratory, as builders waste thousands of dollars in discarding knotted wood for columns when it could just as well be used.

Knotted wood, of course, is less dense and elastic than clear timber, as it comes from nearer the top of the tree, and it is not implied that wood containing knots should be deliberately chosen for column work.

Certain kinds of wood, of course, have higher column capacities than others. In one test southern yellow pine was shown to have a resistance as high as 432,600 pounds.

Colonial Bricks Like Mayflower Furniture

How often you hear it said of an old house that the bricks of which it was made were imported from England or Holland, states the editorial writer in the building number of House and Garden magazine. People actually believe this to be a fact, just as they believe that the Mayflower brought over vast quantities of furniture. Had this been true it would have required more than one Leviathan to have brought either the furniture or the bricks.

The historian, George Cary Eggleston, remarked on this in one of his books: "Nearly all these bricks, whether English or Dutch, were made in America, as later scholarly research has conclusively proved. The only difference between English and Dutch bricks was one of dimensions. The small bricks molded upon a Dutch model were known as Holland bricks. The much larger ones, molded upon an English model, were called English bricks.

"The very learned and scholarly historian of South Carolina, Mr McCrady, has conclusively proved that the so-called English bricks used in the construction of Carolina houses could not have been imported from England. By simple arithmetical calculation he has shown that all the ships landing in the Carolinas during the Seventeenth century—even if all of them had been loaded exclusively with bricks—could not have brought enough bricks to build one-half or one-fourth of the 'English brick' houses of that part of the country."

Windows and Openings Not for Cedar Closets

The question has frequently come up as to the advisability of putting a window in such a closet. In "The National Builder" magazine the question is answered by a cedar lumber manufacturer as follows:

"While we have no definite information from any one having a closet of this kind with an outside window, our suggestion would be to eliminate the window. The value of a cedar closet is maintained only through such care as applies to a cedar closet. That is, the door should be kept closed to keep all of the aromatic qualities of the cedar within the closet walls. That is just the same as keeping the lid closed on a cedar chest.

"While outside windows are very nice for closets, we believe that in the use of cedar closets, where you want every possible protection against moths, the window should not be included in specifications."

Judge Rules Bathroom Not Considered Room

A bathroom is not considered a room, in so far as deed restrictions are concerned, according to a recent legal ruling handed down by Judge George H. Gessner of Youngstown, Ohio. As a result a permanent injunction was granted to prevent a lot owner from erecting a five-room and bath house on a lot restricted to a six-room house or one larger.

According to the American Institute of Architects, sun porch or sun room and dining alcove are not considered primary rooms in architectural designing of homes.

Community Knowledge

Do you know all about your town? Or do you know only about one-half of what you should know in order to qualify as a valuable citizen?

People who travel a beaten track day after day learn what is to be seen along their route of travel—if they use their eyes. But there is much that they do not see, or hear, or learn, because it is not of the beaten track.

All around us there are facts and conditions to be learned about this town. If we learn of conditions we can form intelligent opinions.

Wear Sandals to Save Floor

In order to preserve the floor of the Westminster abbey chapter house in London, visitors are requested to remove their walking shoes and put on sandals before entering. The floor in the historic building dates back to 1290. The rule is enforced strictly and there is a watchman at all times to see that it is carried out. A generous supply of sandals, including all lengths and widths, is kept on hand.

WESTERN PIONEER TELLS INTERESTING EXPERIENCE

Frank Rikert, Who Left Illinois for California in Covered Wagon in 1864, Wouldn't Take $100 for Bottle of Tanlac.

Frank Rikert, well-known resident of North Sacramento, Cal., who came to the state from Illinois in a covered wagon in 1864, along with other hardy pioneers, recently exhibited a bottle of Tanlac, which he had just purchased, to a friend at his home and remarked: "If I thought this was the last bottle of Tanlac I would ever be able to buy, I wouldn't take one hundred dollars for it," thus proving the high valuation he places on the famous treatment.

"I believe Tanlac really saved my life when I took it after the Flu about a year ago," continued Mr. Rikert, "for the attack left me 20 pounds off in weight, and unable to turn over in my bed without assistance. I tell you, I thought my time had surely come.

"But, thanks to my wife's insistence, I kept on taking Tanlac till I was able to do all my work again, had back all my lost weight, and I've been feeling years younger ever since. I'm always telling my friends about Tanlac, and can't say too much for it."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.

DAIRY FACTS

COWS ON PASTURE NEED SOME GRAIN

The common practice of feeding no grain to dairy cows on early pasture is probably not good economy in the long run, in the opinion of workers in the field of animal feeding at Cornell university.

They point out that pasture grass is a strong stimulant to milk production. If no grain is fed the cows are likely to run down in flesh. This will lead to reduced milk production later on, when the pastures begin to dry up, and heavy feeding then will ordinarily not prevent this reduction. Cows of average production when they go on pasture should be fed at least one-third to one-half of the amount of grain they were receiving when in the barn.

But the grain mixture does not need such expensive high protein feeds as linseed oil, cottonseed meal or gluten feed as are given during the winter season. A mixture made up of equal parts of wheat bran, ground oats and hominy or corn meal would be suitable.

A grain mixture depends upon the kind of roughage with which it is to be fed. Pasture grass is a high protein feed and, furthermore, the proteins it contains are of the highest quality, so high protein feeds may be left out of the grain ration. Yet grass lacks fat or energy-producing nutrients. Except for this deficiency, it is an almost perfect feed for milk production.

In a ration made up of pasture grass and a grain mixture containing no high protein feeds, the protein content will always equal or exceed the amounts called for in feeding standards for cows producing up to sixty pounds of milk daily, as long as pasturage is plentiful, green and succulent. This statement applies only under these conditions. When pastures begin to dry up and get short during July and August the grass contains much less protein than earlier in the season. The grain mixture must then be changed to include some high protein feeds. In addition more grain must be fed to make up for the shortage in pasture.

Best Plan to Grow Into a High-Producing Dairy

"When good grade cows are selling from $150 to $200 per head, there is a tendency to buy cheap ones," says C. B. Finley, dairy expert of Iowa. Many men, he finds, get enthusiastic over the possibilities of dairying, sell their herds and replace them with cheap dairy cows whose only qualification for the name is the fact that they recently freshened or possess the color of one of the dairy breeds. The natural result is failure and a disgust for the dairy business.

Furthermore, there are many men who lack the necessary experience to make cows profitable should they succeed in buying good ones. Finley reports much more general success when farmers grow into a high-producing herd. This is accomplished by raising the daughters of a good pure bred bull or in buying a few choice heifers. No doubt individual cases warrant buying a few good pure bred cows for foundation animals.

The man who grows into the dairy business has an opportunity to reorganize his crop rotation and establish a legume crop so necessary for milk production. As a rule it is also necessary for him to improve his barn and put in a silo, all of which costs money and must be done as profits allow.

Corn Fed to Live Stock

More than 85 per cent of the United States corn crop is fed to live stock and somewhat less than 10 per cent is used for human food, according to recent data compiled by the United States Department of Agriculture. The hog is the largest consumer, 40 per cent being fed to swine on farms. Horses and cattle are next, using 20 and 15 per cent, respectively. The exports of corn, as grain, have never been large.

U. S. AGENTS TAKE 3 COUNTERFEITERS AFTER LONG HUNT

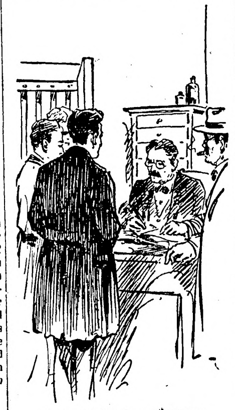
New York.—With the arrest of three men on charges of counterfeiting, Joseph A. Palma, chief of the secret service force in New York, announced that the mystery of the recent circulation of bogus war savings stamps, postage stamps and ten and twenty dollar Federal Reserve notes had been explained. The prisoners are Isaac Levine, of 69 Somerset street, Newark; Lewis Wilkes, of 100 Rockaway road, Jamaica, and Philip Leiberman, alias John Davis.

According to Mr. Palma, the three men began manufacturing war savings stamps at Newark in 1919 and disposed of their product in small quantities in Salem, Mass., and Buffalo. Some of them, the agent said, also appeared in Newark about the same time. Most of the stamps were seized and a hunt, fruitless until recently, was begun.

Mr. Palma said that after a large quantity of the stamps had been printed the plant was dismantled and thrown into the river. He said the government intends dredging for the outfit in order to use it against the prisoners when they are brought to trial.



Arrested for Counterfeiting.

Fake Postage Stamps Appear.

After this plant had been dismantled and the agents had lost trace of the source of the war savings stamps, Lieberman and two friends, Paul Adler and Benjamin Podolsky, were arrested December 11 in connection with the appearance in the East of a quantity of two-cent postage stamps and $10 Federal Reserve notes. A plant was seized at 330 New York Avenue, Jamaica.

Palma said he believed Lieberman, Levine and Wilkes were involved in six counterfeiting cases besides the one for which they were arrested. These included, he said, an attempt to put out $20 notes, which had only a small circulation.

Leiberman confessed, Mr. Palma said, to participation in the forgery of war savings stamps.

Majority of Stamps Withdrawn.

"They didn't get very far with these," the agent asserted. "Fully 95 per cent of those manufactured in Newark were seized by secret service agents. Although the 1919 issue exceeded their production of the issue of 1918, I wish to contradict certain statements that thousands of dollars' worth of these stamps are in circulation in New York and other parts of the country. Only small quantities have been in circulation at any time, and most of these have already been withdrawn.

Farm Labor Higher in '23 Than Preceding Two Years

Washington.—Farmers were required to pay higher wages to male farm labor during 1923 than in the two preceding years, the United States Department of Agriculture reports. The average rate per month with board in 1923 was $33.18; in 1922 it was $29.17, and in 1914 the rate was $21.05. The average monthly rate without board in 1923 was $40.91, in 1922 it was $41.79, and in 1914 the rate was $29.88.

Day wages for harvest labor with board, averaged $2.45 in 1923 as compared with $2.26 in 1922 and with $1.55 in 1914. For farm labor other than at harvest time the rate per day with board was $1.93 in 1923, as compared with $1.65 in 1922 and with $1.13 in 1914.

The peak year in wages of farm labor in recent years was 1920, the department points out. The deflation of general prices then began and farm rates continued to decline until the fall of 1922, when an upward trend developed.

Gold in Ocean Water

Several eminent physicists and natural scientists are experimenting with a modern avenue of alchemy in that the ocean waters are being worked with to produce what gold they contain. Prof. Herschel Parker, eminent physicist, and W. L. Morrison, scientist and mining engineer, are carrying on research to extract the gold from natural salt water. An ultimate cost of 10 cents per barrel of water containing 4 cents in gold is what is aimed at in a practical way.

Your doctor advises internal cleanliness

HE will tell you that the first results of constipation—headache, sleepless nights, biliousness, backache, etc.—warn that the body is flooded with intestinal poisons. In time, these poisons may cause the breakdown of health and lead to serious disease. In constipation, say intestinal specialists, lies the primary cause of more than three-quarters of all illness including the gravest diseases of life.

Hence, doctors urge internal cleanliness—regular and thorough removal of food waste from the body.

"Keep Clean Inside" Say Physicians

Laxatives Aggravate Constipation

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Why Physicians Favor Lubrication

Medical science, through knowledge of the intestinal tract gained by X-ray observation, has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage out of the body. Thus Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water it is harmless.

Get rid of constipation and avoid disease by adopting the habit of internal cleanliness. Take Nujol as regularly as you brush your teeth or wash your face. For sale by all druggists.

Origin of Honeydew Melon.

The original seed of the honey-dew melon is said to have been obtained from a melon shipped from Africa to New York city. The seed was planted at Rocky Ford, Colo., and crossed with other varieties for two or three seasons. The so-called honey-dew melon is the result. As yet this melon has not been brought into a stable condition of reproduction.

WHO INFLATED THE CURRENCY?

GOVERNMENT TOOK NO PART

Due to Changes in Supply, Demand and Prices of Commodities Caused by War—Federal Reserve Not to Blame.

The mistaken notion that the currency is inflated and deflated by the government in the United States from motives beyond the understanding of average people is effectually set at rest by George E. Roberts, noted banker and exponent of sound money, in an article in the Journal of the American Bankers Association.

"There has been inflation by the governments of Germany and other European countries, which have issued money for the purpose of paying their expenses," Mr. Roberts says. "The United States Government has done nothing of this kind since the Civil War.

"There is a genuine need for elasticity in the volume of currency, and for machinery to adjust it to the legitimate needs of the country. The means provided are the Federal Reserve Banks, authorized to issue currency to their member banks, either in payment of deposits or for loans.

Side-Tracked Like Freight Cars

"More currency is needed in September, October, November and December than in January and February. As business slackens, currency naturally retires from circulation. Money accumulates in the member banks and they send it in to the Reserve banks, which in effect retires it, as freight cars are retired when traffic falls off.

"What caused the great inflation of credit and currency? It was due primarily to the war, which made extraordinary demands upon the industries and caused a great rise of wages and prices. It was inevitable that more credit and money would be called for to carry on business.

"The boom year of business that followed the armistice was likewise abnormal. The end of the war released a great many demands that had been held in check. The foreign demands upon us at first increased. There was a temporary stimulus, but the volume of business was abnormal and could not be sustained. Agricultural production in Europe revived, the prices of agricultural products moved back toward normal, importations from the United States fell off, prices declined, "deflation" began.

"Some say 'inflation should not be permitted,' but if war occurs inflation is unavoidable. Recruiting armies makes a labor scarcity. Contractors bid above going wages to attract men. The war industries did the same and the peace industries raised wages to hold their men. Governments of Europe sent representatives to this country to buy food and they bid up prices on the grain exchanges. Higher levels of wages and prices meant that more credit and money was required to handle business.

More Business, More Money

"The increased issues of currency was a result of allowing business to go ahead upon the rising level of wages and prices. When a factory pay-roll doubled, twice as much currency had to be furnished for it. When cotton rose from 10 cents a pound to 30 and 40, more currency was required to handle the crop, and so all around the circle.

"Deflation did not come by an act of the government or the Federal Reserve authorities in suddenly withdrawing money from circulation. Deflation came naturally when business fell off and prices declined. Just as an increasing volume of business at higher prices called more currency into use, so a decreasing volume of business at lower prices released currency from use and caused it to return to the Reserve banks.

"There has been absolutely nothing new or strange in these price movements related to the war. Inflation and deflation have been just as always when wars have occurred. The only new factor has been the population. That is always being renewed, and most people do not learn by the experince of others. When hard times come it is always the thing to lay the blamed on somebody, and this time the Federal Reserve System has taken most of it."

AMERICAN SAVINGS INCREASE

New York.—Continued increase in the savings of the American people is indicated by the latest national compilation just completed by the Savings Bank Division of the American Bankers Association. Savings deposits in banks and trust companies of the United States were reported at $17,300,000,000, June 30, 1922, the last available nation-wide figures, as compared with $16,620,000,000, June 30, 1921. This is an increase of $680,000,000 or 4.1 per cent.

The number of savings depositors, as indicated by the number of accounts, shows an increase of 4.9 per cent, with the states reporting for the first time in 1922 excluded. The third annual report of the Savings Bank Division on school savings banking also shows increased American thrift, 1,271,029 pupils having savings accounts during the school year of 1921-1922 as against 802,906.

Which said mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said Deposit Trust & Savings Bank, Mortgagee to Deposit Bank & Trust Company, a corporation under the laws of the State of Minnesota, by written assignment dated July 30th, A. D., 1923, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County, Minnesota, on the 22nd day of January, 1924, at 1 o'clock P. M., in Book 110 of Mortgages, on page 226.

And whereas, the said Deposit Bank & Trust Company, the assignee and holder of said mortgage, has paid delinquent taxes upon the mortgaged property hereinafter described in the sum of Two Hundred Eighty-two and 21-100 ($282.21) Dollars; and whereas, the said Deposit Bank & Trust Company, the assignee and holder of said mortgage, has duly elected and does hereby elect to declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice, under the terms and conditions of said mortgage and the Power of Sale therein contained, and whereas, there is actually due and claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of Thirty-five Hundred ($3,500.00) Dollars, with accumulated interest from November 1st, 1920, at the rate of six and one-half per cent per annum and also the sum of $282.21 for taxes paid as aforesaid, with interest thereon from date of payment at the rate of six per cent per annum; and whereas, the said Power of Sale has become operative and no action or proceedings having been instituted at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof,

NOW, THERFORE, Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the Power of Sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and covered by said mortgage, viz:

South Half Southwest Quarter Section Twenty-two and North Half Northwest Quarter Section Twenty-seven, of Township One Hundred Fifty-six North, of Range Forty-one West of the Fifth Principal Meridian, in Marshall County and State of Minnesota.

Which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Marshall County at the Front door of the County Court House, in the City of Warren, in said County and State on the 19th day of March, 1924, at 11 o'clock A. M. of that day at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash, to pay the amount then due on said mortgage and interest and the sum of $282.21 for taxes paid on said described premises with interest from the date of payment, together with the costs and disbursements of such sale and Seventy-five Dollars attorneys fees stipulated in said mortgage in case of foreclosure.

In King Tut's Time.

Folks in King Tut's time were not so slow. Carl Mitman, in cataloguing the ship models in his department of the Smithsonian Institution, points out that Egyptians built boat hulls of the correct form for speed nearly 4,000 years before modern scientific designers arrived at the same conclusions. Vikings had the right idea and Malay pirates had the waveline theory of construction down to perfection when English and American sailboats were clumsy tubs.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale

Notice is hereby given, that default has been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage containing a Power of Sale, by reason of which default said Power of Sale has become operative and the Assignee of the Mortgagee hereinafter named is authorized to and does hereby declare the whole sum secured by said mortgage to be due and payable and exercises the Power of Sale aforesaid; that said mortgage was executed by Clarence Larson and Bertha Larson, his wife, and Engebret S. Moe, a single man, Mortgagors to Holt State Bank, a Minnesota corporation, Mortgagee, and dated October 2nd, 1919 and filed for record in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County, Minnesota on the 22nd day of October, A. D. 1919 at 8 o'clock A. M. and was then and there duly recorded in Book 93 of Mortgages, on page 381,

Which mortgage was by the said Holt State Bank duly assigned to Deposit Bank of Winona, a Minnesota corporation, by written assignment dated October 28th, 1919 and which assignment was filed for record in the office of the Register of Deeds, in said County of Marshall on the 26th day of November, A. D. 1919 at 1 o'clock P. M. and was then and there duly recorded in Book 90 of Mortgages, on page 594;

And which mortgage was duly assigned by Deposit Bank of Winona, a Minnesota corporation, to Deposit Bank & Trust Company, a Minnesota corporation, by written assignment dated July 30th, 1923, which assignment was filed for record in the office of the Register of Deeds in said Marshall County on the 26th day of January, A. D. 1924 at 11 o'clock A. M. and duly recorded in Book 110 of Mortgages, on page 233.

That the amount claimed to be due and which is due on said mortgage at this date is Three Thousand Three Hundred Sixty and no-100 Dollars, with interest on $3180.00 thereof from the 2nd day of October 1922 and interest on $180.00 thereof from the 2nd day of October 1923 at six per cent per annum; that the premises described in and covered by said mortgage are situated in the County of Marshall and State of Minnesota and described as follows, viz:

The East Half of the Southeast Quarter (E1-2SE1-4) of Section Thirty three (33) in Township One Hundred Fifty six (156) North of Range Forty two (42) West of the Fifth Principal Meridian, Lot Four (4) of Section Three (3), Lots One and Two of Section Four (4), and Lot Five (5) of Section Three (3) in Township One Hundred Fifty five (155) North of Range Forty two [42] West of the Fifth Principal Meridian,

That by virtue of the Power of Sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be foreclosed by the sale of said described premises at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash by the Sheriff of said County of Marshall, at the Front door of the County Court House, in the City of Warren, in said County, on Tuesday the 1st day of April 1924 at 2:30 o'clock P. M. to satisfy the amount then due on said mortgage and Five Hundred Six and 33-100 Dollars for taxes paid on said described premises, with interest thereon from the 2nd day of February 1924 at six per cent per annum, together with the costs of such sale and Seventy-five Dollars attorneys fees stipulated in said mortgage.

Bravelette.

A new material, bravelette, is used by a German inventor in the manufacture of safety razors. It looks like ivory, tortoise shell or marble, depending on the manner in which it is manufactured. The advantage of this material lies in the fact that the apparatus cannot rust. There is no need to dry the razor after use, it is sufficient to rinse it. Another advantage is that it is cheaper than razors made of metal.

Washington — American marines landed at Puerto Cortez, Honduras, and established a place of refuge for foreigners.

Washington—The senate ratified the agreement between the United States and Finland for the payment of $9,000,000 Finnish war debt to this government in the next 62 years.

Washington—George T. Summerlin, acting American charge to Mexico City, was ordered to Rome to become counselor of the embassy.

Washington—The American Red Cross will rehabilitate survivors and families of victims of the Nixon, N. J., explosion. This will include repairing homes, supplying clothing and furniture, and helping them until they obtain employment.

Washington—A motion picture film entitled "A Tour of Alaska," showing many scenes taken on the trip to the territory last summer by the late President Harding, has been released by the department of the interior, for the use of colleges, clubs and other educational organizations.

Washington—Many people utilize the 1-cent postal cards for their correspondence. The postoffice department is using 1,253,000,000 this year, and is preparing to make almost 1,500,000,000 in 1925. They will cost $815,000 to manufacture and print at the government printing office here. Last year they cost 60 cents a thousand to manufacture; this year they will cost 64 cents a thousand.

Washington—Better terminal facilities for barge lines on the Mississippi river are needed for their successful operation, Secretary J. W. Weeks declared at a hearing before the house commerce committee on the Denison bill to create a government corporation to supervise inland waterway transportation. He also stressed the necessity of improving equipment used in such service.

Domestic

New York—Prohibition agents captured a $50,000 redistilling apparatus capable of an estimated daily output of 20,000 gallons.

San Antonio—Mrs. Bertha Horchem, member of an air circus, was killed when her plane crumpled and she fell 1,200 feet, her husband and 3,500 spectators witnessing the fall.

Louisville, Neb.—Windows in practically every house here were broken and the entire town was terrified when a powder magazine at a quarry near the city limits exploded. Store windows were broken and heavy property damage to buildings were reported.

Chicago—Approximately 10,000,000 automobile campers hit the trails of the country in 1923, the touring bureau of the Chicago Motor club has estimated, at the same time predicting a considerable increase in the number of "motor gipsies" this year.

Swarthmore, N. Pa.—Emma Jane Nehl, of Chicago, was awarded this year's $3,000 prize by the Chautauqua Drama board for the best play for Chautauqua production, Dr. Paul M. Pearson, secretary of the drama board, announced. He said the winner was chosen after a trial production of the play "Their Honor the Mayor."

Chicago—Samples of the sausage which was believed to have been responsible for the death of five persons at Sterling, Colo., a week ago, contained no sign of botulinus, the germ which it was thought caused the fatalities, Dr. J. C. Geiger, professor of bacteriology at the University of Chicago, announced.

Indianapolis—Harry O. Chamberlain, judge of the Marion county circuit court, was asked to act as special judge in the trial of Warren T. McCray, governor of Indiana, on an indictment returned by the county grand jury charging embezzlement of $155,000 of the state board of agriculture's funds.

Chicago—A clue to Tommy O'Connor, who broke jail while under sentence of death a few years ago, has been found in woods country at Hurley, Wis., it was learned. Walter Van Horn, a deputy sheriff, was sent to Hurley last week, it was disclosed and reported that he had found what he believed was evidence that O'Connor had been there and had gone into the woods when news of his presence there leaked out.

Boston—The steamer Leviathan was found to have suffered serious damage from running aground last September in New York harbor. When the water drained away from the hull in dry dock it was apparent that it had fared worse than had been supposed. The steamer's plates were twisted and torn over an area about 220 feet long and 10 feet wide. In four or five places the hull was pierced through.

New York—Advices received by the All American Cable company from Punta Arenas, Costa Rica, said earth shocks were felt there and were continuing with greater intensity. A new volcano, the message added, has opened in a mountain range midway between San Jose and Punta Arenas.

New York—William Bradley, one time multimillionaire, builder of most of the Broadway-Seventh avenue subway, the Homestead tunnel of the Pennsylvania railroad and the Croton siphon, died at his home here, virtually a pauper, it became known when his will was filed for probate.

Sports

Minneapolis—Jack Renault of Montreal added Cliff Kramer of St. Paul to his long list of knockout victims, the Canadian heavyweight champion flattening Kramer for the count in the fourth round of a fight scheduled for 10 rounds.

Orlando, Fla.—Pat Moran, manager of the Cincinnati Reds, died in a hospital here of Bright's disease. He died as he had lived—"playing the game"—stubbornly resisting heavy odds in fighting his last grim battle with the same determination he showed on the baseball diamond. Jack Hendricks succeeds Pat Moran as manager of the Cincinnati Nationals. Hendricks managed one major league club, the St. Louis Cardinals, several years ago and has piloted many pennant winners in the minors. He joined the Cincinnati club this season as coach and assistant manager, after resigning his managership of the Indianapolis American association club.

Rangoon, Burmah—The town of Myanaung, on the Irawandi river near Prome, was almost entirely burned, say reports just received here. Thousands of homeless persons are camping on the river bank.

Berlin—After 19 years of married life, the crown prince and crown princess of Germany have been forced to appeal to the courts to obtain the gorgeous widding present given them by all the mayors of the Prussian cities.

Christiania, Norway—An instrument known as the "sun compass" has been constructed to the design of Captain Roald Amundsen for use on his transpolar flight. It will supplant the ordinary compass, which is unreliable in the region of the pole.

Berlin—Foreign Minister Stresemann in the reichstag demanded removal of the Allied military control and declared that the German government could not accept a guarantee commission to see that Germany was held in the state of disarmament.

Geneva, Switzerland—Portugal and Rumania have petitioned the League of Nations for a seat on the naval committee which is directed by the council of the league, and with the help of the South American countries they are expected to continue the efforts begun in Rome to extend the principles of the Washington treaty.

Paris—The Paris garbage men have gone on strike for more pay, and city authorities are making arrangements for an improvised service. Parisians also are deprived of the parcel post service which is run under contract by private companies. Employees of the Paris district are striking for increased wages.

Berlin—Resolutions denouncing the Turkish nationalism for abolishing the caliphate, and calling upon the entire Moslem world to establish a commercial and social boycott against the Kemanist government were adopted at a gathering of the entire Islamic community in Berling, comprising Mohammedans from 41 lands.

Mexico City—General Plutarco Elias Calles continues to be a candidate for the presidency, announces the Calles party. He has a majority in congress and in the Obregon cabinet. ~~He is~~ the only prominent candidate, as the De La Huerta party refuses to present a candidate. The agrarians, revolutionists and workingmen's unions are behind him.

Moscow—Twenty-two members of the bandit gang which held up the Warsaw-Moscow express train near the Polish frontier last October, robbing the diplomatic couriers on board, have been sentenced to death at Mins. The leader, the former Polish Colonel Monich, escaped. The evidence at the trial was that Colonel Monich's real aim was a monarchist uprising in White Russia in the spring.

Fiume, Italy—Fiume has been placed under Italian law in accordance with a decree issued by General Giardino, military governor, establishing the civil and political organization of the city. The new territory, which is designated at Carnaro, has not yet been officially annexed to Italy, so the administrative offices there will continue until after the annexation formalities and the government orders the holding of elections.

Paris—Banishment of the caliphate from Turkey means the end of harems, according to Ottoman circles in Paris. Mustapha Kemal Pasha has long sought abolition of polygamy but has not dared openly demanded it. A change in religious attitude following the caliph's exile is expected to cause a renunciation of polygamy and legal measure against maintenance of a harem.

London—The cabinet has decided to appoint a committee to consider Indian affairs, with authority to consult the members of the secretary for India's council, members of parliament interested in India and representatives of Indian opinion, according to the Daily Herald. The labor party, the party adds, regards this as the first step toward meeting the insistent Indian demand of the claim for self government.

Paris—Rex Ingram, famous American moving picture director, who produced "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" and other screen classics has definitely decided to quit the movies forever, in order to devote the rest of his life to sculpture.

London—The American round the world flight cropped up in the house of commons when Sir Harry Brittain asked whether the government had any information regarding the proposed American attempt. Full information concerning the American flight had been received by the air ministry declared Undersecretary of Air Leach.

News Briefs from All the State

Condensed Stories of Happenings of the Week in Minnesota

Bemidji—With a heavy shipping season in prospect, sawing operations at the plant of the Crookston Lumber company will begin about April 1.

Spooner—Mrs. Erickson, wife of publisher of the Spooner News, has been appointed postmistress here and is now in charge of that office.

Moorhead—The Clay county unit of the Minnesota Potato Growers exchange will be organized within the next 10 days, O. M. Olson, organization campaign manager, announced.

Rochester—Triplets were born to Mr. and Mrs. Albert Kujath. All are boys and all are doing nicely. This is one of the few cases of triplets reported in many years in this city.

Ortonville—One of the old landmarks of Ortonville soon will be wrecked, or moved to another location, to make way for the new armory and community building to be erected here.

Virginia—The alfalfa acreage of the north end of St. Louis county will be increased 100 per cent, according to August Neubauer, local county agent. The increased acreage amounts to 400 per cent over a year ago.

Fairmont—Byron H. Curtis, Martin county's representative in the state legislature, has filed for re-election. He has served two previous terms. August E. Mau, a Waverly farmer, also filed as a candidate.

Moorehead—Clay county commissioners sold $250,000 worth of road bonds at a premium of $900 and interest at 4¾ per cent. The bonds make available this year $250,000 for road work.

Ortonville—Vanity cases and powder puffs have been officially banned from the Ortonville city schools. Too much attention is paid to cosmetics and not enough attention is given to study, the school authorities say.

Winona—Advocates of the erection of a tuberculosis sanatorium in Winona county won a victory when the Winona League of Women Voters, after listening to arguments advanced in favor of the project, went on record in support of the proposal.

Rochester—With the completion of the animal farm of the Mayo clinic, four miles from the city, and the consequent removal of to that place of all animals used for experimental purposes, improvements which will cost about $30,000 are now in progress.

Little Falls—A peramennt county tax committee was elected here at a tax reduction conference attended by town, village and city school board officials and taxpayers. About 800 persons, mostly farmers, were in attendance.

Hibbing—Announcement was made by H. S. Wallin, superintendent of the Mahoning mine, that a day and night crew will start work on stripping with two shovels. This will give employment to more than 200 men and will start mining operations one month earlier than any time in the past ten years.

Redwood Falls—Contracts have been let by the board of education for the erection of a new grade school building here. E. Carlstrom of Mankato was given the general contract on his bid of $122,082. To this is added contracts for the heating, ventilating, plumbing and wiring, which will bring the total price of the building up to $162,674.

Hibbing—District Judge Martin Hughes has announced that, as an incentive to emphasize the "ten commandments" of real American citizenship, $100 donated by R. K. Doe, United States naturalization examiner, will be offered as prizes in statewide competition. The sum will be divided into four prizes, $50, $25, $15 and $10. Every individual, club and civic organization in Minnesota interested in good citizenship may compete.

Rochester—What is regarded as an extraordinary record for the production of butter was made recently by a purebred Holstein cow in the herd of Christopher Graham of Rochester. According to the advanced registry department of the Holstein-Friesian association of America, this cow, Grahamholm Segis Pauline Colantha, a junior 3 year old, produced in one year 23,570.4 pounds of milk and 740.46 pounds of butterfat—equal to 925.5 pounds of butter.

Crosby—Pumping was resumed in the shaft of the Milford mine where 41 miners were drowned late in January. The bodies of the victims are still in the shaft, buried in tons of mud, sand and weeds as well as water. The mud is too thin to shovel and too thick to pump. Several days ago the pumps became clogged with the grass and weeds and were hoisted and new screens made. Now two lines of clear water are running into the shaft in an attempt to thin the mixture so that it can be pumped.

Ivanhoe—A cow, owned by Sterlind Brothers near this place, recently gave birth to triplets. Previous to this the cow had given birth to four sets of twins, making 11 healthy calves in five freshenings, believed to be a record for the state.

Cass Lake—Although the celebration and six day dance which the Indians are to stage here is not scheduled to start until July 1, preparations are already being made by both braves and squaws, particularly the latter, who are making over old and preparing new costumes to be used in the dances.

St. Hilaire—Selmt A. Hoff has been named postmaster here by President Coolidge.

St. Cloud—J. C. Mitchell, attorney at Brooten, has announced he will run against United States Representative Harold Knutson at the next election.

Faribault — Plans to sponsor an honorary scholastic society in the Faribault high school have been announced by the Faribault Lions club.

Faribault — Arthur Nauman, local poultry breeder, was elected president of the Cannon Valley Poultry association at its annual meeting here to succeed A. M. Brand.

Hibbing—Legionaires of the range, backing the campaign of the Hibbing post, are planning to descend on St. Cloud in force when the state convention meets there the coming summer, to ask for the 1925 convention.

Willmar — An underground moonshine outfit was found by federal agents and Sheriff Bonde at Roscoe in Stearns county. An elaborate still was found in the all concrete room under a garage floor part of which could be moved for an opening.

Owatonna—Officers of local units of the 135th infantry have received word from headquarters of the national guard regiment at Minneapolis that the annual encampment of the regiment will be held at Fort Snelling July 5 to 20.

Windom—The city council has ordered that a special election be conducted on April 8 for the purpose of voting bonds in the sum of $2,500 for the purchase of the Hutton property to be converted into a tourists' rest camp.

New Ulm—The receipts of the Lafayette Farmers' Creamery company increased $38,000 for the year 1923, according to a report just issued. The total business of the concern amounted to $156,711. A total of 766,285 pounds of cream were taken in.

Fairmont—Herman Mickow of Rutland township, is the owner of "Bluebird," a Holstein cow for which a record is claimed. The cow is one of a tested herd and in 31 days gave 2,340 pounds of milk, which yielded 75.5 pounds of butterfat.

Moorhead—Clay county has signed more than its quota of potato acreage for the Minnesota Potato Growers' Exchange, O. M. Olson, county manager, announced. The county signed 26,842 acres, Mr. Olson said, as against a "stimulative quota" of 25,000.

Willmar—Contracts for the construction of the new Lincoln school building were let to the Standard Construction company of Minneapolis on their bid of $73,975 for the general construction. The total cost of the building will be in the neighborhood of $100,000.

Thief River Falls—The amount of money loaned to Pennington county farmers under the new rural credits act is nearing the $1,000,000 mark, according to figures obtained from Fred Lorentson, register of deeds, and new farm mortgages are still coming into the office to be recorded.

Slayton—The Slayton "Sleep Dodgers club" is the name selected for the organization of radio owners. R. L. Reed, who suggested the name for the club, was presented with a prize. Nearly 50 radio owners belong to the new club and meetings will be conducted twice a month to discuss matters of mutual interest.

Fridley—Work is already under way on the new $2,000,000 filtration and pumping station, now under construction six miles northeast of downtown Minneapolis. The plant will have a capacity of 160,000,000 gallons of water a day. The first unit, which now is being built, will be finished some time in 1926.

Balaton—At a mission gathering of pastors at the Current Lake Swedish Lutheran church Harry Soxie, an Eskimo Bible student of Alaska, will be one of the principal speakers. Several prominent Swedish Lutheran pastors of this section of the state will take part in the sessions.

Marshall—The erection of a large modern fireproof hotel in this city this summer is a project which is being promoted by the Marshall Business Men's association. A committee has been named to investigate the proposition and will report back to the association at an early date.

New Ulm—The state of Minnesota has never reimbursed Brown county for support of dependent children and the county commissioners at a recent meeting adopted a resolution calling for an explanation. Under an act of 1917, it is declared the state is to pay one-third of the cost of supporting dependent children, residing in the county.

Moorhead—A naval reserve unit with 35 men and three officers has been organized in Moorhead. Both Fargo and Moorhead men are in the unit. In addition to the drill pay and equipment given each man, a two weeks training cruise on the Great Lakes is offered.

Pipestone—Three hundred farmers and business men from five counties of this district met here to consider the McNary-Haugen bill for agricultural relief. Resolutions favoring early passage of the measure were addressed to President Coolidge and senators and representatives.

St. Paul—Automobile owners of Minnesota already owe the state more than $350,000 in penalties alone because about 75,000 of them have not paid their 1924 auto license tax, according to figures obtained from the office of Mike Holm, secretary of state.

Winona Construction of a new dyke road across the Wisconsin bottoms to link with the Mississippi river bridge at this city was discussed at a conference of the highway city and county officials. Work on the road is to commence early in the spring, according to plans.

ENTIRE CREW IN MINE ARE DEAD

175 Men Entomed In Utah Coal Mine By Explosions Saturday

Castle Gate, Utah.—Twenty-two bodies had been recovered from the Utah Fuel company's mine No. 2 in which 175 men were entombed Saturday morning. Smoke and gas accumulated in the far part of the escapeway of the mine is proving a handicap to the rescue workers. Some of the bodies recovered were mutilated.

Real headway in the rescue work started about midnight Monday and continued until morning. The crews, held back all day by fire and cavein, began rescue work with renewed vigor at about 8 p. m. Sunday after they had successfully combatted the fire.

The poisonous gas, arch enemy of the rescue crews, was disappearing in many portions of the mine, according to reports, and in many parts of the mine, crews were carrying on their investigations.

Relief stations and first aid depots have been established as the workers made headway. Airlines and waterlines have been laid as the men advanced, and no chances are taken on other members of the relief force being killed by the fumes.

Three Terrific Blasts.

The destructive explosions occurred from some yet unknown cause Saturday about 8:15 a.m. First came a terrific blast which hurled timbers, piping and rails across the gulch, a distance of several thousand feet. The 800 pound steel door of the escapeway was hurled a half mile. The second blast came a minute later and in 20 minutes came the third. The relief and the reconstruction started at once and have been carried on continuously ever since.

DAIRY INCREASE IS RECORD

N. D. Advance Greater Than Any Leading Dairy State.

Fargo, N. D.—North Dakota made a bigger gain in the number of dairy cows on its farms in 1923 than any of the other leading dairy states of the United States and advanced from 20th place to 16th place in the total number of cows owned.

This is the report of the United States department of agriculture, just made public.

North Dakota had 533,000 milch cows on its farms January 1, 1924, as compared to 503,000 January 1, 1923, and 484,000 January 1, 1922.

There was an increase of 19,000 cows in 1923 over 1922 and an increase of 30,000 cows in 1924 over 1923, or 49,000 more cows January 1, 1924 than on January 1, 1922.

This shows a 6 per cent gain for 1923 over 1922. Only three other states in the nation, Montana, Nevada, and Oregon, show a larger percentage gain. But of these states, Oregon, which made a gain of 8 per cent, has only 238,000 milch cows; Montana, which made a gain of 12 per cent, has only 194,000 cows and Nevada, which made a gain of 14 per cent, has only 24,000 milch cows.

In 1910 there were 25 states which had more dairy cows than North Dakota. In 1922 there were 20 states ahead of this state; in 1923 this had been reduced to 19 and now there are but 15 states which have more dairy cows than North Dakota, the state advancing from 26th place to 16th place in 14 years.

WILL FIGHT CANCELLATION

Sinclair and Attorneys Will Contest Action to Cancel Leases.

Chicago.—Harry F. Sinclair and a battery of six attorneys departed on Monday for Cheyenne, Wyo., to contest the government action to cancel the Teapot Dome oil leases, and expressed confidence of ultimate victory and vindication.

Mr. Sinclair was accompanied by Col. W. J. Zevely, his chief legal counsel, and five other attorneys, who are prepared to oppose the government's action which it is understood will start this week in Cheyenne with the filing of a bill for an injunction to restrain taking further oil from the Teapot.

Owen J. Roberts, and Atlee Pomerene, special counsel for the government in prosecution of the oil suits, left Washington late Monday for Wyoming to put before the federal court their application for a temporary restraining order against the Mammoth company. They will go to California afterward to bring similar action against the Pan American Petroleum company.

In both cases the attorneys expect the court to grant the applications and hold the leases in abeyance while the government continues its efforts to cancel them entirely.

Mexican Rebels Capture Jalpan.

Frontera, Tabasco.—The federal government of Queretaro, has fled in the face of an advance of 5,000 revolutionary troops under General M. Cavazos, who captured Jalpan, headquarters here of Adolfo De La Huerta, announced Monday. The revolutionary general Guadalupe Sanchez attacked and captured Plaza Medellin, 15 kilometers from Vera Cruz, and General Cavazos began a rapid advance from Jalpan to San Luis Potosi with a view to breaking through to Tampico it was announced.

DETAILS OF AID NOW COMPLETE

Help Will Be Extended Direct To Farmer---Will Assist Closed Banks To Reopen

Bismarck, N. D.—The $10,000,000 Agricultural Credit corporation is functioning now, M. O. Grangaard of Minneapolis, vice president of the corporation and supervising North Dakota activities, declared Saturday, following a conference held here at which the contemplated activities in North Dakota were discussed. The office details, necessary as a preliminary to actual extension of aid, are nearing completion, he said, and within the next week it is expected that applications will be in the hands of banks in North Dakota.

It is planned that banks desiring to avail themselves of the corporation's aid will make applications direct to the Minneapolis office, on blanks to be distributed next week. The North Dakota committee and field men will assist the Minneapolis office in distributing the aid. No quota has been assigned for the various northwest states brought under the scope of the activities of the corporation, Mr. Grangaard said.

Tax Department Planned.

A plan by which direct aid will be extended to farmers, in purchasing tax certificates held by county treasurers in North Dakota, and thus reducing the interest rate on delinquent taxes from 17 to 6 per cent, was discussed. A tax department will be created in the Minneapolis office, and efforts made through further conferences with Tax Commissioner C. C. Converse and county officials to overcome legal obstacles to working out a feasible plan, Mr. Grangaard, spokesman for the conference here, said.

Many banks now closed will be opened, the vice president said. Optimism over the condition in North Dakota was expressed by Mr. Grangaard, Governor Nestos and others present at the conference at which state officials pledged co-operation with the corporation.

DUTY IS RAISED ON WHEAT

Goes Into Effect in 30 Days—Flour Duty Also Increased.

Washington.—Putting into operation for the first time the flexible provisions of the tariff act, President Coolidge has ordered increases of 12 cents a bushel in the duty on imports and 26 cents a hundred pounds on wheat flour, advancing these two rates, respectively, to 42 cents and $1.04.

At the same time the ad valorem rate of mill feeds has been decreased from 15 per cent as fixed in the law, to 7½ per cent.

The new rates, established by a proclamation issued Saturday by the president on the basis of information gathered at his direction by the tariff commission, will become effective 30 days from the date of his action and therefore will be operative at the begining of the usual April flood of wheat imports from Canada.

The wheat rate at present is 30 cents a bushel, and that on flour 78 cents a hundred pounds, but the commission found that in Canada "the principal competing country" in the cereal, wheat could be grown at a cost 42 cents a bushel lower than in the United States, and that 100 pounds of flour could be produced for $1.04 less. The difference between the costs of producing mill feeds in the two countries, however, amounted to only three-tenths of one cent a hundred pounds. The new $1.04 rate applies to semolina, crushed or cracked wheat, and similar products as well as flour.

MIDWAY BOY WINS CONTEST

Gertrude Roberts, Only Woman Student, Wins Second Place.

Fargo, N. D.—Ray Harding, of Midway, N. D., won first place in a field of contestants in the annual livestock judging contest held in the stock pavilion at the North Dakota Agricultural college. Gertrude Roberts, of Dawson, the only woman student in the school of agriculture at the college, won second place.

Harding received a total of 669 points of a possible 750, and Miss Roberts followed with a score of 654. Ten classes of livestock, including two classes each of beef cattle, dairy cattle, hogs, sheep, and horses were judged in the contest which was open to all students who cared to enter the competition. Judging started at 8 a.m.

William Freeman won third place in judging all classes with a score of 646. Following Freeman in order of rank were Harry Critchfield, R. V. Cripe, Peter Olasson, Leroy Lillie, Clyde Chilley, Martin Sebby, and Peter Jorgenson.

Cash Payment in Bonus Rejected.

Washington.—A proposal to make full cash payments an option in the soldiers' bonus bill was voted down, 13 to 12, by the house ways and means committee, which decided to limit payments to paid up insurance. A subcommittee went to work on the form of the insurance provision in an effort to expedite a report, while the committee itself took under consideration the proposal of Representative Oldfield Democrat, Arkansas, to include in the bill another provision giving veterans the option of cash payments.

The Red Lock

A Tale of the Flatwoods

—17—

"A man named Belden, and his sister, lives there," the girl said, following the direction of his upraised arm. "They're Kentucky mountain folks that jist moved in—they say the sister's quite pretty."

The preacher seemed to be studying the place, with its wild wealth of nature about it, his eyes straying at length from the cabin to its tumbled setting of cliffs and down along the opposite bluffs, mantled with half-sprung leaves, abloom with haw and dogwood and wild apple, until, as he twisted around in the saddle, the whole beautiful panorama of the narrow valley had passed in review before him back to the winding road by which they had entered.

As the girl followed his roving eyes, a black dead limb at the top of Eagle Oak, towering high above the quickening foliage, came into view. She raised her arm and pointed up and away to the lofty landmark.

"That's where the big gray eagle's be'n comin' every summer—sence white men first come t' the Flatwoods, I guess. Look—jist over the top o' that scrub poplar, stickin' up ag'nst that white cloud."

"I see it!" the man of books exclaimed, the simple gesture of pointing out to the distant landmark revealing the native grace that might still have been his but for the stooped and studious air that life had imposed upon him. "It stands out against the fluffy whiteness plain as a flagstaff."

"Nobody in the Flatwoods would think of harmin'—"

She stopped, with a low exclamation, for the woodsman had suddenly straightened in his saddle and had jerked his hand toward the cabin squatting against the bluffs up the hollow. The others followed the motion of his hand and sat staring.

Loge Belden's sister had appeared from behind the cabin and was running toward them. She had nearly reached the bushes that fringed what might be called the front of the yard, when Belden appeared in the open door. He threw up his hand and called out a word or two, which did not quite carry to the three riders.

The mountain girl stopped and hesitated; turned and went slowly back. Belden stood aside; she entered the door; Belden closed it.

Jack was watching the preacher. He saw his quick grip on the bridle rein; saw him stiffen in the saddle and glance uneasily about.

"Astonishing! Quite extraordinary!" escaped him as the tense brief drama closed.

"Mercy!" Texie exclaimed, "I never knowed she was—crazy."

"She ain't," the woodsman muttered.

The preacher glanced around at him; threw up his head and exploded his blarey laugh. It was a queer moment for a laugh, and a queer laugh for the moment.

"Not bad philosophy, that," he said. "People are not always as crazy as they—act."

That the preacher was acting, the woodsman fully believed, but the acting was just a shade overdone—a circumstance that could hardly escape such a man as Jack Warhope, particularly after the chance clues that had first set his suspicions going. Why he was acting and what part, the woodsman was not missing any chances to find out.

The three riders sat for some time looking toward the cabin in the pocket, Texie and the preacher discussing the astonishing drama that had flared up for its tense moment in the elbow of the hills.

But the drama evidently had but one act, and that act was closed. It seemed to the woodsman, as he covertly watched the preacher, lolling with overdone awkwardness in his saddle, that he showed just a shade of relief that it was closed.

The sun, a red warrior on the homeward trail, had journeyed far down the paling fastnesses of the sky; had ducked behind a huge cloud bank piled like a breastworks across the west. Presently, finding a loop-hole in the turreted cumuli, he glared back at the pursuing shadows, launched a shaft that fell spent and quivering upon Eagle run and shivered into glittering splinters upon the riffle.

Glum at the missed shaft, the red warrior took his eye from the loop-hole; drew farther back behind the massed fortifications; unstrung his bow. The pursuing shadows stole down the bluffs; dulled the water; dimmed the woods; waked the breeze and shook the wild apple twigs till the white blossoms snowed the grass symbol of the hopes of men that bloom, promise fruit [illegible]

The girl noticed the [illegible] the cabin [illegible] and down the [illegible] when [illegible] [illegible] a finger toward them, dropped her hand to the revolver at her belt and looked around at the woodsman. He caught the challenge in her eye, grinned and nodded.

With a quickness and skill that showed her mastery of the weapon, she plucked the revolver from its holster, raised it and fired. The first bullet cut a twig close to a walnut, the second brought one down.

Every horse there had been trained to stand under gun-fire. Rex merely pointed his ears sharply forward and stood to his tracks, but, even with such a firm saddle under him, the preacher flinched so at the first shot that he almost lost his balance. The second brought an effusive exclamation from him.

The slow eyes of the woodsman livened.

With a little wisp of a smile in her eyes she glanced around at him, and turned to the preacher.

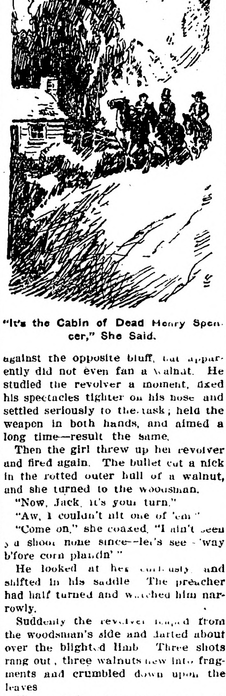
"Now, Mr. Hopkins, you can try y'ur new six-gun."

The preacher almost set up a breeze in the little valley with the gesticulations of his expressive hands; made a heavy draft on his ample stock of effusive exclamations, and finally fumbled the ivory-handled six-gun out of its holster.

He committed the blunder of cocking it with both thumbs—a bit of overacting that did not escape the man backing Graylock in apparent stolidness.

After a deal of coaching from Texie, the preacher poked the revolver forward and pulled the trigger. There was nothing to indicate that the bullet even came near the target. He threw his head back and exploded his raucous laugh. Rex had stood firm under the shot; he shied at the laugh.

The preacher brought the horse back alongside of Brownie and fired again—the bullet smacked somewhere against the opposite bluff, but apparently did not even fan a walnut. He studied the revolver a moment, fixed his spectacles tighter on his nose and settled seriously to the task; held the weapon in both hands, and aimed a long time—result the same.



"It's the Cabin of Dead Henry Spencer," She Said.

Then the girl threw up her revolver and fired again. The bullet cut a nick in the rotted outer hull of a walnut, and she turned to the woodsman.

"Now, Jack, it's your turn."

"Aw, I couldn't hit one of 'em."

"Come on," she coaxed, "I ain't seen ye shoot none since—let's see—'way b'fore corn plantin'."

He looked at her curiously and shifted in his saddle. The preacher had half turned and watched him narrowly.

Suddenly the revolver leaped from the woodsman's side and darted about over the blighted limb. Three shots rang out, three walnuts flew into fragments and crumbled down upon the leaves.

The preacher had straightened in the saddle and sat watching the wonderful marksmanship with an eye that suddenly kindled to flint and flame; but as the third walnut shattered to dust and crumbs, the stoop came back to his shoulders, the air of dried studiousness to his face.

The girl turned to the woodsman [illegible] her fine eyes alive.

"You could 'a' got it [illegible]"

The light [illegible] brown eyes blazed a response in the gray; slow smile crawled across his bold features.

"It's ag'in the law to shoot [illegible] with an [illegible] with a serious [illegible] dealing as the [illegible] flask a [illegible] in the back [illegible] [illegible] abilit [illegible] squatt [illegible] yards back from the Eagle Hollow road—the uncanny hovel that the woodsman had gazed down upon from the top of the bluff that morning while watching the swallows dart in and out of its ruined chimney.

"That place is enough to give one the—creeps," was the preacher's comment as he reined in Rex beside Brownie.

The girl turned in her saddle and sat for some time looking the place over—the gate now long unused, its hinges black with rust; the rank weeds and sprouts growing close up to the sagging door; the single small front window now yellow with clay that the rains had washed from between the logs; the rude clapboards of the roof warped, loosened, displaced—the crumbling remnants of what had once been a home, now desolate and forsaken under its somber canopy of trees.

"It's the cabin of dead Henry Spencer," she said, "where he murdered his wife and infant daughter with 'is ax one bitter cold night when 'e was drunk, and then wandered out and froze t' death in the snow."

"I've heard the story—from your—ah—brother—and so this is the place?"

"This is the place."

"But not all the story—"

He glanced around at her quizzically.

"No, not all"—she spoke slowly; her words half a question—"they say he—comes back."

The preacher's teeth gleamed white through his heavily bearded lips; his sarcastic exclamation point of a laugh jarred the silence of the placid valley.

"Why, Miss Texie, this is the Nineteenth century, not the Fourteenth."

"Yes,"—in red embarrassment—"but that's what they say."

He looked at her again, with that same half-cynical expression that came so easily to his face, as he gathered up the reins.

With the mountain girl's hurried warning still fresh in his mind, the woodsman glanced covertly about him as they rode on—something he had been constantly doing since first entering the hollow. As he did so, the uncanny cabin happened to come again under his eyes. A sight met them that for the instant shook even his iron composure—a face at the window was peering at them through the clay-smudged pane.

The face ducked out of sight, and, without so much as a flick of the bridle rein—precisely as if he had seen nothing at all—the woodsman rode on. He glanced at the preacher, but apparently he had not seen the face. If he had he gave no sign.

CHAPTER XIV

The Scrape of a Match.

While grooming Graylock in his stall that evening Jack Warhope thought of the face that had appeared for its startling instant at the smudged window of Henry Spencer's unhallowed cabin. As a matter of fact, he had been thinking of it ever since riding out of the jaws of the hollow.

He hung up the curry comb and stepped to the barn door. The sun glared red through a slit in the cloudbank, and still cleared the trees on the distant foothills by a yard—enough for the purpose he contemplated.

A moment later he was climbing the rough path that led to the uplands. Pausing, to search critically the woods in every direction, he then stole away toward the ill-reputed cabin of the dead woodchopper.

The sun just edged the treetops when he came opposite the place. Down in the bottom of the hollow the shadows lay heavy, but the light still touched the uncanny hovel squatted against the hillside.

Stealing through the bushes and brambles, he crept up to the place under cover of the fallen oak, with its festoons of wild cucumber vines. Near the corner most densely hidden by the vines a chink had dropped out from between the logs, leaving a narrow crevice. Shading his eyes, he peeped within. The cabin was empty.

Hugging the wall closely, he crept around to the sagging door; softly pushed it open. His eyes lifted at what he saw—an old box on end near what had once been the fireplace an empty whisky bottle on the box, with a lamp standing beside it ready to light, a blanket ready to hang over the smudged window.

The dusty floor was covered with tracks—man tracks—one man's. Stepping so as carefully to set his feet in the tracks he entered the cabin and closed the door.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

SCALING HEIGHTS

YOU may often be filled with wonder at the apparent ease with which some of your friends, of no pronounced ability, climb steadily and unerringly to the heights.

To your mind they are deficient in mentality and power of endurance, yet, in spite of your doubts, they keep mounting surely day by day, brushing aside difficulties with no observable effort and holding fast to their places.

Opposing forces do not daunt or discourage them.

They plan and execute. They refrain from boasting, yet within their hearts there is an ironlike resolution to stay in the fight until they meet victory.

Often they are footsore, exhausted in body and spirit, but never are they in a mood to admit defeat. They know quite as well as you that their talents are limited and their faults many. It is this conscious knowledge of their frailties that makes them persist without pause in their commendable effort.

While you are having jolly times at night among the bright lights, they are seeking in the solitude of their room the precious nuggets of wisdom, digging deep below the surface.

They have become students of biography, following seriously the blazed trails of the noble men and women who only a few years ago passed over the highway to fame and left their signboards at the fatal crossroads, where all later travelers may stop, read and gather new courage.

It must be a shallow sort of human being indeed who cannot see the value of such observation and study.

But whatever it may be with regard to the frivolous and fun-loving, this idea of following step by step the rugged paths of the great, striving to comprehend their emotions and to emulate their examples, is not only profitable to the earnest student but extraordinarily inspiring.

What dullard seeking improvement fails to find encouragement in reading of such men as Washington and Lincoln?

Who does not glow with inspiration when he beholds blind Milton groping his way to the heights sublime?

Those who cry "impossible" are those who need most to familiarize themselves with the trials of the immortals who overcame and won imperishable crowns.

Has Anyone Laughed At You Because—

By ETHEL R. PEYSER

You use perfume?

You evidently don't use enough. Perfume is a lovely thing in moderation. The flowers profit by it, the world profits by it. Why shouldn't you add to the beauty of things too? Of course when perfume covers a deficiency of the sanitary code and when it annoys people, then it is the time to put on the stop code! Perfume is lovely when it is, but baleful when it "ain't."

SO

Your get-away here is:

That they only laugh and don't complain.

SHOW THE RIGHT

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

I RECOLLECT Old Henry Smith,
Remember Hiram Brown;
No better folks to neighbor with
There are in any town.
They hated sinners, hated sin,
Idolatry, and doubt;
When things were wrong they started in
At once to point them out.

And yet there was a difference
In Henry Smith and Hi:
Both had uncommon common sense,
And couldn't stand a lie;
Old Henry hated good and strong
Whatever wasn't white;
But Hi not only saw the wrong
But also saw the right.

Old Henry was the kind who pass
Upon the other side;
But, fallin' man or fallen lass,
Old Hiram always tried
Not only sinners to condemn
And scripture to repeat,
But tried to lend a hand to them
To help them to their feet.

Well, lots of us are Henrys, yes,
And some are Hirams, too.
Condemnin' sinners ain't, I guess,
Not all there is to do,
But lend a hand, and help along,
And do your little mite—
Not only try to show the wrong
But try to show the right.

MISS STAR

"WHAT a charming person Miss Star is, and what interesting things she has done!" one of her guests said to Mrs. George the day after her dinner party.

"Miss Star told me all about knowing this explorer who's just come back from Greenland, and described some of the things he told her. I've never enjoyed a dinner more."

Mrs. George of course repeated this conversation to Miss Star on their next meeting. Miss Star looked confused. "Oh, ah, yes," she said vaguely, "I went to the illustrated lecture the other night."

Then Mrs. George forgot her impression of discrepancy. It was a month before she saw Miss Star again. Miss Star was drooping about, decoratively watching a tennis tournament. Mrs. George asked why she wasn't playing, and Miss Star replied, "I don't wish to alarm my friends; but the doctor as good as told me this morning that I could never play again, Heart," she whispered mysteriously, "I've got to be very careful for a long while!"

Mrs. George was really concerned; she spent the afternoon making herself useful and delightful to poor Miss Star, who was so good looking. She was surprised, therefore, the following day to find Miss Star out on the courts as usual.

"Oh, I guess the doctor was mistaken," was Miss Star's somewhat unconvincing explanation.

A month later Miss Star was asked to come informally to family supper with the Georges. The evening passed pleasantly and quietly. Not long afterward an acquaintance asked Mrs. George about her banquet for a certain feted foreigner—Miss Star, who had been present, had described the occasion to the acquaintance as very brilliant. And Miss Star's subsequent explanation to Mrs. George that the acquaintance must have misunderstood somehow didn't hold water.

After that, when Miss Star talked about her admirers and her engagements and her adventures, Mrs. George deducted a large percentage, and then accepted the remainder tentatively. So she got on with a good deal of amusement and no disillusionments.

Then one day Miss Star told her that she was going away to live, that she was leaving in a week, and that probably they would not see her again. No one believed the news, Mrs. George least of all. She felt a good deal of attachment for Miss Star, and was glad that she did not have to accept this announcement for fact. Having forgotten the incident she stopped one day to call. Miss Star's house was empty. Her habit of so dramatizing every situation that people discounted everything she said, had left her farewell performance without an audience.

The Dairy Cow

Having planned your crops for the coming year in such a way as to provide ample feed for your milk cows, you should turn your attention to the study of the dairy business.

The farmer is just as much of a business man as the doctor, lawyer, merchant or banker, and as such should allot himself a certain amount of time in the study of his business. Dairying is one of the most essential parts of your farming problems. Does your milk cow give you all the returns that she is capable of producing, could she better herself with different feeding, does she freshen at the right time of the year when you get the highest price for your butter fat, have you any boarders in your herd and if so what are you doing to remedy this?

This is a sample of the many questions which comes up in dairying. Many ideas of value can be found in the farm papers on the dairy subject. One thing should be kept in mind at all times and that is "Dairying does not become a part of you in one year, it takes time and patience to develop a good milk strain herd." It therefore becomes necessary that our farmers begin with this work at once. You have many examples of successful dairymen in the Holt territory. Feel free to discuss milk cows with your neighbor, with the men who are making dairying a success. These men will be glad to give you the benefit of what they know thru practical experence. We need to co-operate with each other. This is a part of the making of a good, wholesome community spirit.

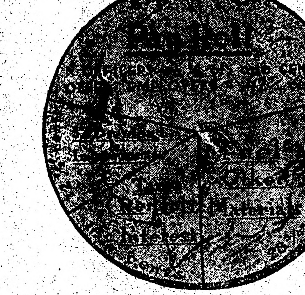
GREAT NORTHERN EXPLAINS HOW ITS DOLLAR IS SPENT

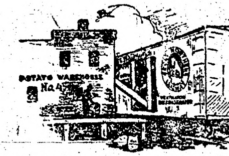


The diagram shows what became of each dollar received by the Great Northern Railway from its patrons in 1923.

The largest item of expenditure was the payroll. The Great Northern has over thirty thousand employees; 42½ cents out of each dollar received was paid to them; about one quarter of a cent out of each dollar was paid to the officers.

Fuel and other materials cost 28¾ cents; taxes, rentals, and interest amounted to 16¼ cents, and the 5 per cent dividend and improvements accounted for 12½ cents.

Great Northern's operating cost has increased 82 per cent since 1915, while its charge to the public for transportation has increased but 35 per cent. Compared with 1915, the annual return to its owners decreased 28 per cent; the much larger increase in operating cost than in charge for transportation having so reduced net income as to necessitate lowering the dividend from $7 to $5 per share.



The Great Northern is hauling thousands of carloads of seed potatoes from the Northwest to the South. Seed potatoes move first to the Gulf States and then as the Season advances, to the districts farther north. Nearly three million bushels have been shipped since January first.

Catarrhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure catarrhal deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Many cases of deafness are caused by catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure acts thru the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Catarrhal Deafness that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Circulars free. All Druggists, 75c.

Is your DeLaval separator in good running order?

IF it isn't, then you may be losing butter-fat and shortening the life of the machine; and ninety-nine times out of a hundred it isn't the fault of the machine but due to the fact that it needs attention, adjustment, cleaning, or the replacement of some part.

Bring in your De Laval Separator to us and we will put it in first-class running order. Bring in the complete machine, and in order to save expense clean out the oil chamber and gears with kerosene or boiling water. You can do this just as well as we can.

ASK RESIGNATION OF ROOSEVELT

Sinclair Indicted On 10 Counts Referring to Specific Questions

Washington.—Harry F. Sinclair of Teapot Dome, was indicted by a federal grand jury here Monday on contempt charges growing out of his refusal to testify before the senate oil committee.

The indictment was on 10 counts, each referring to a specific question asked the oil operator when he was last before the committee. The grand jurors held that these questions, all of which Sinclair refused to answer were "pertinent to the matters and questions then under inquiry before the said committee."

The section was the first grand jury move to develop from the oil inquiry and is expected eventually to result in a supreme court ruling on the broad question of the authority of congress to summon and question witnesses in investigations like those now in progress. This authority Sinclair has questioned.

Sinclair is not in Washington, but his attorneys have indicated that he probably would come to the capital without compulsion to answer to the charges against him.

Demand for removal from office of Theodore Roosevelt, assistant secretary of the navy, was renewed in the senate Monday by Senator Dill, Democrat, Washington.

Declaring the assistant secretary was far more culpable than was his superior, Secretary Denby, in the leasing of the naval oil reserves, the Washington senator introduced a resolution declaring it to be the sense of the senate that President Coolidge should call for his resignation.

The resolution charges Mr. Roosevelt with having been a director of the Sinclair Oil company previous to entering the government service and stresses that he ordered marines to remove oil claimants from the Teapot Dome reserve.

GRAND JURY WOULDN'T INDICT

Charge False Says Bank Examiner Semingson.

Williston, N. D.—It became known Monday, following the issuance Saturday of a warrant for the arrest of Gilbert Semingson of Bismarck state bank examiner, on a charge of failing to perform his duty as bank examiner in respect to the Williams County State bank of this city, on complaint of Usher L. Burdick, that the charges against Mr. Semingson were fully presented to the grand jury which adjourned last week and that that body voted against an indictment.

Following the failure of the grand jury to indict Mr. Semingson, Mr. Burdick, who was permitted to present the allegations to the grand jury, made demands upon State's Attorney F. W. McGuiness for a warrant which was granted by the county prosecutor.

Mr. McGuiness announced that it is his intention to handle the case alone. He was informed by Sheriff Carl Erickson that the latter has been told that Mr. Semingson will voluntarily come to Williston to answer to the charge.

Issuance of the warrant for Mr. Semingson adds another chapter to the series of sensational developments occurring here during the past few days, all more or less the outgrowth of the action of the grand jury in indicting a total of 24 individuals, 16 of whom were bank officials, in addition to accusing the entire board of county commissioners of being "grossly incompetent."

WILL NOT LEAVE THE RUHR

Old Policies Reaffirmed As New Cabinet Is Introduced.

Paris. — Indications that Premier Poincare has lost the sympathies of many of the majority which supported his previous government were seen in the chamber of deputies on the occasion of his declaration of policy for the reconstituted cabinet.

He reaffirmed all the policies of the late government and said French soldiers would remain in the Ruhr until France was paid.

There was lack of warmth, with approval only in rare exceptions. Repeatedly the premier was interrupted with manifestations of mirth, surprise or disappointment as the deputies compared his declarations with the personnel of the cabinet, which includes several opponents of the late ministry.

The Republican policies practiced in the formation of the new cabinet, M Poincare declared, had as their object pursuance of the international policies of the former government, and pursuance also of the economic and financial policies which had been approved by a majority of the chamber.

Bills Nearing Final Stages.

Washington.—The senate finance committee on Monday began its final steps on its work on both the revenue and bonus bills, centering attention on the cost of the bonus measure and the amount of revenue the tax bill must raise. Committee leaders plan to get both bills before the senate this week. Secretary Mellon has been invited to appear again before the committee to present his views on the estate and gift taxes and other sections of the revenue bill.

26 LIVES LOST IN WEEK-END STORM

Tornadoes, Blizzards and Windstorms Sweep Country--Property Damage Large

Chicago.—March roared out of the middle west like the proverbial lion following general storms of Friday night and Saturday extending from the Ohio to the Mississippi valleys which cost upwards of a score of lives, more than 100 injuries, and property damage estimated at hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Dead in the wake of the storm included eight killed in a tornado at Shawnee, Okla., four known dead in southeastern Missouri as the result of a wind storm and reports that four others had perished, a boy killed by lightning in Kansas, two flood casualties at Pittsburgh, three men reported killed when a railroad bridge at Cumberland, Md., collapsed after being inundated by flood waters and four trainmen reported killed when a freight train went through a bridge weakened by high water near Newark, Ohio.

The storm in various sections assumed the proportions of a tornado and elsewhere manifested itself by driving snow and hail, high winds with falling temperatures marked its progress.

Damage was widespread wherever the storm struck. In southeastern Missouri livestock valued at thousands of dollars was killed while three little towns in Kentucky were reported destroyed by a wind storm. At Alton, Ill., estimated wind and rain had damaged the city $150,000, while reports of heavy property loss came from many cities in Arkansas. Damage to crops was feared in some sections of South Dakota and Minnesota because of the low temperatures.

When the flood stage expected throughout the upper Ohio valley, indications were that property damage there might be heavy before another 24 hours.

The storm played havoc with wire communication facilities, some sections of the northwest being practically cut off for a time with the outside world as the result of a terrific sleet storm there. The press associations again resorted to radio to maintain communications for a time with Minneapolis, St. Paul, and other northwest cities.

WARRANT OUT FOR EXAMINER

Semingson Is Charged With Failing in His Duty.

Williston, N. D.—On a complaint filed by Usher L. Burdick, with the approval of States Attorney F. W. McGuiness, Judge John T. Austin, in justice court, Saturday issued a warrant for the arrest of State Bank Examiner Gilbert Semingson of Bismarck. The charge is failure to perform his duty as bank examiner in respect to the Williams County State Bank of this city, alleging that he did wilfully, unlawfully, and knowingly permit and direct the bank to operate contrary to the law when the bank was insolvent.

In connection with this arrest, subpoenas have been issued for Thomas Hall, secretary of state, and members of the state banking board, who is asked to bring records of the board here for the Semingson hearing set for Wednesday, April 2, and for C. R. Greene, manager of the Bank of North Dakota, who is asked to bring to the hearing the so-called voting trust agreement under which it is alleged that the stockholders of the Williams County State bank turned their stock over to Semingson, Ed Schulerberg representing the First National bank of Minneapolis, Thorberg of the First National bank of St. Paul, and Bates of the Buffalo Trust company of Buffalo, N. Y., under the terms of which these four as trustees obtained complete control of the local bank and of acts of its officers between December 13, 1920, and January 9, 1923.

CAPITAL IS CENTER OF FIGHT

Revolutionists Have Best of Battle for Tegucigalpa.

San Salvador.—Revolutionaries and federal forces are battling for possession of Tegucigalpa, capital of Honduras, according to a message from Toncontin, general headquarters of the united revolutionaries. The battle extends over an eight kilometer front and thus far has been in favor of the revolutionaries led by General Gregorio Ferrera, the government forces being driven back to the city proper. A dispatch from Guatemala City says that soldiers at San Perdo Sula, Honduras, were looting and burning the town and committing other excesses, and that the residents had formed a home guard to protect the women and children.

Bank Reopened by Credit Agency.

Bismarck, N. D.—The State Bank of Wales, Cavalier county, was re-opened Saturday, according to Gilbert Semingson, state bank examiner. The bank was re-opened with the aid of the new $10,000,000 Agricultural Credit Corporation, which has been formed to give relief in the northwest, and after the bank had complied with stringent regulations of the state guaranty fund commission. It has $25,000 capital, $6,000 surplus, and about $200,000 deposits. William Dew is president.

A Tale Of The Flatwoods

CHAPTER XV

—20—

Six-Gun Persuasion.

In the church of which he had long been the chief support the funeral of the dead money-lender was held.

In spite of his grasping and domineering ways, the rugged worth of the man, to say nothing of his wealth, had made him widely known. Now joined to this was the mystery of his death. People came from far and near, and the church was packed, while many were forced to remain outside, grouped about the open door and windows.

The Reverend Caleb Hopkins officiated.

It was the first time the Flatwoods had heard him preach, because of the fact that the day before, though Sunday, the church had remained closed out of respect for its leading member, sleeping his last sleep at the red-roofed cottage.

Standing well back among the silent group at the door, Jack Warhope watched the preacher go through his ordeal. Nerve he must have had, or he never could have carried it through. Behind the piously solemn mask of his face there doubtless raged a terrific tempest, but it did not seem to retard his flow of thought or mar his oratory. Little enough can be said over a dead man, at the best, but that little he so clothed with artistry that the like of it had never been heard in the Flatwoods. Each man writes his own epitaph; Simon Colin had written his. That was the basis of his remarks. He neither eulogized nor blamed—and in that he showed the sense of a wiser man.

Most of the crowd lingered about the cemetery for a time, even after the last solemn rites had been performed, as if slow to realize that a man so prominent, so long a power in the life of the little community, had with such suddenness dropped that prominence and power for the mean and voiceless walls of the grave.

Immediately on the death of the old banker, the preacher had, for the sake of appearances, moved to the parsonage. He had returned from the funeral and had been for some time pacing back and forth, or fidgeting restlessly in his chair, in the cool front room upstairs—the former minister's study—when he was very much surprised to see Jack Warhope ride up on Graylock, dismount, throw the bridle rein over the hitch-rack and come striding up the yard.

He sprang from his chair, opened one of his satchels, snatched out the holster with the ivory-handled revolver sticking in it; hurriedly buckled it on under his vest, where it was concealed by the somber frock coat, and tiptoed back to his chair.

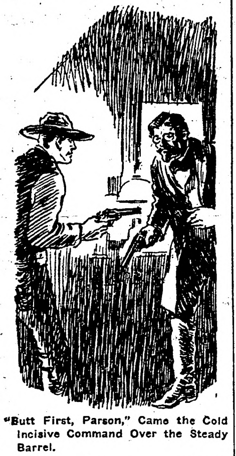
"Come in."

The knob turned, with a force and decision that somehow suggested the power of the hand laid upon it, and Jack Warhope entered; carefully closed the door; stood coolly looking the other over.

The preacher slowly rose from his chair; slipped his hand down along the front of his frock coat and loosened it against his side.

The motion was not lost upon the woodsman. His eyes had narrowed to slits in his face; his lips were tightened to a straight hard line. He dropped a quick look at the preacher's feet.



"Butt First, Parson," Came the Cold Incisive Command Over the Steady Barrel.

"Ther' ain't another pair o' boot heels in the Flatwoods like them, Mr.—Hopkins."

The brows of the other lifted in polite surprise.

"I found the print o' them heels on the dusty floor boards there by Pap Simon's desk, where they couldn't 'a' be'n made till after the rug was drug back."

The preacher peered at him through his huge spectacles; a subtle premonition of what was coming reached him.

"I may have stepped there when I came out of my room. That was a most distressing scene, Mr. Warhope."

"But the board was scratched where the heel had slipped and dug into it under strain. How come y'u slipped?"

The affable, benevolent smile weakened; the premonition of what was coming deepened.

"Really, you must not expect me to remember every small detail of so distressing a moment, Mr. Warhope."

"That trick of removin' the brimstone from the caps on the shotgun was what I call downright smart. It took a good head t' think o' that. But ain't it queer that a master hand like that would unlock the door after the murder, instid of b'fore, and leave blood on the key?"

The studious pucker around the eyes was fast smoothing out, and the man was breathing fast. His hand was fumbling the lapel of the frock coat and slowly stealing down the side.

"What do you mean? You surely are not accusing me of the murder of my old friend?"

"I mean," rasped the woodsman, his slits of eyes on the hand stealing down the edge of the frock coat, "that night b'fore last I laid in the little park and hear'd what was said b'tween you and Black Bogus."

Like lightning the creeping hand darted under the frock coat. But quick as he was, the ivory-handled revolver was not quite out of the holster when the heavy six-gun of the woodsman leaped up and covered him.

"Butt first, Parson," came the cold, decisive command over the steady barrel.

Hopkins stood just as the gun had caught him—motionless; poised on the flat of one foot and the toes of the other; his body slightly crouched forward. Reckless though he was, a man who held the world at bay, and keen-witted as a dog fox, he slowly relaxed the pose and grudgingly handed over the revolver—the ivory butt first.

The woodsman snatched it; removed the caps from the tubes and stuck it back into the holster under the frock coat.

"And now I'll jist trouble y'u f'r that parlor-door key."

Hopkins scowled; whipped a black look at the steady muzzle of the six-gun; dragged the key out of his pocket and passed it over.

"No, I ain't accusin' you of the murder," the woodsman went on, as cool and collected as if there had been no interruption, at the same time dropping the key into his pocket. "I'm doin' y'u the honor t' think y'u hain't quite fell that low—bein' y'u didn't want 'is death, nohow. No. y'u wanted 'im t' live, so's you could slip out all the good bills y'u dast every night and leave counterf'it bills in their place.

"You'd jist got through changin' the money that night when 'e rushed out on y'u. He tried t' shoot—both bar'ls—but you fixed the caps so's they wouldn't go off. Then foller'd the struggle, and no doubt you was bad flustered when 'e fell back acrosst the chair, dead of heart disease. Then y'u unlocked the door t' head off suspicion, but y'u must 'a' be'n flustered r' y'u wouldn't 'a' left blood on the key."

Hopkins was bowed forward, staring hard through his glasses. The woodsman glanced at him.

"Ther's jist one p'int I ain't quite clear on—did 'e know it was you?"

The question caught the other off guard.

"My God, yes! Oh, his dead face there in the coffin—in the black night it's before me."

He shuddered; gripped his hands till the knuckles turned white; stiffened after a moment and pulled himself together.

"Mr.—Caleb Hopkins"—a peculiar twist had slid into his voice that brought a quick look from the man addressed—"I 'low y'u didn't aim t' kill Pap Simon, but the Flatwoods ain't big enough any more t' hold you and me both. The Milford stage from down the river is leavin' the post office f'r the city in a few minutes. You're goin' t' be a passenger—and y'u ain't comin' back."

Hopkins winced; involuntarily dropped his hand to the butt of his six-gun, before remembering it was useless; snapped out a muttered curse and stood glaring about him.

A grin, hard and dangerous, crawled out of the woodsman's eyes and twisted his face.

"I 'low we'll be startin' now," he rasped.

Hopkins swore again an artistic little run of oaths that the Flatwoods call "split hic'ry"—stamped across the floor; picked up his two satchels and brought them back to the desk.

"Empty 'em," the hard voice commanded.

"D—d if I will," the other snarled, his eyes like live coals in his face.

"Y'u will, 'r y'u'll face Jerry Brown—and I ain't carin' a dern which."

The other glared around; appeared to meditate some desperate move; seemed to realize his helplessness; finally slammed the satchels on the desk with a snarl and snatched out their contents.

One of them contained some clothing and a few personal belongings; the other a number of thick bundles of money—real money; the face of Hopkins left no doubt of that very important fact.

The woodsman's eyes widened a trifle.

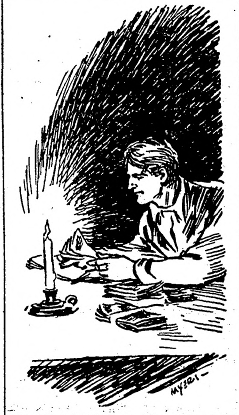
"Lord, parson, y'u cut some swath—f'r a preacher! How much did yu' have when y'u struck the Flatwoods—real money?"

"Five hundred."

"I'm takin' y'ur word f'r that. Peel off that many and put the rest back."

Hopkins picked up one of the bundles; counted off bills—all tens and twenties—to the amount of five hundred dollars; and dumped the rest with the other bundles back in the satchel.

The long arm of the woodsman unexpectedly stabbed across the desk and snatched the satchel. Hopkins whirled to spring at him; faced the muzzle of the steady six-gun; flinched back.



They Totaled Exactly Three Thousand Five Hundred Eighty Dollars.

With exasperating deliberation the woodsman stored away the bundles of bills in the capacious pockets of his hunting blouse; snapped the satchel shut, dropped it to the floor and slid it toward the other with his foot.

"You'll go ahead o' me downstairs," he directed, crisp and cold. "Make whatever excuse y'u please t' Mis' Mason, 'r anybody else we run onto. We'll stand out there at the hitch-rack till the stage comes along. When it does, you'll board it, jist like nothin' had happened. I'm aimin' t' trail y'u on Graylock. Make one false move, and —the next move will be mine."

He backed to the stair door, threw it open and, with a slight sweep of the revolver, stood aside.

The eyes of Hopkins behind his glasses were like the eyes of a trapped viper, but he dared not disobey the command. He strode through the door. The woodsman dropped the six-gun back in its holster and followed.

Mrs. Mason was at the back of the house when they came down, so they escaped encountering her. The same good luck held at the hitch-rack, for the stage was just pulling out from the post office as they reached the gate. The woodsman waved his hand; the driver drew up; Hopkins stepped aboard and it rattled away.

* * * * * * *

Twilight had put the woods to sleep when Jack Warhope rode back to the homestead from trailing the stage. He groomed his horse, foul with sweat and sand; fed him and went straight to his cabin. Before lifting the latch he stopped a moment and, with a slow sweep of his eyes, sifted the gathering shadows.

The foothills away across on the plains were already hiding under the sable wings of the south; a sinuous lighter streak marked where the river rimmed the bottoms; the red flare of the spent day faintly spangled the west; the woods breathed softly; hardly a pulse stirred the apple blossoms; out of the silence came the tinkle of the spring under the cliff lapping down the sulphur-stained gutter on its way to the barn-lot and cattle pens.

He filled his lungs full of the serene evening; entered the door; closed and fastened it with unusual care; drew the blinds of the two small windows and lighted his candle.

What to do with the bundles of money? A key to the dead banker's safe he did not have, even if he could have found the chance to open it and put them back. He took the thick bundles out of his blouse pockets and began to count them. They totaled exactly three thousand five hundred eighty dollars—one hundred seven twenties and one hundred forty-four tens. The woodsman's eyes lifted at the amount. Such a sum in five nights—it showed what Hopkins might have done in time.

Italian Clover Is Not Favored

Not Sufficiently Resistant to Cold Weather and Is Susceptible to Disease.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Because Italian red clover is not sufficiently resistant to cold weather and is particularly susceptible to disease, Dr. A. J. Pieters and Mr. Edgar Brown of the United States Department of Agriculture, addressing the meeting of the Wholesale Grass Seed Dealers at Chicago, recommended that no red clover seed of Italian origin be imported and that in certain sections where the winters are severe, no foreign-grown red clover seed be used. Observations and careful tests made in many parts of the country by the department and state experiment stations have provided ample proof that these recommendations are justified.

Wherever Italian red clover seed has been tried, with the exception of the Pacific Northwest, the result has been low yields or total failures in most cases, and when unusually favorable conditions produced a fairly satisfactory first crop there was little second growth. Where winter conditions are not so severe or where the snow covering has afforded protection against the cold the other foreign red clover has done fairly well, and because the supply of home-grown seed is not sufficient it is necessary to use it.

Yields Compared.

Actual tests at a number of stations show how seed from various sources produces in the United States. At Ashland, Wis., red clover from Chile produced a first cutting of 3.77 tons per acre; French seed produced 2.9 tons; Bohemian, 3.2 tons; and home-grown seed from Idaho, Tennessee, Wisconsin, Ohio and Oregon averaged 2.83 tons. Here the heavy snows' covering reduced the effect of the severe winter. At Spooner, Wis., where conditions were more severe last year, the Chilean seed produced 1.94 tons; the French, 1.94; Bohemian, 1.97, and United States seed 2.19 tons per acre. At Marshfield, Wis., the yields of all lots were less, Chilean producing 1.6 tons, French 1.5, Bohemian 1.4 and United States 1.6 tons. At East Lansing, Mich., the Michigan seed produced 2.46 tons, other United States seed yielded 2.18; Chilean produced 2.52 tons; French 2.25, and Bohemian 1.94 tons. The clover grown from Michigan seed made a stronger seed growth than any of the others, although the European, with the exception of the Italian, did very well.

At College Park, Md., Chilean seed made 2.82 tons; seed from Ohio produced 2.94 tons; French seed 2.46; Bohemian 2.08; Maryland seed 2.42; and Tennessee 2.22. At Blacksburg, Va., Chilean seed produced 1.57 tons; French 1.35; Bohemian 1.19; and a number of lots from different parts of the United States averaged 1.59 tons. At the State college, Pennsylvania, the foreign clovers, except the Italian, outyielded that grown from American seed, but whether or not this was due to some unusual circumstance has not yet been determined.

Results have shown that in most cases American red clover seed is more satisfactory than foreign-grown seed, but the crop grown here is insufficient to meet the demand. An average annual importation of 10,000,000 pounds is needed to make up the deficiency of red and alsike seed. If all foreign seed were poor the department would not recommend its importation even in the face of the great shortage, but tests have shown that certain strains do well here in certain sections where the weather is not too severe. There is great need to increase the production of clover seed in this country

Much Seed Imported.

It was brought out before the seed dealers that between July 1, 1923 and January 15, 1924, more than 6,700,000 pounds of red clover seed had been imported, and that nearly 300,000 pounds of it had been brought from Italy. In addition, about 200,000 of the seed shipped from other parts of Europe is thought to have originated in Italy. Considering the known and suspected Italian seed, it seems that about 8 per cent of the imported red clover seed is of the kind which will not produce a satisfactory crop except, possibly, in the Pacific Northwest The seed importation act administered by the Department of Agriculture, makes certain requirements as to purity, presence of weed seeds and vitality, but these requirements do not make it possible to bar this seed which is germinable enough and clean enough, but not adapted to our conditions

The representatives of the department called the attention of the seed dealers to the prevalence of anthracnose disease of red clover, which is sometimes severe from Washington, D. C., to Tennessee and northern Alabama. It affects the second crop of all clovers, foreign and domestic and even the first crop may be destroyed. There are resistant strains and it is important that they be developed and the seed put on the commercial market. At present most of our northern grown domestic seed is as liable to this disease as the imported strains with the exception of the Italian, which is the most susceptible

At present the only protection for the farmer is to insist on information as to the source of the red clover seed offered for sale and in buying only from reliable firms and organizations. If Italian seed is sold as domestic or under some other name much harm may be done, both to the farmers and the seed trade.

Chickens and Eggs Help Improve Home

Poultry Products Favored to Increase Incomes.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Farm women of Charleston, county, S. C., sold 5,441 pounds of poultry and 10,388 dozen eggs during 1923, as compared with 600 pounds of market poultry and 1,009 dozen eggs in 1920. This large increase in three years was accomplished, on the part of extension workers co-operatively directed by the United States Department of Agriculture and the state agricultural colleges, by constantly emphasizing the value of pure bred poultry and of the need of grading all products. The home demonstration agent rendered all possible assistance in the marketing of these products, but the good results are attributed largely to the fact that at every meeting held, no matter what subject was discussed, poultry was advised as a means of increasing the home income. Out of 138 women enrolled in home demonstration work, 70 improved their flocks by the purchase of standard-bred cockerels or baby chicks.

In addition to selling poultry, 3,337 pounds of butter and fresh vegetables, amounting to $2,308.50, were sold in the county. The money earned by the women in these ways was divided into three portions. One part was laid away for a rainy day, one part was spent in supplying special needs of the children or for food or clothing, and the third part was spent for home improvements. Among these improvements, 23 houses were remodeled by having additions, new floors, or new lighting systems. Eleven women bought gasoline irons, two made wheel trays, and four bought kitchen cabinets; 15 planted fruit trees and 138 planted local trees and shrubs to beautify the home grounds.

Alfalfa Hay Tends to Insure Strong Litters

Alfalfa hay fed to sows during the winter months tends to insure healthy litters of pigs. Alfalfa is rich in protein and minerals and furnishes these elements at low cost. There are three ways in which it can be fed: Let the sows eat it from the stack, feed it in a suitable rack, or add about five or ten pounds of chopped alfalfa or alfalfa leaves to 100 pounds of a grain mixture. The leaves can be gathered up from the barn floor where the hay is pitched from the mow.

Some suggested rations suitable for a 250-pound sow are as follows: Alfalfa hay, five or six ears of corn, one-fourth pound of tankage; alfalfa hay, two or three pounds of corn; alfalfa hay, three or four pounds of grain, one gallon of skim milk. For young gilts the proportion of tankage to corn or grain may be increased.

Whole Milk Superior for Fattening Young Calves

There is nothing quite equal to whole milk for fattening young calves. This practice provides veal of the highest quality. If one cow does not supply enough milk to give the calf all that it will consume, then two nurse cows may be provided. Make sure that the calf is confined in a box stall heavily bedded and darkened. This will prompt him to lie down a greater part of the time, and it is inactivity of the muscles, coupled with lots of milk, that makes veal of the best quality.

Comfortable Pig Gains

A fall pig that weighs 150 pounds along in February that is eating a pound and a half a day out in the open, will just about hold his own in weight. The same pig, in a warm, sheltered place, that is stimulated thereby to eat six pounds of feed, will make about a pound and a half gain per day. In the former case the pound and a half of feed, productively speaking, is lost because no gain is made from it; in the latter case the six pounds produces a pound and a half gain.

MAKES DARING RESCUE OF GIRL FROM AIRPLANE

Aerial Stunt Performer Is Saved From Death While Thousands Watch.

Houston, Tex.—A rescue in midair saved Miss Rosalia Gordon of Houston from death while more than 5,000 horrified spectators gazed skyward.

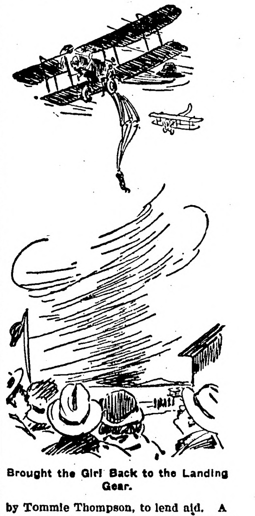
Miss Gordon, an aerial stunt performer, was attempting a parachute leap. When she leaped the upper end of the parachute became entangled with apparatus of the plane and left her suspended 20 feet below.

Diavolo, acrobatic airman, climbed out of the fuselage and hand under hand let himself down to the landing gears. With the inadequate footing, he was unable to drag her back to safety.

Kept Plane in Air.

C. H. Pangborn, the pilot, kept the plane in the air, realizing that an attempt to land would have meant instant death to the girl.

Freddie Loon, a Houston aviator, went up in another machine, piloted by Tommie Thompson, to lend aid. A mile from the ground he changed from Thompson's plane to Pangborn's machine. He then worked his way to the landing gear, but even he and Diavolo could not pull the girl back to the machine.



Brought the Girl Back to the Landing Gear.

Loon then mounted to the passenger's seat, and, using the auxiliary controls, drove the plane, while Pangborn climbed down to the landing gear and added his strength to that of Diavolo. Between them they brought the girl back to the landing gear. Pangborn again took command of the machine and brought it back to earth.

Pants, Mattress and Quilt Clothe Horse

Winchester, Va.—George W. Fletcher was directed by a court order to provide suitable stable accommodations for a horse, which he admitted, had been kept in an open field for the past month.

Fletcher explained that his stable was crowded to the limit by live stock, and said that to keep the horse from suffering during cold weather he had placed a heavy mattress over the horse, and on top of that he had fastened a bed blanket, two quilts and two rubber sheets. In addition, he had equipped the horse with a rubber headgear to keep off the wind, rain and snow, and had also placed pants on the horse's legs.

People passing the Fletcher premises thought it was moving day at the home.

Fletcher told the court that the horse was fed regularly.

Toy Balloon Kills

East Rochester, N. Y. Strangled by a toy balloon which slipped down her throoat, Julia Sappolio, twelve years old, died here

Officials of the village at their next meeting will vote on an ordinance to prohibit the sale of the penny rubber toys.

Our Business System

For the benefit of all our patrons, it should be of interest to them to know our method and system of doing business.

We pay according to quality, 3 cents more per pound for the butterfat in first grade cream. All shareholders receive an 8 per cent dividend on shares of $25.00, which means $2.00 every year for each share. Besides the dividend, shareholders receive one-half cent more per pound for butterfat than non-shareholdes, regardless of whether they are monthly or cash patrons. To illustrate what this amounts to, let us figure what the amount would be on our largest patron for 1923. His total pounds of butterfat was 3593, times one-half cent equeals $17.96, plus a $2.00 dividend would make the extra amount, by being a shareholder, the neat sum of $19.96. Shareholders are part owners of the creamery, have a vote and something to say at the annual meetings, can hold office and help all the rest of the shareholders in making this the best creamery in the northwest. We are the biggest in the county, let us hold our own. It is advertising of this kind that shows others what is being done in the vicinity of Holt.

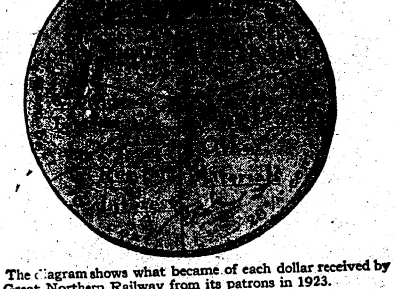
GREAT NORTHERN EXPLAINS HOW ITS DOLLAR IS SPENT



The diagram shows what became of each dollar received by the Great Northern Railway from its patrons in 1923.

The largest item of expenditure was the payroll. The Great Northern has over thirty thousand employees; 42½ cents out of each dollar received was paid to them; about one quarter of a cent out of each dollar was paid to the officers.

Fuel and other materials cost 28¾ cents; taxes, rentals, and interest amounted to 16¼ cents, and the 5 per cent dividend and improvements accounted for 12½ cents.

Great Northern's operating cost has increased 82 per cent since 1915, while its charge to the public for transportation has increased but 35 per cent. Compared with 1915, the annual return to its owners decreased 28 per cent; the much larger increase in operating cost than in charge for transportation having so reduced net income as to necessitate lowering the dividend from $7 to $5 per share.

The Dairy Cow

Having planned your crops for the coming year in such a way as to provide ample feed for your milk cows, you should turn your attention to the study of the dairy business.

The farmer is just as much of a business man as the doctor, lawyer, merchant or banker, and as such should allot himself a certain amount of time in the study of his business. Dairying is one of the most essential parts of your farming problems. Does your milk cow give you all the returns that she is capable of producing, could she better herself with different feeding, does she freshen at the right time of the year when you get the highest price for your butter fat, have you any boarders in your herd and if so what are you doing to remedy this?

This is a sample of the many questions which comes up in dairying. Many ideas of value can be found in the farm papers on the dairy subject. One thing should be kept in mind at all times and that is "Dairying does not become a part of you in one year, it takes time and patience to develop a good milk strain herd." It therefore becomes necessary that our farmers begin with this work at once. You have many examples of successful dairymen in the Holt territory Feel free to discuss milk cows with your neighbor, with the men who are making dairying a success. These men will be glad to give you the benefit of what they know thru practical experience. We need to co-operate with each other. This is a part of the making of a good, wholesome community spirit.

D. 1924 at 8 oclock A. M., in Book 110 of Mortgages, on page 249,

And whereas, the said Edwin A. Brown and Martha G. Brown, the assignees and holders of said mortgage, on February 20th, 1924 paid delinquent taxes upon the mortgaged property hereinafter described in the sum of Two Hundred Seventy-four and 34-100 ($274.34) Dollars; and whereas, the said Edwin A. Brown and Martha G. Brown, the assignees and holders of said mortgage, have duly elected and do hereby elect to declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice, under the terms and conditions of said mortgage and the Power of Sale therein contained; and whereas, there is actually due and claimed to be due at the date of this notice, the sum of Three Thousand ($3000.00) Dollars, with accumulated interest from the 9th day of August 1920, at the rate of six per cent per annum; and whereas, the said Power of Sale has become operative and no action or proceedings having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Now, Therefore, Notice is hereby given, that by virture of the Power of Sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and covered by said mortgage, viz:

The North Half of the Southeast Quarter, the East Half of the Northeast Quarter, of Section number Twenty-three (23), in Township number One Hundred Fifty-six (156) North, of Range number Forty-one (41) West of the Fifth Principal Meridian, containing according to the United States government survey thereof 160 acres, be the same more or less, in Marshall County and State of Minnesota.

Which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Marshall County, at the Front door of the County Court House, in the City of Warren, in said County and State on the 29th, day of April 1924 at 10 o'clock A. M. of that day at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash, to pay the amount then due on said mortgage and interest and the sum of $274.34 for taxes paid on said described premises, with interest from date of payment, together with the costs and disbursements of such sale and Seventy-five Dollars attorneys fees stipulated in said mortgage in case of foreclosure.

MY DAUGHTER WOULD CRY AT EVERYTHING

Nervous and Irritable. By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Became Entirely Normal

Clinton, Wisconsin.—"My daughter was in a very run-down condition, and was irritable, and would cry at every little thing she was so weak and nervous. As Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had helped me when I was a girl I gave it to her to build her up, and the results were all that we could wish for. I wish that every mother with growing girls would try it for these troubles girls often have. I had taken it myself before my girl was born, and she was one of the nicest babies any one could wish to have. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to women and girls and cannot praise it too highly." — Mrs. I. A. HOLFORD, Box 48, Clinton, Wisconsin.

Mothers can depend upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to relieve their daughters of those troubles they so often have. They know from experience the value of the Vegetable Compound in the treatment of these complaints and many, like Mrs. Holford, give it to their daughters.

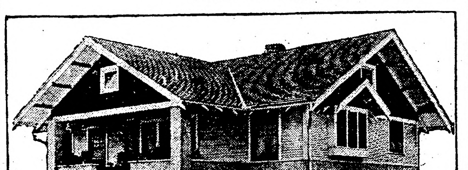
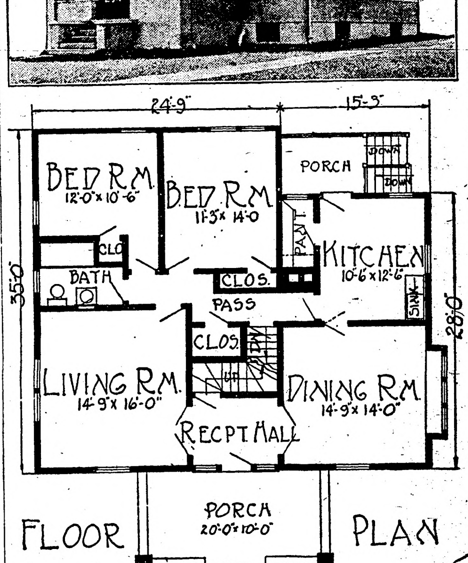
Stucco and Frame Bungalow Containing Five Rooms





By WILLIAM A. RADFORD

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1827 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

Small homes may be just as attractive as large homes. It all depends on the design. The addition of a porch, an overhang of the roof, or the treatment of the exterior walls, or, perhaps, the design of the roof—any of these things may change what would be otherwise an unattractive dwelling into an artistic and pleasing home.

A plain, two-gable small one-story house has been changed into an attractive bungalow type home by the addition of a porch and extending the roof in the home shown in the accompanying illustration. A glance at the floor plans shown reveals that the house is practically square, 28 by 40 feet. However, the third gable in the roof, which extends out over the porch, has transformed the appearance of the building. From a plain, unattractive one-story house, the bungalow has been converted into a most attractive little home.

One feature of the house which is unusual is the treatment of the exterior wall. The concrete foundation has been covered with rough stucco and the stucco extended part way above the first floor line. Above clapboards have been used, the walls up to the second story sill being painted white, while those above are given a darker paint. The roof extension and the exposed rafters give an added artistic touch.

The porch is large, being 20 feet wide and 10 feet deep. The entrance door opens into a reception hall, to the left of which is the living room, 14 feet 9 inches by 16 feet. To the right is the dining room, also a front room, 14 by 14 feet 9 inches. At the rear of the dining room is the kitchen, 10 feet 6 inches by 12 feet 6 inches.

The door at the rear of the living room opens into a short hall, at the end of which is the bathroom. Off this hall are two bedrooms, one 10 feet 6 inches by 12 feet and the other 11 feet 3 inches by 14 feet. Each bedroom has a closet, while a third closet off the hall gives plenty of storage space for the family.

The basement extends under the whole house and provides ample space for the heating plant, fuel storage and other storage. The high gables in the roof permit a good-sized attic, which is reached by stairs running out of the front hall.

A great many families prefer the bungalow type of home. The fact that all of the rooms are on one floor pleases the housekeeper, as it concentrates all the work on the one floor and eliminates stair-climbing. Besides, bungalow designs are very attractive, as they suggest comfort and conveniences.

This design is rather unusual in both its exterior appearance and in the arrangement of the rooms, two features which will appeal to many home builders.

How to Figure Repair and Maintenance Cost

One of the most complete and concise paragraphs ever printed for the advice of the prospective home owner regarding maintenance costs and expenses of home ownership appears in the recently issued pamphlet titled "How to Own Your Home," prepared by the division of building and housing, Department of Commerce. It advises:

"In addition to payments on principal and interest on a home, allowance must be made for some or all of the following expenses: (a) Renewals and repairs, (b) property tax and special assessments, (c) insurance, (d) water tax or rent, (e) accessories, and (f) improvements. In addition to the above, some owners add in the interest which they would otherwise receive on the amount of their cash payment or equity."

Porch Light Is Used to Add Attractiveness

Owners, and especially builders of suburban homes are generally on the watch for features which will add to the attractiveness of the place—placing special emphasis on the exterior. Everything must be made appropriate and in keeping with the surroundings.

Thus special care should be exercised in the selection of a proper lighting unit for the porch. In many such fixtures too often a lack of care and foresight is evidenced. The fixtures designed for use in the dining, living and bedrooms are usually chosen with a view toward their special fitness for each particular room, together with their effect on surroundings, so why not select those for the porch in the same manner?

Fixtures of the most attractive design and utility for porch use are now being manufactured. In a Colonial house, for example, a pair of attractive bronze lanterns hung on either side of the main door add to the appearance of the place. There is no reason why the appearance of any porch should not be enhanced by the use of good-looking fixtures.

The most efficient and convenient method of operating the porch fixture is by means of a three-way switch, located near the door on the porch, and just inside the door within the dwelling. This arrangement makes it possible for the householder to turn on the light and to extinguish it after he has reached the inside. Then, too, the interior control is handy when the bell rings late at night, for it is thus possible to flood the porch with light and see who is there before opening the door.

Two-Door Entrance to Your Breakfast Room

The breakfast room wherever possible should be designed for an entrance both through the kitchen and the dining room, which gives additional room through the placing of an extra seat where ordinarily the table is fitted directly to the wall. The dining room entrance should be through a set of French doors opening into the dining room, a condition which no way interferes with the congested condition of the breakfast room and which may be left open during the meal.

The DAIRY

MILK SUBSTITUTE IS EASILY MIXED

Dairy experts at the United States Department of Agriculture experimental farm at Beltsville, Md., have worked out a calf meal milk substitute which is practical, and easily mixed and which contains a greater proportion of home-grown feeds than is used in most calf meals.

The department's recommended ration is as follows: Take 50 parts finely ground corn, 15 parts linseed oil meal, 15 parts finely ground rolled oats, 10 parts dried blood flour, 10 parts skimmed milk powder, one-half part salt. Stir up with warm mixture at the rate of one pound of the meal mixture to about six pounds of water. Increase gradually as the whole milk is decreased, until at the time the calf is 50 days old it should be getting only the gruel. At this time 1½ to 2 pounds of the meal mixed with water will constitute a day's feed. The total quantity of milk used is about 300 pounds; if less is fed the calves are likely to be unthrifty.

The time at which calves can be put on milk substitutes alone, say department dairymen, depends upon the same factors as in the use of separated milk, namely, the breed, development, and vigor of the calves, etc. It is hardly safe, as a rule, even with the most vigorous ones, to attempt to put them on milk substitutes alone within one month after birth; and with calves below normal in vigor some milk for two months or more may be necessary to raise them.

The department suggests, as a guide for feeding the above substitute to large, vigorous calves, the following schedule: First 10 days, 10 pounds of whole milk daily; second 10 days, 8 pounds of milk and 0.4 pound of meal (mixed up in 6 times its weight of warm water); third 10 days, 6 pounds milk and 0.8 pound meal; fourth 10 days, 4 pounds milk and 1.2 pounds meal; fifth 10 days, 2 pounds milk and 1.6 pounds meal; after 50 days, 2 pounds meal and no milk. Smaller and less vigorous calves should be fed somewhat less, and the milk feeding should be continued a little longer. In any event, a total of 300 pounds of milk should be sufficient. Grain and roughage should be fed with milk substitutes the same as with separated milk.

Whole milk is the best food for a calf; skim milk ranks second. Calves fed the substitute as stated above have been subject to no more digestive troubles than the skim milk fed calves and the gains in weight have not been materially less.

Dairy Calf Is Subject to Digestive Disorders

It is best to let the calves stay with their mothers for two or three days after birth. Then they should be taught to drink from a bucket. Care should be taken to see that the pail is clean for, as every farmer knows, calves are subject to digestive disorders.

The calf should get from 6 to 12 pounds of whole milk daily for the first three weeks and then may be gradually switched over to skim milk and a little grain. Most feeders find it best to give the calves their grain immediately after they have finished drinking their milk. A good concentrate allowance will contain muscle and bone-building nutrients and will contain some fat to replace a part of that abstracted from the milk.

Here are three rations recommended:

1. Corn, 3 parts; bran, 3 parts; oats, 3 parts; oil meal, 1 part.
2. Corn, 5 parts; oats or bran, 3 parts; oil meal, 1 part.
3. Oats, 3 parts; bran, 1 part; oil meal, 1 part.

The calf should be kept hungry, rather than overfed. Overfeeding causes digestive troubles.

Ringworm on Calves Is Very Common in Spring

Ringworm or bran itch is very common among calves in the winter and spring months. It is a skin disease and easily distinguished by the bare and crusted spots it causes. These are white or yellowish in color, first appearing on the head and neck and moving back over the forequarters. If no treatment is used it causes an irritation or itching and spreads by contact with other calves.

It is caused by a fungus or vegetable parasite which is under these crusts or scabs. In order to get the seat of the trouble the scabs must be washed off with hot water and soap and the spots painted over with tincture of iodine. Repeat this treatment every two or three days as long as necessary.

Difficulty With Hubam

It may be said that the culture of hubam as a farm crop encounters more obstacles than does any other legume grown in the Middle West. That explains why there is such a difference of opinion among farmers and others.

Source of Plant Food

Acid phosphate, one of the most valuable sources of plant food for farmers, is now close to the pre-war price.

ROAD BUILDING

FEDERAL BUREAU IS STUDYING HIGHWAYS

In the field of highway economics important investigations are being carried on by the United States bureau of public roads. The re-emergence of the highway as a factor in the transportation of people and goods has brought forth problems to be solved, if the use and development of the highways are to be along the most economic lines. Observations have been made in Connecticut to determine the character and amount of commodities hauled by highway, the method of hauling and length of haul for commodities moving over the roads of the state.

It is estimated that 1,019,688 net tons of commodities were transported over the Connecticut highway system during the three months' period beginning September, 1922. A large part of this movement was distinctly a service that could be rendered only by improved highways, as more than a third of the tonnage moved only from one to nine miles, and nearly another third from ten to twenty-nine miles.

In recent years there has been much discussion as to methods of highway financing. In some quarters there has been expressed a feeling that the distribution of the cost to property owners and motor vehicle operators has not been equitably adjusted. To ascertain the facts, the bureau has undertaken to make a thorough study of the source of highway revenue. Attention has first been given to county and local road funds, four counties in Wisconsin being selected for study.

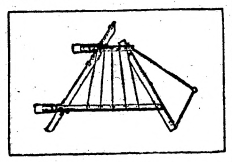
Among the significant findings, some of which are at variance with opinions widely held, are the following:

1. The major portion of the total highway funds is raised by township and county units rather than by the state.
2. Real property taxation produces 62 per cent of the highway revenue derived from these counties.
3. Vehicle license fees produce 9 per cent of the total funds raised in the counties.
4. Significant reduction of real property taxation can only be made by reduction of county and local taxes.

Much progress has been made during the year in researches to supply data for use in the designs of roads. Sections of bituminous road have been tested under truck traffic to determine the cause of the familiar "washboard" wrinkles which sometimes appear in bituminous surfaces. A great many road slabs are being tested by means of an impact machine which duplicates the pounding action of a truck wheel after it strikes a small obstacle on the road. In another experiment a circular track of many sections of concrete, each built of different materials or in a different way, has been tested under traffic to determine the amount of surface wear.

Road Drag Machine Has Adjustable Crossbar

The drag here is provided with means for adjusting the rear crossbar so that it will form road crowns of various slopes. This is done by fastening the bar to the under side of the runners in such a way that either end can be lowered or raised by levers situated upon the runners at the point of attachment. Otto Heintz, Colby, Wis., is the inventor.



Road Machine.

"Good" Road Should Not Be Judged by Surface

When is a bad road a good one? And when is a good road a bad road? Many motorists think of a road with a macadam, concrete or asphalt surface as "good," without considering any other feature of travel over it. A road should not be judged by its surface alone. Some of the so-called bad roads with their cleaner air and picturesque scenery loom up as vastly more desirable for enjoyable motoring than the over-traveled highways that parallel them. In these modern times when the motorist rides on long flexible springs and his car is equipped with efficient devices for checking spring recoil, he can essay gypsy trails and country turnpikes with complete confidence. If his automobile is properly equipped he will ride in comfort at most any pace he chooses.

Highways for the Future

The National Motorists' association, with 374 automobile clubs in support, is developing a program under which it will ask congress for such legislation as will solve the automobile problems of tomorrow as well as today. An important feature will be the urging of highway appropriations for durable roads, not merely mileage. From every section of the country come reports that legislation for highways to meet present needs will fail to provide adequate roads for the future.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

BEHIND A MASK

WITH the exception of children, who are just beginning to find their way about through a labyrinth of words of perplexing colorings, meanings and difficulties, the great majority of humans habitually hide the truth behind a carefully adjusted mask.

To our shame, be it said; we take as naturally to exaggeration as a duck takes to water, or an eagle to the naked cliffs.

Behind our mask we are guilty of every conceivable form of degrading deceit, against which the better part of us rises very often in silent protest, though it avails nothing beyond a temporary twinge of conscience.

Emotion, passion, pride and avarice are shrewdly concealed from our intimates, and we frequently chuckle to ourselves at our ability to continue the fraud without being suspected of the despicable purpose that causes it.

We puff out our character and attributes, posing as saintly beings, when we know in our hearts we are the opposite.

We like to magnify ourselves in the eyes of others, just as they seek to enlarge themselves as they strut before us, preen their fine feathers and crow in sheer vanity.

And this conceit, which is very difficult to understand in reasoning beings, is responsible for much of our unhappiness.

It is at the best a perilous weakness, sure at some time or another to strip us of our rags of dishonor in the presence of those of our friends whose good opinions we prize and wish to retain.

But under the masks our faces exhibit no concern when this thought steals suddenly upon us, though we may experience a sickening sense of humiliation when we try to look the world in the eyes.

A man or woman with a restless personal ambition is very apt to wear a mask until he or she fails to reach a cherished goal. In a burst of anger the disguise is brushed aside and we are horrified as we catch a glimpse of a terrible face we never knew.

It is only when our strength wanes, when our hands tremble and we strain our failing eyes toward the darkening west that we find courage to tear the mask from our face and reveal ourselves as we really are. It is then we tell those about us to be unashamed in the simple garb of truth as is the ingenuous child.

Men You May Marry

Reflections of a Bachelor Girl

By HELEN ROWLAND

A "HERO" is the sort of fearless, dashing creature that every married man secretly thinks he'd be, if he weren't married.

Marching up the white-ribboned aisle to the strains of Lohengrin is like climbing the golden stair—for the bride; for the bridegroom, it is merely shutting his eyes and "walking the plank."

Even the most devoted husband has to practice the most painful self-restraint, in order not to babble to his wife about how the girls at the office "fall for him."

Cosmetics, like clothes and morals, are a matter of geography; in China a lipstick is a necessity, in Paris a habit, in Boston "vulgarity," in Philadelphia, a scandal, but in New York, it is the staff of life and the chief article of diet.

Sometimes, it would seem kinder if a man would only kill a woman's love by some big, cruel act, instead of gradually choking it to death, by a lot of little, foolish ones.

The only trouble with marriage, is that it has never been scientifically perfected; there is as much difference between the haphazard marriage of today and the practicable working model of the future, as there was between the flying-machine of Darius Green and that of the Wright brothers.

Telling a man that he "MUSTN'T make love" to you is a clever little way of pretending to try to extinguish the flame of love by throwing naphtha on it.

THINGS WE LIKE

THERE are many housewives who prefer the dried fruits (some of them) in preparing conserves. One that is especially good is apricots, the dried ones, and canned pineapple. Cook as usual, long and well, and put into glasses; seal as usual.

Baked Ham With Potatoes

Lay a thick slice of center cut of ham in the bottom of a casserole. Rub into the ham a teaspoonful of mustard and two tablespoonfuls of brown sugar. Cover the ham with thinly sliced potatoes enough to furnish the family, adding one finely shredded onion. Cover with milk and add such seasoning of salt and pepper as is needed. Bake long and slowly in moderate oven until the milk is all cooked into the potatoes and makes a rich brown gravy with the fat from the ham. Serve from the casserole. This is a nice dinner for a busy day, as it may be prepared, put into the oven and left for hours without moving.

Spinach a la Parisienne

Cook the amount of spinach [illegible] for the family, washing it carefully and cooking until tender with only the water that clings to the washed leaves. Chop very fine after cooking until nearly tender, drain dry in a cloth, pressing out all the liquor before chopping. Season with butter, pepper, salt and a little nutmeg; cook until tender then add a pinch of soda, a small teaspoonful of sugar and three tablespoonfuls of rich cream; whip to a paste, heat up once and serve very hot.

Onion Sandwich

Lay thin slices of mild onion [illegible] water to crisp, then wipe dry and cover with seasoned dressing, let stand ten minutes and place between slices of buttered bread. Serve at once.

ONLY A HURDY-GURDY

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

MUSIC beneath your window—
Suddenly sweet, a tune!—
Maybe a song recalling,
Song of another June.
"Where is it from, the music?
Look and see, if you can."
"It's only a hurdy-gurdy,
And a hurdy-gurdy man."

Maybe your heart was weary,
Worn in the war of trade,
Weary of fault and failure,
Sick of the wealth you've made;
Now it is all forgotten.
"Who is this piping Pan?"
"Only a hurdy-gurdy,
And a hurdy-gurdy man."

Once, in the gone forever,
Once in the long ago,
A boy with a soul of music,
A youth with a heart aglow,
Dreamed of a mighty organ.
Where is the dream, the plan?
Only a hurdy-gurdy
And a hurdy-gurdy man.

Music beneath your window,
Suddenly sweet a tune,
Maybe a song recalling,
Song of another June—
Playing upon the heart-strings
As only a master can.
Only a hurdy-gurdy
And a hurdy-gurdy man.

Our Business System

For the benefit of all our patrons, it should be of interest to them to know our method and system of doing business.

We pay according to quality, 3 cents more per pound for the butterfat in first grade cream. All shareholders receive an 8 per cent dividend on shares of $25 00, which means $2.00 every year for each share. Besides the dividend, shareholders receive one-half cent more per pound for butterfat than non-shareholdes, regardless of whether they are monthly or cash patrons. To illustrate what this amounts to, let us figure what the amount would be on our largest patron for 1923. His total pounds of butterfat was 3593, times one-half cent equeals $17.96, plus a $2.00 dividend would make the extra amount, by being a shareholder, the neat sum of $19.96. Shareholders are part owners of the creamery, have a vote and something to say at the annual meetings, can hold office and help all the rest of the shareholders in making this the best creamery in the northwest. THE SECRET OF WHY SOME MEN OBTAIN CREDIT, BUT OTHERS CAN'T Various Meanings of Credit—The Way Character Begets Confidence and Opens the Way to Trust—Thrift and Honesty the Basis of Banking.

The secret of why some men can readily obtain credit, while others are unable to borrow a cent, is disclosed in the present article prepared by the Committee on Public Education of the American Bankers Association. It tells an interesting story of how a man of forty, of good reputation and fair success, was nonplussed by his inability to borrow and had to pass up a good opportunity.

Banks are said to deal in credit. The word "credit" has various meanings. When you deposit money, your account receives "credit" for that amount. When a man borrows money on his note at the bank, he is granted "credit." When a railroad, a manufacturing concern, a town, or a government, issues bonds, it uses its "credit." When anyone buys goods without paying cash, at the time of purchase, "credit" is granted. Without credit, our present day business system could not exist.

Credit is possible only where people have confidence in each other, and confidence can exist only where good character exists. Every successful business man looks upon his credit standing as a most valuable asset, and he maintains it by square dealing. To get credit a man must pay his debts, or it soon becomes known he is not of good character and not worthy of confidence. Those from whom he would buy refuse to trust him and the banks decline to grant him credit. Then come business failure and a long uphill fight to get on his feet again and live down the past.

More Than Honesty Needed

Honesty is not the only factor involved in credit. For instance, Mr. Jones, a man of forty, of excellent morals, who has enjoyed a fair income for many years, sees an opportunity to purchase a business. He requires financial assistance. He calls on a banker and asks for the necessary credit. The banker asks the nature of the business, what it will cost, and what Mr. Jones can command in ready money, or other resources, but learns that he has no money or property of his own.

It is clear that Mr. Jones lacks ability to manage his affairs wisely. He has not had enough strength of character to save money by adapting expenses to income, and therefore has not proved that he could make financial progress. Moreover, if men do not invest some of their own money in the business they usually lack incentive and become easily discouraged. It would be unwise for anyone to assume such a financial risk, and Mr. Jones probably would fail to get credit from the bank. He must give up his opportunity to some one else who has saved money.

Banks are public servants, but that does not obligate them to serve those who are unfair in business or lacking in the great principles underlying success. To be known as a careful and thrifty person is the best assurance that the bank will extend financial help when needed.

Many people think that one should shun debt like the measles. They fail to distinguish between wise and unwise debt. It is wise to use credit, that is, go into debt, to buy a home. Such debt encourages thrift. A student may wisely borrow money needed to complete his education. It is an investment that should pay dividends in greater success. Another wise use of credit is borrowing to buy good bonds, such as Liberty Bonds, paying $20 down, borrowing $80 from the bank, and paying it off out of savings.

When to Shun Debt

There are circumstances, however, under which one should never borrow money. Never incur a debt in a speculative venture. OF THE PEOPLE WHO SPECULATE, NINETY-FIVE PER CENT LOSE. Neither should debts be incurred to purchase pleasure-giving possessions. Such debts are millstones around the necks of countless families.

Progressive banks adhere to the same standards they exact of their patrons. Their business methods must be beyond reproach. They exclude business of doubtful reputation and have no part in the feverish struggle for sudden wealth. Well-managed banks are regarded with great respect, and hold a place of ever increasing importance.

Some thoughtless persons criticize banks for not making loans more freely but it must be remembered that a bank's business is to receive deposits as well as to grant loans, and it is therefore the trustee of money belonging to others. It must safeguard its depositors' funds and so control them as to be always ready to return them intact upon demand. That requires great care in granting credits.

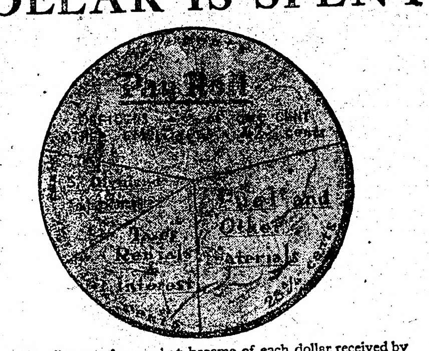
THE MORTALITY OF SAVINGS ACCOUNTS

The Savings Banks Association of Massachusetts has issued a tabulation made by a mutual savings bank in an average New England town showing that, of the accounts opened during a six months period, 85 to 90 per cent were open at the end of the period. At the end of the next six months about 70 per cent were open. At the end of one year about 60 per cent were open; at the end of 18 months about 55 per cent; at the end of three years about 50 per cent; and then the figure rather steadily declined by 2 to 3 per cent of the original number each year. At the end of ten years about 25 per cent of the accounts were still open. After that the changes were very small, mostly on account of death.

Federal Reserve Copied

Peru is the first country in Latin America to reorganize its banking system according to Federal Reserve principles by the enactment of the Federal Reserve Act of Peru to develop the country's resources along modern lines of financing. Peru's new banking system is modeled after the United States Federal Reserve, with modifications such as the banking conditions and general financial situation there require. It provides for the creation of a Federal Reserve Bank in Peru. The directorate of this bank is to be composed of nine members, three of whom are to be designated by the Government and the other six are to be elected by the member banks.

GREAT NORTHERN EXPLAINS HOW ITS DOLLAR IS SPENT



The diagram shows what became of each dollar received by the Great Northern Railway from its patrons in 1923.

The largest item of expenditure was the payroll. The Great Northern has over thirty thousand employees; 42½ cents out of each dollar received was paid to them; about one quarter of a cent out of each dollar was paid to the officers.

Fuel and other materials cost 28¾ cents; taxes, rentals, and interest amounted to 16¼ cents, and the 5 per cent dividend and improvements accounted for 12½ cents.

Great Northern's operating cost has increased 82 per cent since 1915, while its charge to the public for transportation has increased but 35 per cent. Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

LIGHT OR DARKNESS

IT IS for you to choose whether you shall make your dwelling place where the sunbeams are, or where the shadows lie.

From those rational individuals who mark upon a scale the division between light and darkness, to these who never give thought to the matter, time slips away with the same precision, caring not who makes use of the precious minutes or permits them to go to waste.

The man who wanders about in the gloom, indifferent as to the direction he is traveling, is heading straight for the dismal land of nowhere. He is the frowning, fault-finding man, blaming others for his falls and bruises. He lives in perpetual darkness and thinks darkly.

The world has too many such men, too many women of the same miserable type, stubbing their toes in the dark simply because they stubbornly refuse to lift their eyes to the guiding light and let reason illuminate their souls with glorious faith and hope.

Everywhere they go, they take with them the clammy chill of midnight. Their presence is oppressive, though they cannot be made to believe it.

They are important to themselves, but fail to impress their importance upon those who consistently press forward among the industrious on the great sun-lighted highway making the best use of their talents.

Anybody, it is supposed, can say what he means, but if you will take time to converse with one of these benighted mortals and seek to draw him out, you will find that in his case the hypothesis is not true.

It takes the genial sunlight to crown the orchards and the fields with fruit and grain. And just so does it require a spiritual sun to bring forth the goodness in man and loosen his tongue to utter words of cheer and wisdom.

The sunny men and women make the best of things, even when their world is gray and cheerless.

All that is beautiful, inspiring, lovable and noble, comes from their enlightened minds, indulgent to the wayward, sympathetic to the unfortunate, benevolent and merciful.

Into the world's darkest places, into the gloomiest hearts, these humane men and women scatter sunshine without reserve. Who does not bless them?

The Why of Superstitions

By H. IRVING KING

WINDING

IN SOME parts of the country an inquisitive girl, after getting ready for bed, throws a ball of string on the floor and, winding the loose end round and round her wrist says: "I wind, I wind, my true love to find," asking the color of the unknown's hair and for other details concerning him. In other sections the girl goes out at night and throws a ball of yarn into an empty house, or into a cellar, and, repeating about the same incantation, winds the loose end into a ball. In the first instance the maiden dreams of her future husband; in the second she catches a glimpse of him in the dark house or cellar. Some say that for a surety of success this mode of divination should be practiced on Allhalloween and the ball of yarn thrown into a barn.

In origin this superstition is akin to the magic doctrine of obstructive knots. We have already seen how all obstructive knots can so tie up a man's physical and mental activities as to prevent their functioning naturally. But it was also believed by those of olden times that knots, when constructed for that purpose, could bind a man and his affections to one desirous of possessing him and them.

This is undoubtedly the origin of the common "love knot," found even on the collar of the "Most Noble Order of the Garter." The obstruction of a knot of this kind is an obstruction to the wandering of the man's fancy—Queen Dido and her sandal-knots, for instance, as cited by Serverus. The winding of a cord or a thread was supposed to have much the same effect as tying it in a knot. Elworthy tells of a "charm" found in a house in Naples which consisted of a lemon stuck full of nails; around the nails a long string was wound many times. Many instances might be cited of the efficacy of winding among the ancients. The maiden of today winding her ball of yarn finds therein the heart of her destined husband—as did her ancestors of dim and distant old.

FOOD FOR THE DAY

A SALAD which is both appetizing and good to look at is:

Apple and Onion Salad.

Cut into small cubes two cupfuls of good-flavored apple. Peel and slice, then cut into small cubes a mild-flavored Bermuda or Southern onion. Mix well, add a dozen dates cut into bits, serve with a good-flavored salad dressing on lettuce.

Vegetable and Broth Soup.

Take the broth from a well-cooked tongue; add to the broth one sliced onion, two sliced potatoes, one each of sliced carrot and turnip. Season well with salt, pepper, kitchen bouquet and a few spoonfuls of strained tomato. Cook slowly for an hour, add a teaspoonful of walnut catsup and serve piping hot. Strain if desired, but the soup with the vegetables is far more economical.

Cocoa Doughnuts.

Beat two eggs until light, add two-thirds of a cupful of sugar and beat again. Add two tablespoonfuls of melted butter and one cupful of milk. Sift together three cupfuls of flour, three teaspoonfuls of baking powder, two tablespoonfuls of cocoa, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt and one teaspoonful of cinnamon. Mix all together, adding flour to roll. Cut into strips and twist slightly. Fry in deep fat, drain, and when cold roll in powdered sugar.

MEN YOU MAY MARRY

By E. R. PEYSER

Has a man like this proposed to you?

Symptoms: You have seen his broad-shouldered, long-limbed body in khaki shirt and old tweeds, swing to work in the early morning with his faithful lunch box in his hand. He's athletic and a good workman, and the boys take all their quarrels to him. You might have seen his adoring mother's glance and imagine her saying to herself: "He's a good boy," when he kissed her good-by in the morning. He has no use for girls. His ma is his ideal. He even finds her in his lunch box —he kept her tintype in his breast pocket in the trenches.

IN FACT

His mother is not only in his heart, but in his mind.

Prescription for his bride:

℞ Study him and him only as his mother did before you.

Be careful of your cooking.

Be satisfied to sew when he reads all evening.

Love his silences—they are solid and he is sure.

THY NEIGHBOR AS THYSELF

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

"LOVE thy neighbor as thyself,"
The holy Scriptures run;
We wish the Lord would tell us though,
Just how it can be done.
For there are often neighbors near,
There may be neighbors even here,
A few that we could tell you of
We find it very hard to love.

"Love thy neighbor as theyself"?
But what about the kind
Who speak so sweetly to your face
And otherwise behind?
And what about the neighbors who
Are always borrowing from you?
And neighbors who run in and stay
Upon your very busy day?

"Love thy neighbor as thyself"?
The ones who keep a flock
Of chickens that will crow and cluck
At half past four o'clock?
And folks who let the baby cry,
To find the trouble never try?
And folks who play—yes, what of them?
The phonograph at 2 a. m.?

"Love thy neighbor as thyself"
And live in sweet accord.
There's only one thing we can think
To make us do it, Lord:
There are some neighbors we could love
Just like the cooing turtle dove
If on some bright and sunny day
They'd only up and move away.

GOOD ROADS

MOTORISTS PAYING FOR BETTER ROADS

(By WILLIAM G. EDENS, President Illinois Highway Improvement Association.)

It is a trite but true saying that the motor car is responsible for good roads as we know them in the year 1924 in the United States.

There is no place in the country where this is more true than in Illinois. In the current year motorists will pay in license fees to the state alone approximately $10,000,000 for the maintenance and building of roads.

Nearly every city in the state levies a wheel tax against motor vehicles. It is probably safe to say that the aggregate 1924 municipal wheel tax collected in Illinois will be $5,000,000. Thus the motorists of the state will pay approximately $15,000,000 this year for roads and streets.

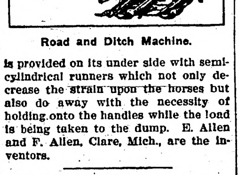
It is claimed by some experts in taxation that this is a special tax, and that the legislation responsible for it is class legislation. However that may be, it is an historic fact that organizations representing the motorists of the state were the first to propose and agree that such a tax should be levied, in order that the state might be saved from the terrible transportation conditions under which it labored until the modern businesslike method of road improvement was evolved.

It has become a habit of some later day advocates of good roads to claim pioneership and to assert that whatever progress has been made in the state is due solely to their initiative and efforts. The transition which Illinois is now experiencing is due to a movement started by motorists and not by politicians, and is the natural outcome and continuation of a road building effort that was created more than a dozen years ago.

It may be interesting at this time, therefore, to give a brief sketch of the good roads movement that has brought to Illinois many hundreds of miles of concrete and other permanent pavements in place of mud, sand and clay that were prevalent in the early part of the present century.

Road and Ditch Machine Lessens Strain on Team

In addition to being durably constructed and adapted for operation in either soft or hard ground, this scraper is provided on its under side with semi-cylindrical runners which not only decrease the strain upon the horses but also do away with the necessity of holding onto the handles while the load is being taken to the dump. E. Allen and F. Allen, Clare, Mich., are the inventors.



Road and Ditch Machine.

Plan Road Schools for Pan-American Delegates

Forty delegates will be brought to this country from Pan-American countries to make an intensive "shirt-sleeves" study of highways and highway transport under the terms of a plan approved by government, automotive, road machinery, road material and banking representatives at a meeting held in New York.

The proposal as outlined by Assistant Secretary of Commerce J. Walter Drake, T. H. MacDonald, chief of the United States bureau of public roads, and Dr. G. Sherwell, secretary-general of the Inter-American high commission, provides that the men to be invited will be named here, and all of their expenses will be paid by private subscription.

The immediate purpose is to give the delegates a sufficient understanding of developed highway transport to enable them to participate actively in the Pan-American Highway congress proposed at the last meeting of the Pan-American Union and which will be held as a separate project in 1924. The ultimate objective is the promotion of closer relations between the United States and the other countries of the Americas.

Roy D. Chapin, Hudson-Essex company; W. A. Beatty, Austin Manufacturing company, and Fred I. Kent, Bankers' Trust company, were named as an executive committee. Details in this country will be handled by the highway education board. S. T. Henry, formerly of the Engineering-News-Record, will manage the project.

Along New Oregon Road

The stretch of highway connecting Pacific highway with Fifth street in Oregon City, which has been under construction for several months, will probably be completed and opened to traffic by June 1.

When this piece of road is opened it will afford one of the most picturesque scenes in the state. At the point where the highway climbs to the top of the cliff Oregon City, Willamette falls and the surrounding country are in plain view.

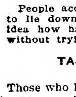
TASTY EATING

Those who know, tell us that a duck should never be stuffed if one likes all the flavor in the bird.



Braised Ducks. — Lay three slices of fat, smoked ham upon the grating of the roaster; next, a minced onion, a stalk of celery, chopped, a sliced carrot and a tablespoonful of chopped parsley. Clean and truss the ducks, lay them upon the vegetables and pour a cupful of boiling water over them. Cover the roaster closely and cook in a moderate oven for two hours. Take up the ducks, strain the liquor from the pan and let it cool sufficiently to congeal the fat. Skim the gravy carefully and return to the fire in a saucepan, keeping the ducks hot over boiling water closely covered. Boil the gravy; add a teaspoonful of lemon juice and thicken slightly with flour. Have the cooked giblets chopped and stir into the gravy. Pour this sauce again over the ducks in the roaster, bring all to the boiling point and serve with the sauce poured round the fowls. Serve with apple sauce or currant jelly.

Fish Turbot.—Take one can of salmon, remove the skin and bones and flake into small pieces. Make a dressing with one-half cupful of flour, add enough cold milk to make a paste, then turn it into a pint of hot milk and cook until it is smooth and thick. Cook, add two well-beaten eggs, one-half cupful of melted butter and seasonings to taste. Put the fish and dressing in alternate layers and cover with buttered crumbs and bake one-half hour. The liquor may be used for part of the fat in the sauce if desired.

Every-Day Cake.—Beat four tablespoonfuls of butter to a cream; add one-half cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of raisins, two egg yolks beaten light, one-quarter cupful each of maple and corn sirup, one-half cupful of milk and one and three-quarters cupfuls of flour, a teaspoonful of cream of tartar, half a teaspoonful of soda and the same of salt and mace, all sifted together. Add the stiffly-beaten whites of the eggs and turn into a shallow pan. Sprinkle with chopped nuts or raisins and dredge with sugar. Bake an hour or longer, depending upon the depth of the mixture.

If we looked for people's virtues
And their faults refused to see,
What a pleasant, cheerful,
Happy place this world would be.

SOMETHING TO EAT

A dainty salad accompaniment is prepared with the tender centers of white celery, stuffed with a seasoned cream cheese or with a grated cheese softened in hot cream and seasoned highly with cayenne and any desired seasoning.

Savory Sandwich Filling. — Blanch one-half cupful of almonds and brown them in a frying pan with a tablespoonful of oil. Chop fine, season with salt and cayenne, add two chopped pickles, one tablespoonful of chutney; mix well and spread on either bread or crackers with cream cheese and sprinkle with the chopped mixture.

Stuffed Egg Plant.—Parboil a large egg plant, unpeeled, for ten minutes. Let it stand until perfectly cold. Cut in half lengthwise and scrape out the center, leaving the walls an inch in thickness. Chop the pulp fine; add to it half a cupful of melted butter, salt and pepper to taste. Moisten with milk and fill the hollowed halves with the mixture, rounding up the stuffing. Cover with buttered crumbs and bake in a covered roaster, pouring enough butter and water around the vegetable to come half way up the sides. When well cooked transfer to a hot platter, thicken the liquid left in the roaster with browned flour and butter, boil up and pour around the egg plant.

Green Peppers Stuffed With Rice.—Cut a slice from the stem ends of green peppers; lay into cold water after removing the white fiber and seeds. Parboil five minutes, turning that they may be evenly scalded. Fill with canned chicken soup, rice, cold cooked chicken, chopped nuts or any good, nicely seasoned stuffing. Arrange in a baking pan and bake, basting often with butter and water until the peppers are soft and the filling well-heated through.

Mashed Potatoes.—Boil the potatoes until tender; drain and shake over the heat to dispel all steam. Beat until light, adding butter and hot milk; give another good beating with a strong, large spoon and serve fluffy white and delicious. Do not, when serving mashed potatoes, pack into a dish and press down. Leave light, just as it comes from the spoon.

Potato Cakes.—Add one beaten egg to two cupfuls of mashed potato, two tablespoonfuls of milk, salt and pepper to taste. Mix well and form into ten balls, using flour to roll. Fasten a thin slice of bacon around each with a toothpick to hold the bacon in place. Set in a hot oven and cook until the bacon is crisp. Serve at once.

Opinion differs as to the origin of the term "dun," used for a missive seeking to collect money. Price for Wheat Fixed by Demand

Farmers Planning on Growing Durum Variety Should Consider Conditions.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Farmers who are planning on growing durum wheat this year should consider carefully the market conditions. Since the early days of durum wheat production there usually has been an active foreign demand. The development of a domestic market did not keep pace with production. In recent years, however, large mills have been constructed for grinding durum wheat exclusively, according to the United States Department of Agriculture. This industry now uses about half the average annual production. With the decrease in the foreign demand the price for this class of wheat has become more and more dependent upon the domestic market. Because of the overproduction for this market the price of durum wheat has been considerably below that of equal grades of hard red spring wheat, in recent years.

Why Durum Is Favored.

Because of the greater resistance of durum wheats to rust and drought, which occur frequently in the northern spring wheat region, durum wheat usually yields and weighs more and grades higher in its class than hard red spring wheat grown under the same conditions. The increasing acreages of durum wheat up to 1922 were largely the result of the superior yields and the higher grades which usually have been obtained. The recent low prices of durum wheat caused a decrease in its acreage in 1923. A further reduction in the acreage of this class of wheat probably is necessary if growers are to receive a profitable return for their 1924 crop.

As the domestic demand is increasing and the foreign demand decreasing, more careful attention should be given to the requirements of the domestic market. Firms engaged in the durum trade find it difficult to obtain pure durum wheat. According to the official inspections supervised by the federal grain supervisors for the three crop years ending August 31, 1919, 1920, and 1921, about 48 per cent of the durum wheat inspected contains over 10 per cent of wheat of other classes and is graded as mixed wheat. Only the remaining 52 per cent is graded as durum. Approximately 30 per cent of all mixed wheat marketed has durum wheat predominating in the mixture. No other one class of wheat forms the basis of so much mixed wheat. The principal class of wheat found mixed with durum is hard red spring. Farmers are urged to obtain and maintain seed stocks of pure durum wheat.

When making a change of seed careful consideration also should be given the choice of varieties. The kubanka is the best-adapted variety for all of the varying conditions in the durum wheat sections. It is a high-yielding wheat considerably resistant to rust, of good milling quality and well liked for the manufacture of macaroni. The new nodak variety which recently has been developed in North Dakota as a selection from kubanka, is a distinct pure strain of that variety which is equal or superior to it in yield, rust resistance and macaroni-making qualities. Other durum varieties have been found more productive than kubanka in certain sections. Mindum is the best-yielding durum variety in Minnesota. It is about as resistant to rust as kubanka and makes macaroni of excellent light yellow color. Peliss is the best yielding variety in the higher and drier sections of Montana and Wyoming where rust does not occur. It also gives a good color in macaroni manufacture.

Discontinue Red Variety.

Other high-yielding varieties of durum wheat, however, produce macaroni of a grayish color, which has been found by domestic manufacturers to be unsalable. Principal among these is pentad (D-5), the red durum variety. It is the most rust-resistant variety of durum wheat grown and is a high-yielding wheat in seasons of severe rust. The grain, however, cannot be used profitably by domestic manufacturers of semolina from which macaroni is made. It is sold principally for export and its price is considerably below that of equal grades of amber durum. The growing of red durum should be discontinued. Two varieties of amber durum which also are rust resistant and high yielding are not desired by the trade because of the grayish color of the macaroni which they make. These are the acme and monad (D-1) varieties. Acme is the highest-yielding durum variety in most of South Dakota, and monad the best-yielding variety in North Dakota.

In order to meet the requirements of the domestic market, durum wheat growers should obtain purer and better seed and replace the pentad (D-5), acme and monad (D-1) varieties with other rust-resistant varieties as soon as possible. For this purpose the nodak appears the most promising new variety at this time.

Sudan Grass for Hay

If the hay crop shows prospects of being short this year or if for any reason a late planted crop is wanted which will produce a great deal of forage, sudan grass will just about fill the bill. It can be planted any time from corn-planting time until July 15 and will make two crops in a season and about four tons to the acre.

Increase Milk Yield by Using Pure Breds

Result of Dairy Improvement Work in Delaware.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

An increase of over 1,800,000 gallons in the annual milk production of New Castle county, Delaware, without increasing the number of dairy cows owned has followed five years' dairy improvement work, in which the county agent, progressive dairy farmers and agricultural organizations co-operated. This county is located near a large city, affording a good market for whole milk, and dairying is an important farm industry.

When extension work in dairying was begun in New Castle county, many farmers were in the habit of buying a medium type of grade cow without a guaranty of health. Following a county meeting of dairymen in 1918, four carloads of pure bred cows from herds under federal supervision for tuberculosis control were brought in and distributed as far as possible at the rate of one to a farm, so that as many farmers as possible might learn for themselves whether or not the investment paid. The boys and girls on the farms became interested, were organized into a club and a pure bred calf secured by each member. New clubs have been organized each year following, and exhibits of club members' stock are a feature of district shows and the state fair.

Club members have produced about one-fifth of the present holdings of pure bred stock in the county. Pure bred bulls and cows have been purchased by many farmers, after the movement was begun, on their own initiative. There are now about 900 pure bred dairy cattle in the county, while in 1915 there were only 380. A carefully worked out ration is fed. Over 4,000 dairy cattle in the county are under federal supervision for tuberculosis control. Four annual consignment sales of surplus stock have been held, the 1923 sales totaling over $7,000.

Bigger Profits Possible From Improved Animals

Kansas dairy farmers could increase their returns $20,000,000 a year by better feeding and better stock, according to reported estimates of J. M. Frandsen, a dairy specialist, at a recent Kansas agricultural convention. This estimate is considered typical of conditions throughout the country by live stock and dairy experts of the United States Department of Agriculture, which is prepared to assist state organizations and individuals in improving their methods in breeding and feeding. The use of pure bred sires, particularly, is a practical, economical, and rapid means of improving the quality of domestic animals. According to department records, more than 12,700 live stock owners have placed their herds and flocks on a strictly pure bred sire basis, and reports from these farmers show that pure bred live stock has about 40 per cent utility value over common stock.

As a means of encouraging better feeding methods, the department has developed a simple feeding problem sheet, which may be procured and filled out by any live stock owner. A specialist of a state agricultural college, or the department, then makes an analysis of each problem and points out the means for solving it.

Kohl-Rabi One of Most Rapid Growing Plants

Kohl-rabi, though little known as a garden crop, is one of the most quickly grown vegetables. The plant, belonging to the cabbage tribe, thrives well in any soil and is at its best under cool, moist conditions. Part of the plant used is the enlarged stem which forms just above the ground. This, when cooked as turnips, tastes similar to cabbage, though somewhat milder in flavor. In fact, the plant is often called the lazy man's cauliflower. The crop should be used when bulbs are not more than two inches in diameter; that is, before they become fibrous and woody. Succession plantings made from May until July will furnish young, tender bulbs for use during the entire summer. The late crop may be stored for winter use.

FARM NOTES

Better seed, bigger crops, larger profits, greater satisfaction in farming.

• • •

Experience? Yes, but keep an ear cocked for tips from the county agent.

• • •

High analysis fertilizers mean more pounds of plant food per dollar of cost.

• • •

A bolt in time may save nine hours. Repair the farm machinery while yet there is time.

• • •

How to save more money on the farm in 1924: Use more home grown products for food and feed.

• • •

Co-operative thinking among farmers is as important as co-operative marketing of farm products.

• • •

There are many who think that farm life is just one picnic pleasure after another, but they are not farmers.

• • •

Dried blood is a good nitrogen supply and works more slowly than nitrate of soda. It may be dug in when seed is planted to good advantage.

THE DAIRY

SKIM MILK IS GOOD FOR CALF FEEDING

Skim milk is the most satisfactory substitute for whole milk in calf feeding. Feeding directly from the separator saves labor and makes calf raising a comparatively simple matter. Skim milk calves make a vigorous, sturdy growth of body and frame. The butterfat in whole milk supplies energy and not protein and oil meal need not be substituted for it when skim milk is fed. Corn, oats and other grains will supply the energy.

If the calves are taught to eat some legume hay such as clover or alfalfa at an early age, by the time they are three weeks old the skim milk may be gradually substituted for the whole milk at the rate of one to two pounds a day until the change is made.

A safe rule for feeding skim milk is one pound for every eight pounds live weight. This should be increased as the calf grows, up to the point where 15 pounds is fed daily. This amount need not be increased unless there is an abundance of skim milk available, as grain and hay may generally be used to better advantage. It is a good plan to feed skim milk until the calves are six months of age if possible, and in some cases even up to one year.

Freshly soured skim milk may be fed safely to calves over six weeks old but it must not be decayed.

Irregular amounts of skim milk may cause digestive troubles so it is safest to weigh the milk at each feeding, both as a preventive of over-feeding and to assure a uniform amount at each feeding.

Over-feeding causes more trouble than under-feeding. The belief that skim milk is thin or lacks in food value is responsible for feeding more than is necessary.

A uniform temperature should be maintained for all feedings. Body temperature is the right warmth for skim milk fed to young calves. Calves that are over six months old may have the skim milk cold in warm weather but care should be taken to have the temperature uniform at each feeding.

Separator foam should be removed. In trying to drink foamy milk, calves often suck in large quantities of air which causes them to bloat.

Give Extra Attention to Cows Before Freshening

Every cow should be dry at least six weeks before freshening. It is not uncommon to hear a dairyman say: "You simply cannot get that cow dry. She milks right up to calving." Persistent production is very desirable in a dairy cow, but such an animal requires extra attention during the latter part of her lactation. A dairy cow has only two ways to dispose of the feed which she receives, put it on her back or put it in the pail. The real dairy cow does little of the former if she receives the proper kinds of feed.

Succulent, juicy feeds and those rich in protein produce most milk. Dry, starchy foods, such as timothy hay, ear corn and corn fodder, are poor milk producers. The only time timothy hay can be called a dairy roughage is when a cow should be dried up. The first step in preparing a cow for her next lactation is to substitute dry roughage for some of the silage and give a grain ration containing less protein. In some cases, silage may have to be withheld entirely and only dry roughage fed.

Milk of Better Quality May Be Easily Produced

A leaflet on clean milk, showing that milk of high quality may be easily produced by following a few simple rules, has been issued by the dairy division of the United States Department of Agriculture.

The leaflet consists of four pages: (1) Clean, healthy cows, (2) sterilization of milk utensils, (3) use small top milking pails, and (4) cool milk promptly. Each subject is illustrated, and references are given to bulletins which explain it further. "Keep milk clean, covered, cold," is the concluding advice.

DAIRY NOTES

See that the milking herd gets water twice each day.

• • •

It takes longer to feed a scrub cow than it does to milk her.

• • •

Sweet clover will grow on alkali and gumbo soils where alfalfa fails.

• • •

A well-built, well-lighted, well-ventilated and well planned barn is necessary for every dairy farm.

• • •

Keep the cows out of the cold winds and rains. It takes extra feed to keep cows warm when exposed to bad weather.

• • •

In gradually [illegible] of good cows we are following the course of older civilizations where the cow is indispensable.

• • •

[illegible] feeding [illegible] ration does not assure success although it will increase somewhat the production of the dairy herd.

OPERATIONS FOR FEMALE TROUBLES

Some Are Necessary, Some Are Not

These Women Gave Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a Trial First

Fairview, S. Dakota.—"A year ago I was sick in bed for three weeks and the doctor said I would not be any better without an operation. I had bearing-down pains and sick headaches, with pains in the back of my neck. I felt tired all the time, down-hearted, and got poor and pale and was scarcely able to do anything at all for some time before I took to my bed. The doctor said one of my organs was out of place and caused all my troubles. I was too weak and run-down to think of an operation and as one of my neighbors told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I began taking it. I have received great relief from it and recommend it very highly. It cannot be praised too much in cases of female weakness."—Mrs. O. M. RING, Box 106, Fairview, South Dakota.

New Jersey Woman Writes

Camden, New Jersey.—"I take great pleasure in writing you this testimonial. I was a great sufferer of woman's ailments and doctors told me 18 years ago that I must have a serious operation to remove some of my organs. I refused to have it done and took a full course of your medicines for six months, then after the full course I took a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound every week or two, also Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine every Spring. I am well and stout and still have my organs they wanted to remove. It was while I was in the hospital that I heard your medicines praised by other patients there. I have recommended them to my friends and to my own family. You may use this testimonial far and near, from the smallest paper to the largest, and I will gladly answer letters from women who wish to know what the Vegetable Compound has done for me and what it will do for them if they give it a fair trial."—Mrs. J. RICH, 322 N. 40th St., Camden, New Jersey.

Through neglect, some female troubles may reach a stage where an operation is necessary, but most of the common ailments are not surgical ones; they are not caused by serious displacements, tumors or growths, although the symptoms may appear the same.

Many letters have been received from women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, after operations have been advised.

In a recent country-wide canvass of purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, over 100,000 replies were received and 98 out of every 100 reported that they had been benefited by its use. This statement is important to every woman. For sale at drug stores everywhere.

BALLOT

WHEREAS, the Minnesota Electric Distributing Company, a Minnesota corporation, has offered to purchase the electric distributing system of the Village of Holt, Marshall County, Minnesota, as proposed to be improved, according to a proposed contract of purchase and sale, which proposed contract is as follows:

THIS INDENTURE, made this 16th day of April, 1924, by and between the Village of Holt, Marshall County, Minnesota, party of the first part, vendor, and Minnesota Electric Distributing Company, a Minnesota corporation, party of the second part, purchaser; WITNESSETH:

The vendor hereby contracts to sell, assign, transfer and convey to the purchaser, and the purchaser hereby agrees to purchase the electric distributing system, street lighting system, substation, meters, and service connections of the electric light plant and all appurtenances thereto belonging, all as the same shall be improved by the proceeds of the proposed Seven Thousand Dollar bond issue therefor, belonging to the vendor, for the agreed purchase price of Seven Thousand Dollars ($7,000.00), to be paid in the following manner and times, in accordance with the following conditions: The purchaser shall pay, on or before the 10th day of each and every month, commencing with the month of April, 1924, and ending with the month of April, 1944, the sum of Seventeen Dollars and Fifty Cents ($17.50) to Marshall County State Bank of Holt, Minnesota, to be held by said Bank as Trustee, according to the terms of this agreement. The purchaser covenants and agrees that said monthly sum so paid by it will, together with interest thereon at the rate of five per cent (5 per cent) per annum, compounded annually, to be allowed and paid into the fund created hereby, by the Trustee, aggregate the sum of Seven Thousand Dollars ($7,000.00) at the time of payment of the last monthly installment hereunder, which sum of Seven Thousand Dollars ($7,000.00) it is agreed is the purchase price herein; and in the event said sum shall fail to aggregate the sum of Seven Thousand Dollars ($7,000.00) by reason of any error in computation hereunder, the purchaser covenants and agrees to make up any such deficiency; provided that any deficiency in said sum, caused by the default or failure of the Trustee, shall not be required to be made good by the purchaser,—it being understood that the risk of default or failure by the Trustee is is being borne by the seller. Upon the payment of the last monthly installment hereunder by the purchaser to the seller, and the purchaser having made all its payments hereunder, the seller shall thereupon tender to the purchaser good and sufficient instruments of conveyance, in form approved by the attorneys for the purchaser, conveying and transferring good legal title to said properties to said purchaser, free from any lien or incumbrance whatsoever, and thereupon, the Trustee shall pay over to the seller the purchase price so deposited with it. The default or failure of the Trustee to pay over said purchase price, or any portion thereof, shall not relieve the seller from its obligation hereunder, but it shall nevertheless be required to deliver said instruments of conveyance and transfer, and shall have recourse against the Trustee for any failure or default in the premises. In the event that the seller shall fail to tender said instruments of conveyance and transfer within thirty (30) days after the payment of the last installment of the purchase price hereunder, the seller shall have the right to cancel this agreement, and thereupon, the Trustee shall pay to it all sums held by it hereunder, together with said interest thereon, and the purchaser shall have the sole right against the Trustee for any default or failure in the premises; provided that nothing herein shall limit the right of either party to enforce specific performance of this agreement or to have such recovery against the other party hereto for breach hereof, as may be allowed by law.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the parties hereto have caused this instrument to be executed in duplicate the day and year first above written, by their respective corporate officers, pursuant to authority duly conferred thereon.

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED by the Village Council of the Village of Holt, Marshall County, Minnesota, that the officers of said Village are hereby authorized and required to enter into the foregoing proposed contract for sale and to sell said electric distributing system, street lighting system, substation, meters, and service connections of the electric light plant and all appurtenances thereto belonging to the Minnesota Electric Distributing Company, upon the conditions and according to the terms set forth therein; all subject, however, to the approval or disapproval of the voters of said Village at an election to be held on the 16th day of April, 1924.

"Shall the electric distributing system of the Village of Holt, Marshall County, Minnesota, be sold to Minnesota Electric Distributing Company, according to the terms of the Resolution and proposed contract of sale set forth therein, adopted by said Village Council on the 1st day of April, 1924, which Resolution and proposed contract of sale is on file and of record and open to inspection with the Village Clerk?"

HOW A RIP-ROARING RADICAL WAS TAMED

By JOHN OAKWOOD

The best story of the taming of a radical I have ever read is told by A. B. Farquhar in his book "The First Million the Hardest." It throws more light on the meaning of capitalism and the futility of socialism than a library full of books on sociology, economics and politics. Here it is as Farquhar tells it:

"The best antidote for acute economic insanity is ownership of property. My favorite example is Otto Steininger. He was one of my first employees and was a rip-roaring anarchist. He insisted that all wealth came from the workers and therefore should go back to the workers. He was particularly bitter against his landlord and hardly a week went by that he did not announce that he had definitely decided that he would like to shoot the landlord the next time he came around for the rent. Finally I asked him smilingly after one of these outbursts:

Buy, Don't Shoot

"'Why don't you buy your own house instead of shooting your landlord? Then you would not have to pay any rent. If you do shoot him you may get into trouble.'

"He did not think much of the idea apparently but in a day or two he asked me how he could buy the house. I answered: 'That house can be bought for $800. You are getting good wages. I will buy that house for you, take $4 a week out of your wages, and in less than four years you will have it paid for.'

"He went off again. The next time he came back it was with his wife. He said: 'We are going to buy that house but since we have no children you can take $10 instead of $4 a week out of my pay envelope.'

"I bought the house and then Otto's chief concern was to get it paid for, which he did in a little more than a year. There was another house next door to him. In a short while after he had paid for his first house, he sidled up to me and said:

"'I can buy that house next door for a thousand dollars. Now that we have no rent to pay we are going along good. What would you think about me buying that?'

Our Business System

For the benefit of all our patrons, it should be of interest to them to know our method and system of doing business.

We pay according to quality, 3 cents more per pound for the butterfat in first grade cream. All shareholders receive an 8 per cent dividend on shares of $25.00, which means $2.00 every year for each share. Besides the dividend, shareholders receive one-half cent more per pound for butterfat than non-shareholdes, regardless of whether they are monthly or cash patrons. To illustrate what this amounts to, let us figure what the amount would be on our largest patron for 1923. His total pounds of butterfat was 3593, times one-half cent equeals $17.96, plus a $2.00 dividend would make the extra amount, by being a shareholder, the neat sum of $19.96. Shareholders are part owners of the creamery, have a vote and something to say at the annual meetings, can hold office and help all the rest of the shareholders in making this the best creamery in the northwest. We are the biggest in the county, let us hold our own. It is advertising of this kind that shows others what is being done in the vicinity of Holt.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default having been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage containing a Power of Sale, by reason of which default said Power of Sale has become operative, and the assignee of the mortgagee hereinafter named is authorized to declare the whole sum due and he hereby does declare said sum due, which mortgage was executed by Svenke G. Svenkeson, a single man, Mortgagor, to Deposit Trust & Savings Bank, Winona, Minnesota, a corporation under the laws of the State of Minnesota, Mortgagee, dated October 23rd, 1920, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County, Minnesota, on the 12th day of November, A. D. 1920, at 8 o'clock A. M., in Book 92 of Mortgages, on page 327.

Which said mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said Deposit Trust & Savings Bank, Winona, Minnesota, Mortgagee, to Jacob Kaldunski, by written assignment dated March 21st, 1921, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County, Minnesota, on the 21st day of January, 1924, at 8 o'clock A. M., in Book 110 of Mortgages, on page 281.

And whereas, the said Jacob Kaldunski, the assignee and holder of said mortgage, has elected and hereby does elect to declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice, under the terms and conditions of said mortgage and the Power of Sale therein contained; and whereas, there is actually due and claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of Thirty-five Hundred ($3500.00) Dollars, with accumulated interest from October 23rd, 1920, at the rate of six and one-half per cent per annum; and whereas, the said Power of Sale has become operative and no action or proceedings having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

NOW, THEREFORE, Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the Power of Sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and covered by said mortgage, viz:

The Southeast Quarter of the Southwest Quarter (SE¼SW¼) and the South Half of the Southeast Quarter (S½SE¼) of Section Eleven (11) and the Northwest Quarter of the Northeast Quarter (NW¼NE¼) of Section Fourteen (14), in Township One Hundred Fifty-six (156) North, of Range Forty-two (42) West of the Fifth Principal Meridian, in Marshall County and State of Minnesota.

Which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Marshall County, at the Front door of the County Court House, in the City of Warren, in said County and State on the 15th day of April, 1924, at 10:30 o'clock A. M. of that day at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash, to pay the amount then due on said mortgage and interest and all delinquent taxes, together with the costs and disbursements of such sale and Seventy-five Dollars attorney's fees, stipulated in said mortgage in case of foreclosure.

Dated February 21, 1924.

Breadfruit.

The breadfruit, with the coconut and banana, furnishes the chief food of the natives of the Pacific islands. That is why we call it "breadfruit," because, for them, it takes the place of bread. Apart from its fruit, the tree itself is a very useful one, for, when beaten out the inner bark forms a fine white cloth called tapa cloth.

Chicago — Safeblowers entering through a coal chute, tunneling through a brick wall and then frustrating a burglar alarm after it started to ring, obtained $3,000 from the safe of the Madigan Brothers' department store.

Los Angeles—A request for estimates of the cost of erecting an eight foot wire fence along the international boundary line between Mexico and California has been received here by Collector of Customs L. H. Schwaebe from McKinzie Moss, assistant secretary of the treasury.

Cleveland—Eleven women, nine patrons and two employees, were carried down ladders by firemen when smoke from a blaze in an empty west side theater filled the rooms of a beauty parlor on the upper floors. One woman fainted. The property damage was small.

Montreal—Sentence of Walker Muir of New York, who was to be hanged for the murder of Henry Lavollette, shot in an altercation over hunting dogs, was stayed when Muir's counsel alleged that the indictment was illegal "as it adds another count to the count of murder." The case will be heard this month before the higher court.

Detroit, Mich.—Formation of an American orthodox church with the 1,300,000 Russian orthodox church members in the United States and Canada as a nucleus, was a prime topic at sessions of the plenary convention of the Russian churches in America here. The proposed American church would draw for membership on all other orthodox nationalities of this continent, including the Rumanian, Bulgarian, Greek, Czecho-Slovak, Serbian and Albanian.

New York—Charles Allen Munn, 64 years old, editor and publisher of The Scientific American, died here. He graduated from Princeton in 1881 and had long been identified with the publication. Death was caused, it was believed, by a stroke of paralysis suffered on a fishing expedition in Scotland last summer. Mr. Munn devoted 43 years of his life to the magazine founded by his father and assumed sole charge of it and kindred publications in 1907. He was an enthusiastic sportsman.

Tallahassee, Fla.—Oral arguments before the state supreme court on the motion of T. W. Higginbotham for a new trial were completed. Three representatives of the state devoted 20 minutes each in combating contentions of the defense that errors were made in the indictment, trial and sentence of the former convict "whipping boss," who was convicted by a jury in Columbia county circuit court last July of second degree murder in connection with the death of Martin Tabert of North Dakota.

Durham, N. C.—Governor Cameron Morrison of North Carolina, and Mrs. Sarah V. Watts, widow of George W. Watts, millionaire philanthropist, were married.

Sacramento, Calif.—A. C. Olney, state elementary school commissioner has addressed letetrs to appointment secretaries of the University of California and Stanford university, asking them if they have any information as to the danger of a teacher shortage due to a ban on bobbed hair teachers and if they knew of any boycott movement inaugurated against teachers with shortened dresses.

Ilion, N. Y.—Eliphalet Remington aged 95, surviving member of the original firm of E. Remington & Sons manufacturers of the Remington rifle died.

Sports

Minneapolis—Fighting the greatest battle of his career, Jock Malone of St. Paul knocked out Roland Todd of London, holder of the middleweight championship of Europe, in the last 20 seconds of their scheduled 10-round bout at the Kenwood Armory. The knockout brought to a dramatic close one of the best fights between clever boxers ever staged in a Minnesota ring.

Putney, England—Pulling their oars in splendid unison, Cambridge's crew of youngsters won a brilliant victory in the annual boat race on the Thames over an Oxford shell filled with men more experienced and heavier but bereft for a few priceless minutes of the capacity for finished team work. Oxford, stroked by the American oarsmen W. P. Mellen, hero of last year's race, was a 3 to 1 favorite and was conceded the victory beforehand by every critic writing for the British press.

Foreign

Vera Cruz—General Calderon and 70 employees has sailed for Puerto, Mexico, to reopen the custom house.

San Salvador—Advices said all parties have united for a final blow against the dictatorship in Honduras.

Paris—The expert committee of the reparation commission was expected to submit its report on Germany's condition.

Manila—General Emilio Aguinaldo, famous in the Filipino independence struggle, has accepted the chairmanship of the independence mission.

Mexico City—The number of dead in the fire which destroyed the motion picture theater in Tacubaya was determined to be 21, mostly children.

Madrid—Accounts of the activities of the Spanish army in Morocco contained in newspaper dispatches tell of an aerial bombardment of Alhucenas by Spanish airmen.

Mexico City—Charles B. Warren, American ambassador to Mexico, presented his credentials to President Obregon and expressed the good will of the United States toward Mexico.

Madrid—The president and directors of the Banco de Castilla have been ordered under arrest on charges of fraud in connection with the failure of the bank.

Buenos Aires—A heavy snowstorm, accompanied by a tidal wave, swept over the coast of Mar del Plata. Several bathing establishments were seriously damaged and 32 fishing vessels

Croydon, England—A strike of the airmen in the service of the concern which carries the British air mails began when the pilots and mechanics connected with long distance flights ceased their work because of a dispute with the new air combine regarding pay.

London—A general strike of railway men threatens throughout Germany, according to an agency dispatch from Berlin, which says several thousand men already have ceased work in Tiberfeld, Magdeburg, Mannheim and other important industrial centers.

Riga—Word has been received here from Russian soviet postal authorities that all mail matter intended for Petrograd after May 1 must be addressed to Leningrad, or it will be refused delivery by government order. The city was renamed in memory of the bolshevik leader after the death of Lenine early this year.

Warsaw—The flood waters are subsiding in the upper Vistula valley and around Warsaw, but in the lower region the situation is dangerous. All the cities on the banks of the Vistula from Thorn to Danzig have suffered heavy damage, especially the former place, where the water reached the mark of the famous flood in 1560.

Rome—Pope Pius has empowered the congregation of Ceremonies to reform and bring up to date the whole ceremonial of the Papal court in view of the modern exigencies that will arise at the celebration of Holy Year next year. Many of the ancient ceremonies are obsolete in consequence of the loss of temporal power, while others were laid aside centuries ago, when the papal court was the most gorgeous known to the world.

London—The Northcliffe will case, in which 50 attorneys are engaged, was opened before Justice Russell in the chancery division for the settlement of certain clauses in the will of the newspaper publisher. The case was instituted because difficulties had arisen as to whether directors and employees were entitled to the legacies left them and also as to the fund to which they were to look for payment.

Tokio—Import duties on most of the commodities which have entered Japan duty free or at reduced rates since the September earthquake have been restored to normal schedule. A few reconstruction necessities will remain on the free list for awhile, but the authorities believe the gradual return of something like normal conditions justifies restoration of most of the tariffs.

Vera Cruz—General Topete at Tierra Blanca announces that general Toribio Beltran and 150 men of his revolutionary band have agreed to surrender, virtually completing the pacification of the Isthmus of Tehuantepec.

Constantinople—The Turkish government has issued an edict banishing Armenians from the eastern half of Turkey. The property of all Armenians who fled in the war is confiscated. Fifty thousand perosns now must leave the prohibited zone. The minister had to be severe and he hoped it would end the Armenian trouble and safeguard Turkey's future.

News Briefs from All the State

Condensed Stories of Happenings of the Week in Minnesota

Duluth—R. A. Grady, secretary of the Kiwanis club of Duluth, has just been named on an international honor roll with 18 other secretaries. There are 1,300 clubs throughout the world.

Nashwauk—Arrangements have been completed through the agricultural department of the Nashwauk schools for the purchasing of baby chicks for local residents.

Nashwauk—Plans to bring about the completion of the road from Nashwauk to Bear River were made at a conference held here under the auspices of the Nashwauk Commercial club and representatives of the town of Carpenter present.

Duluth—During the last week, ice in the Duluth-Superior harbor decreased three inches, Boatswain Daniel Magnuson of the United States coast guard service reported following measurements taken. Ice in the middle of the harbor measures 18 inches.

Mankato—Farmers and business men of this vicinity will meet here at a session where ways and means of increasing the cropping of soy beans on local farms will be discussed. Local merchants and bankers are expected to aid in the venture of increasing the growth of the crop.

Faribault—Knights of Columbus from all over the state are expected to gather in this city on May 4, when the Faribault council will celebrate the twentieth anniversary of its founding. Many notables of the order, including Archbishop Austin Dowling, State Deputy Denis Donovan and Supreme Physican Fahey, are expected to be present.

Rochester—Rochester will again be host to about 700 educators, local civic organizations having received assurance that this city has been chosen as the meeting place for the 1924 convention of the Southeastern Minnesota Educational association, a branch of the state organization. The convention will be held some time in October.

Fergus Falls—In the city election here, Mayor Martin Benson was reelected for his third term and the proposal to issue bonds for waterworks extensions, carrying a proposal to issue $850,000 worth of bond, for a municipal power plant was heavily defeated.

Crosby—Conditions on the Cuyuna iron range this coming summer has the appearance of being the best for many seasons. The range with its total of 37 mines, will have around 20 on the active list. Sixteen of these 36 produce straight ore, 10 produce manganiferous ore, and six both kinds of ore.

Hibbing—The proposition of organizing a national guard unit in Hibbing and the erection of an armory through state aid will remain open for a month, after a preliminary hearing. Members of clubs favored the battery company, but with a change in the village government, the question could not be decided.

Dodge Center—Dodge county banks have pledged their support to contestants in the county ton litter contest, in which county swine breeders are showing increased interest. Besides offering individual support to farmers engaged in an effort to raise better hogs, the banks will offer prizes for the best litters.

Willmar—This city's controversy over an armory, apparently has been concluded. The money donated by the late Governor A. E. Rice of $20,000, for an armory building to be built in conjunction with an appropriation by the state has been turned back to the heir, Colonel Cushman Rice. The city last year voted against the acceptance of the bequest.

Minneapolis—Fifteen hundred delegates, representing 100,000 members of the Lutheran Brotherhood of America, will meet in annual convention in Minneapolis Oct. 8, 9 and 10, with James J. Davis, secretary of labor, scheduled to address a mass meeting as principal speaker of the conference. Rev. J. A. O. Stub, pastor of Central Lutheran church, is president of the brotherhood.

Rochester—Committees representing both the Olmstead County Holstein Breeders' association and the Rochester Civic association are busy with plans and preparations for the annual meeting and sale of the Minnesota State Holstein Breeders' association, which are to be held in this city on May 23 and 24. Business men of Rochester will co-operate in the entertainment of the visiting dairy cattle breeders.

Kenyon—American Legion posts of this village, Red Wing, Cannon Falls and Pine Island have formed a dramatic circuit to provide home talent productions for the four towns. East post will present a play in each of the four towns in the next six months.

Duluth—Napoleon B. Merritt, one of the famous Merritt brothers, credited with discovering iron ore on the Mesaba range, who recently died here at the age of 90 years, and who was reputed to be worth millions of dollars left an estate valued at $20,500, according to the petition and will filed in probate court.

Owatonna—The Ladies Federal Women's club announced that they had raised $1,157.00 as their contribution for the Near East relief.

Duluth—Duluth's first public safety school for automobile drivers has been opened. The classes will be for both men and women and will be held in the board rooms of the courthouse.

St. James—Watonwan county farmers and business men, meeting here, launched a pure bred sire campaign under the managership of the Holstein Breeders association.

Havana—The contract for the construction of a modern creamery building to replace the structure which burned early last winter has been let. Work will start as early as possible.

Fergus Falls—Mrs. B. C. Juve, who is believed to have been the oldest woman in Otter Tail county, died at her home in Pelican Rapids. She was 98 years old.

Crookston—More than 150 boys and girls from all parts of northwestern Minnesota attended the annual short course held at the Northwest school of agriculture here.

Slayton—John G. Johnson has filed as a candidate for re-election as representative in the state legislature from Murray county. He is the first candidate to file in this county.

Redwood Falls—Redwood county's "million dollar ditch" project, otherwise known as County Ditch No. 51, has been abandoned by the board of county commissioners. The matter has been pending since 1920.

Owatonna—Heads of 32 firms which sponsored the Owatonna Builders' and Manufacturers' show, at a meeting following the close of the first show here, have taken action to make it an annual event.

Bemidji—Operating a day and night shift, the mills of the Crooksotn Lumber company started their heavy sawing season, and as a result employment is given to several hundred additional men.

Little Falls—Believed to have been a victim of the storm the body of Albert Dahl, aged 53, was found frozen along the path through the woods leading to his one room shack on the edge of the city.

Rochester—Miss Mary McKay, who has been rural school nurse for Olmsted county the last two and a half years has resigned, effective May 1. Miss McKay was the first rural school nurse to be employed in this county.

Duluth—Carnivals will a thing of the past in Duluth, it is predicted, since the city council voted to license them on the same basis as circuses and require them to pay from $250 to $500 per day.

Northfield—Bids on the proposed $250,000 new recitation hall at St. Olaf college, will be opened May 1. About $45,000 of the necessary fund remains to be subscribed. Pledges and direct contributions have brought the fund up to its present strength in a drive which began shortly before Christmas.

Sleepy Eye—More than 150 poultry farmers and raisers gathered here to hear Dr. W. A. Dillings, of University farm, St. Paul, lecture on poultry increase and farm management. County agent Willis Lawson explained the county co-operative egg marketing plan which is being organized in Brown county.

Pipestone—Work has been resumed on the construction of the new city and county hospital here and the building will be rushed to completion. The hospital will be known as the Ashton Memorial hospital, at the request of O. E. Ashton, who donated $50,000 toward its construction as a memorial to his father. The city and county will jointly own and control the hospital when it is completed.

Fairmont—Organization of the proposed co-operative egg association is assured, according to A. R. Karr, county agent. With but 750 members needed in Martin county, indications are that more than this number will join, as a number of townships already have reported 75 or more members each. Faribault county, which is to join with Martin in the association, is making rapid progress, it is said.

Chisholm—In district court here, judgment was entered for Balkan township, against the village of Buhl for $53,725 for lands annexed to the village in 1922. Balkan property owners started suit against the village contending that annexation was illegal. The district court ruled in favor of the township and appeal was taken to the state supreme court where the lower court was confirmed. The judgment covers the $50,000 damages asked for in the complaint together with $3,725 interest.

Brainerd—Mons Mahlum of this city, president of the Mjosenlaget of Amerika, announces that the directors have chosen St. Paul for the 14th annual convention, June 25, 26 and 27. St. Paul was selected to give the delegates an opportunity to attend the Sangerfest. Mjosenlaget is one of the largest Norwegian Bygdelags, its members being men and women of Norwegian descent who came to this country from the cities and townships bordering on Lake Mjosen, the largest inland lake in Scandinavia.

Grand Rapids—Mike Guthrie, forest ranger for this district, is warning of danger of forest fires. There was only a very light fall of snow last winter, and unless the spring should bring generous rains, it is likely that a serious situation will soon be faced, Guthrie says.

Fulda—Dairymen of this vicinity in session here discussed plans for the formation of the Fulda Co-operation Creamery company. One hundred and fifty farmers will be interested in the new organization and the plan is to erect a new modern creamery building here.

ALBANIANS KILL 2 AMERICANS

Country Is Placed Under Martial Law To Prevent Internal Revolt

Rome.—Martial law has been proclaimed in Albania following the murder of two American merchants, waylaid on the Tirana-Scutari highway, according to advices from Albanian quarters. A dispatch to the Stefani agency, which first reported the crime Sunday night says the Americans killed were named Coroman and DeLong, but gives no particulars.

The names of the murdered Americans were given out by the American embassy as Robert Louis Colman of San Francisco and George B. DeLong of New York City.

Tirana, Albania.—The killing of Robert Lewis Colman of San Francisco and George B. DeLong of New York, waylaid on the Tirana-Scutari high road Sunday, is attributed to highwaymen who infest the back country of this mountainous and sparsely settled European state.

Two men from the American legation here, Messrs. Stephens and Tyler, have gone to the scene to make an investigation, accompanied by a heavy guard.

Martial law has been declared and extended throughout the country so as to prevent any outbreaks that might be caused by the seizure of any person accused of the crime and aid in dealing with an uprising by any of the main tribes, which might be ready to take advantage of an act that would weaken the government.

The authorities are taking these severe measures and making a rigid investigation, fearing that the crime will have an important repercussion on the country's international status.

TENANT BILL CAUSES CRISES

Law to Protect Unemployed Puts British Cabinet in Bad Light.

London.—The McDonald government was defeated in the house of commons Monday by a vote of 221 to 212 on the rent evictions question.

London.—What the Laborite press describes as "a political crisis of first class importance" has arisen out of the government's determination to protect unemployed tenants from eviction.

A special cabinet meeting was convened Sunday night to discuss the evictions bill and Premier MacDonald shortened his week-end vacation at Checquers Court to attend.

The political reports agree that the government has already resolved that some means must be adopted to enable unemployed persons to retain possession of their homes whether they pay rent or not, but indecision and even disagreement is said to exist "how this is to be managed."

When debate on the bill was adjourned late last week it was understood the government proposed to put the obligation of finding the rent money upon the poor law authorities, who in turn look to the government for reimbursement. If this proves to be the minister's plan it seems certain they will be defeated in the commons, although it is not supposed they would regard this as reason for resignation.

PROBE LAND FRAUD CASE

Senator Gives Voluntary Testimony at Daugherty Hearing.

Washington.—Dry tales of the Miller brothers' land fraud case in Oklahoma were reviewed Monday by the senate Daugherty committee.

A bundle of letters passing between the justice and interior departments and various individuals were read into the record and several witnesses were questioned as to why criminal prosecution of the case resulted only in imposition of fines, and why no civil suits to recover the land ever were filed.

Senator John W. Harreld, Republican of Oklahoma, made a voluntary statement to the committee relative to his activities in connection with prosecution of the Miller brothers Indian land fraud cases.

Senator Harreld said he had heard "rumors" that Peck was to be replaced because the Miller brothers wanted to "get him out of the prosecution" before the cases came to trial. He went to Attorney General Daugherty, the senator continued, when he heard that Mr. Todd, Mr. Daugherty's former law partner, had been retained by the Miller brothers. He urged that Peck be retained to prosecute these cases and this was done. His chief interest, the senator said, was to avoid any "scandal."

Official Taken From Train Dies.

Fessenden, N. D.—George Henry Richardson, Jr., aged about 25, American vice consul at Aukland, New Zealand, who was taken from a fast Soo line train when he tried to jump from it and twice subsequently tried to end his life, died here Saturday evening while he lay asleep and under the care of physicians and a nurse. Authorities were able to elicit little information from him except that he said that he was en route to Washington, D. C., to take a civil service examination.

TROOPS TO QUELL COAL MINE RIOTS

One Man Dead, One Wounded In Shooting at Kentucky Coal Field

Frankfort, Ky.—Two companies of Kentucky national guardsmen have been ordered to the mining camp of the Liberty Coal & Coke company on Straight creek in Bell county, by Governor W. J. Fields, it was disclosed late Saturday. An outbreak of labor trouble was marked by killing of one man and wounding of another on Thursday.

The order was issued Friday night, but was kept secret until late Saturday to facilitate movement of the troops.

Machine gun Company D from Williamsburg, and Company G, 149th infantry, Barbourville, were ordered to proceed to Straight creek "under cover" by Adjutant General James Kehoe, following a conference with the governor.

The troops were moved in motor trucks and a number of them were at the scene ready for duty early Sunday.

"The situation is tense and complicated by inroads of unknown parties, supposedly agitators from other mines," Kehoe told the press.

Adjutant Kehoe disclosed reports received from military observers dispatched to Straight Creek following the shooting indicated that probably ten men participated in the firing Thursday, and about 200 shots were fired. George Lucas was killed and Edward Dishman wounded. They were non-union miners from Virginia.

Trouble at Straight Creek had been brewing since the Liberty company resumed operations on a non-union basis.

TAX RADIO, MAH JONGG SETS

Only Two New Articles to Come Into Tax Bill.

Washington.—A last minute attack on the revenue bill in an all-day session of the senate finance committee Saturday brought changes in the taxes on radio sets, jewelry, and estates and postponed a report of the measure to the senate until this week.

The 10 per cent radio tax was made applicable to all sets and parts without exemption after the committee earlier in the day had voted to increase from $15 to $50 the minimum price of a set on which the tax would be levied.

This and the 10 per cent tax on mah jongg sets costing more than $5 are the only new taxes carried by the bill. The taxes are levied on the manufacturer. The radio tax, Chairman Smoot declared, would not result in an increase in the price of the sets and parts to consumers.

Just what parts will be taxed, however, will be left to the jurisdiction of the internal revenue bureau as in the case of the tax on automobile parts, Mr. Smoot said. He figured the tax would net about $10,000,000, pointing out, however, that no accurate estimates were available.

Meanwhile, Chairman Smoot said the soldier bonus bill passed by the house would be taken up by the committee. Little time would be necessary for disposition of this measure, he added, and several Republican members predicted the bonus bill would be given precedence over the tax bill on the floor of the senate.

PLAN ACTIVITIES FOR WOMEN

One Hundred and Seventy-five Clubs to Take Part at Fairs.

Fargo, N. D.—Plans to bring women of North Dakota into the activities centering around fairs of the state this year, and to allow the women to make their contribution to the educational program of the fairs through the medium of 175 homemakers' clubs of North Dakota, have been formulated by these organizations under the direction of the state home demonstration department of the North Dakota Agricultural college.

Thirty-seven counties will be represented in the movement which will begin this month to arrange for community and county booths at local and state fairs showing the results of the work accomplished by homemakers' clubs during the year, according to plans which the clubs are making. Practical demonstrations dealing with home problems related to foods, clothing, and home management are also being planned for local and state fairs.

Training classes will be held throughout the state during May and June at which the homemakers' clubs will make preparations for booths, exhibits, and demonstrations. Following and during the fair season the demonstration teams will also work in their home communities in co-operation with the extension work of local homemakers' clubs.

Grand Forks, N. D.—Seeding in North Dakota this spring is three weeks in advance of last year, according to J. G. Diamond, statistician for the bureau of crop estimates of the United States department of agriculture, who has just completed a swing around the state. Both stockmen and farmers in the southwestern part of the state are learning the lesson of diversification, he said, as the stockmen are growing crops, and the farmers are raising stock to a greater extent than has previously been the case.

But what to do with it?—the man bent his brows over the problem. It is only just to him—and the blood that was in him—to state that it never so much as crossed him that he might keep it, with probably nobody ever the wiser.

It was too late to take it back to the red-roofed cottage that night, and too bulky to carry in his pockets. Deciding at last to hide it until next day gave him a chance to take Texie into his confidence, he wrapped the bundles in a towel; raised the rug; very carefully loosened a board of the floor; hid the package under it; replaced the board and rolled the rug back into place with studied exactness.

Then he blew out the candle; raised the blinds of the two small windows and slipped out into the yard.

Twilight had long faded into dark. Only an occasional candle picked out the ragged outline of the village. A dog fox back in the hills was trying to tell the rest of the foxes how lonesome he was. Over along Eagle run the frogs croaked—without interruption. He listened to make sure.

Glancing back at the cabin door to make certain he had closed it, he slipped across the corner of the orchard; along the path at the base of Black rock; into the little park and stole in under a dense clump of syringa bushes barely three steps from the rustic seat at Whispering spring.

For those who know how to listen, nature has a thousand voices—and the woods never sound a false note. A good length of the night was gone when the frogs along Eagle run gave him the cue he was expecting. He could trace the progress of the renegade down the stream—doubtless fresh from his task of making old money out of new at the deserted cabin—as well as if he had his eyes upon him.

Presently there came the very faint creak of a rail where the path crossed the fence out of the fallow pasture lot into the little park. A moment later a hulking form bulked huge in the gloom; Black Bogus stole out of the shadows and crouched down among the gnarled maple roots at the end of the rustic seat.

The woodsman lay so close that he could hear him breathe. After listening intently for some minutes, the hulking renegade raised his hands to his mouth and gave the call of the screech owl. Jack found out what he wanted to know—Hopkins had not had the chance to communicate with his confederates.

Again and again Black Bogus repeated his call, at intervals of a few minutes, until he had given it a dozen or fifteen times, each time growing more restless and disturbed. At last he began to swear, and the call began to resemble less and less the plaintive wail of the bird he mocked. Finally he rose, listened a moment and, with no very great effort at concealment, stalked up the path.

The woodsman rose and softly followed; shadowed him up the branch and into the mouth of the hollow. At the squalid hovel of dead Henry Spencer he vaulted the fence, stalked up the yard and pushed open the sagging door.

Stepping noiselessly around through the bushes, the woodsman crept up to the chink between the logs under the festoon of wild cucumber vines. He was just in time to see Black Bogus light the lamp, go to the ruined fireplace, lift up the slab of stone on the hearth and feel under it. Nothing there—he slammed the stone back, kicked it with his ragged boot, snatched out his pipe, lit it viciously, smoked hard for a minute or more, blew out the lamp, stormed out of the door and down the yard.

All the way up Eagle Hollow road and to Loge Belden's cabin the woodsman shadowed him; watched him go around to the back; heard him enter and slam the door after him; slipped up to the small east window and lay listening. The window was open a scant inch or so at the bottom; he guardedly raised himself even with the narrow opening and cautiously peeped within.

A match scraped, was laid to a candle on a shelf over the crumbling fireplace; Black Bogus whipped off the charred end of the wick; it flared to full strength and the interior of the cabin came out of the dark.

The watcher's eyes lifted in amazement. The cabin was almost totally bare of furniture of any kind—no beds; no table or chairs—merely some pots and pans by the empty fireplace, and two pallets on the floor.

On one of these pallets, almost under the window, lay Belden's sister; on the other lay Loge. He raised up on his elbow as the candle flared alight; noticed the sullen glower on the face of his associate.

"Well?"

"He didn't come out."

"H—ll! an' y'u had t' bring it back?"

"What else?"

There came a voice from the pallet under the window—a voice soft and mild, shaken and half afraid, the listener fancied.

"Didn't 'e send no word t'—me?"

"Didn't come out, I tell y'u."

The woodsman had caught the appeal in the soft tones; wondered what could be the relation between the girl and such a man as Hopkins. Then he recalled her reference to "the third man" that startled moment in the bushes by the side of the road; remembered her running down the yard toward them on the evening of the ride; and he brought his eyes as close to the slit under the sash as he dared. After a short pause, during which he fancied she might be gathering resolution for another question, the soft voice came again, more faltering than before:

"An' ther' wusn't nothin' under the rock—no note n'r nothin'—?"

"Not a damn' scrap."

The face under the window turned to the wall. Loge dropped back to the pallet. Black Bogus drew the unoffending bills from his pocket and slammed them down on the shelf; unbuckled his holster and put the revolver under his shirt; blew out the candle and pitched down beside Belden.

The man crouched on the outside of the window pondered what he had seen and heard. He looked eagerly for the outfit with which they made their spurious money—that was the one big reason, in fact, that had brought him. He saw no trace of it—the hint dropped by Hopkins in the little park that they had printed a plentiful supply before coming up the river was doubtless true, and that meant practically the absence of any very substantial proof.

He recalled what Hopkins had told Black Bogus about the large amount of money still in the safe at the red-roofed cottage—unguarded, as they would now suppose. They would be almost certain to make some attempt to get it. When they did—

But they were certain not to make the attempt till they learned that Hopkins was gone. Until then all was safe.

In his brief glance over the interior of the cabin, the woodsman was struck by the fact that the place was neat and clean. Mean as it was, it bore the mark of orderly hands—doubtless the hands of the girl lying just inside the window.

The cabin settled still. The outlaws on the farther pallet began to breathe heavily. The woodsman prepared to slip away but suddenly stopped and brought his ear close to the slit under the sash—the mountain girl was crying softly.

There was a stir under the blanket where Loge Belden lay; the creak of steps came across the floor and a dim figure stooped above the pallet under the window.

"Don't cry, little sister. He ain't wo'th cryin' f'r—no man ain't."

The grit and grind of powerful teeth reached to the listener outside.

"He's got t' quit pesterin' you—playin' hot an' cold with y'u—damn 'im, 'r he'll wake up some mornin' in hell with a knife in 'is ribs!"

Loge Belden, the renegade, the outlaw—the tenderness in his voice was unbelievable. The amazed listener at the window stooped along the cabin logs and softly slipped away.

CHAPTER XVI

Spurs and Flying Sand.

When the Milford stage came in from the city next forenoon Jack Warhope was there to meet it. So was Loge Belden. He had doubtless learned of the abrupt departure of Hopkins the evening before.

He shuffled up to the post-office window after the mail was worked. Zeke threw him out a letter. He stared at it hard; thrust it into his pocket unopened; immediately left the post office and walked rapidly up Eagle Hollow road.

Jack had expected there would be a letter for Belden—had counted on it. That's what had brought him to the post office. He hurried back to the homestead; crossed the barn lot; sprang up the rough path that led to the top of the cliff; spared a moment to glance keenly about and darted in among the trees.

Once in the seclusion of the woods, he ran at top speed, well back from the brow of the bluffs, as far as the deserted cabin of dead Henry Spencer; picked his way out to the edge of the cliffs and peeped down at the road. Loge Belden was just coming into sight.

As he came even with the cabin he stopped; glanced in every direction; whistled. The whistle was answered from within the cabin—another fact the woodsman had counted on. Belden vaulted the fence, ran up the yard and pushed open the door. Jack crept up to the corner of the cabin where the chink was out between the logs.

Belden had just opened his letter; Black Bogus was stooped over him. Belden, as he read, suddenly uttered a low exclamation.

"T'night," he muttered—"at midnight."

He swore merrily.

"I knowed 'e hadn't reneged—I knowed 'e hadn't."

"Hold still," growled the other. "Huh!" he went on—"t'night—midnight—and a clean sweep—expects t' be with us 'imself." He glanced at the envelope. "W'y, he's in town—what the—"

Belden took the envelope, stuffed the letter clumsily back in it and put it in his pocket.

"Wonder what 'e meant," he muttered, "by cautionin' us t' dern p'inted p'tic'ler not t' hurt the gal—if she's thar. If she's thar—where else would she be? Says we mus'n't hurt 'er, even if we haf t' cut out an' leave the swag." He glanced away in the direction of the squalid cabin up at the head of the hollow; a black look crossed his face, and the man at the chink wondered if he was thinking of that scene at the pallet under the window the night before. "Wonder what 'e thinks we air," he went on. "Don't hurt 'er—if she's thar—h—l!"

The two outlaws hunted their pipes, lounged down on the two boxes and smoked for some moments in thoughtful silence. Belden suddenly straightened; slapped his hand down on his knee.

"Must take some nerve," he chuckled, "t' murder a man, an' then preach 'is funeral."

Black Bogus drew hard on his pipe; puffed out the smoke slowly; shrugged his heavy shoulders.

"Nerve—huh—he don't give up the spoon t' nobody when it comes t' nerve, he don't."

Nearly an hour the two sat smoking and intermittently discussing their plans, no detail of which escaped the listener.

Belden was the first to leave. Black Bogus waited several minutes before following; finally slipped out, with far greater caution than Belden had shown; stooped low through the weeds and only came out into the road when some distance above the yard, at a point where the bushes grew dense along both sides.

The woodsman waited till he was well out of sight and sound before creeping from under the wild cucumber vines and stealing through the bushes up the hill. He had found out what he wanted to know.

The landscape lay before him in all its midday splendor. Mrs. Curry had doubtless just mended the fire in the kitchen stove at the red-roofed cottage, for white wood smoke curled up from the chimney. But the air was evidently too light and still to bear it up, for it drifted lazily away, to settle in a long bank of airy fluffiness that draped itself above the orchard trees like the veil of a goddess lost out of the skies. Above the homestead, and farther away over the bottoms, swift-winged swallows skimmed the air; a dozen or so blackbirds loped down out of the woods and stopped long enough in the big elm for a short concert.

Down by the road gate Graylock lifted his head, whinnied, came trotting up the barn-lot and the man set his feet to the rough path that wound down among the rocks.

He had let the horses into the barn and fed them, and was on the way to his cabin, with the intention of carrying the hidden bundles of money to Texie and taking her into his full confidence, when he saw Mrs. Curry, fat and portly, hurrying across the orchard at her pudgy best.

She held up an envelope, sealed.

"Left f'r me?"—he was in at the gate in three strides and hurrying across the yard—"where's she gone?"

"She got a letter this mornin'," Mrs. Curry puffed, "and she said she'd haf t' go t' town. She writ you this note, mounted Brownie and rode away lickety-split. She said if she didn't come back this evenin' I wuz t' git you t' sleep at our house, and I wus t' stay with Aunt Liza."

The woodsman had snatched the note and was eagerly glancing it through:

"Dear Jack:

"I've had such wonderful news Ken ain't dead, after all. He is in the city at a woman's house named Doll Baker on Brickbat alley. He is sick and wants me to come. Mr. Hopkins got a letter from him askin' him to come, bein' his old classmate, so he went last night and wrote back to me this morning. Pore Ken, I guess he is awful proud, and he is so sick. Mr. Hopkins thought he better not tell him nothing about father. He don't want me to tell nobody, and to come alone. But I would of told you, for I know you wont tell, but I saw you going up in the woods this morning, so I wrote you this note. O, Jack, aint you glad

"TEXIE."

English Quakes.

The first recorded earth tremor in Britain occurred a few centuries after the Norman conquest, and two centuries later, in 1274, Glastonbury was destroyed. In the ensuing centuries over a score of seismic disturbances have been experienced in the kingdom, the most serious occurring in 1884, causing two fatalities and damage to the extent of $50,000, in the Eastern counties. Londoners have had the unpleasant experience on several occasions, but Cornwall and South Wales have most frequently "quaked."

Paris Passes on the Latest Spring Mode

After years of scarcely perceptible changes last season brought about a radical modification in the outline of dress. The two parallel lines which constitute the feminine silhouette broadened slightly toward the bottom to form the shaped skirt. The same contour characterizes the spring mode, even slimmer than before and distinctly shorter, and it is only in the details of the costume that any appreciable departure from the previous season can be noted, asserts a Paris fashion writer in the New York Tribune. The Patou models are an exemplification of the artistry of the designer, diversifying the unchanged line with an adept manipulation of flounce, plait and panel.

Skirts have been decidedly shortened—their average length varies from ten to twelve inches above the ground. In combination with the simple line of the skirt these short lengths endow the wearer with the appearance of a sixteen-year-old girl—at least when viewed from the back.

In the Patou spring collection are three basic keynotes. First, there is the shaped flounce, which preserves its preponderant role in the formal evening gown—it becomes more complicated, it tapers, it undulates—but it remains the outstanding feature of this type of dress.

Plaits in Limelight.

Second, and of greatest importance, are plaits. The plaited dress in all its forms is a distinct manifestation of the season and finds varied expression in the tailor-made costume, the summer frock and in dresses for the seaside and spa. Patou has placed marked emphasis upon novel plaitings and they are used in numberless ways on frocks, cloaks and jackets, even for linings.

The amalgamation of the plaited form with the shaped form will in all probability lead to a return to the fashions of the 1887-'90 period. But "les elegantes" may be reassured; they will not be transformed into modern de Maupassant heroines, for the return to the '80s will be highly modernized. The shaped flounce will diminish in size, but in order to give it volume it will be plaited. On long, simple tunics it amplifies the lower part of the silhouette—a forecast of the fashions of tomorrow.

The third fundamental characteristic of the Patou showing is the ensemble—a combination of ingenious outlines with harmonizing or soft blending colors. It is an inseparable whole, the final theme of innumerable variations, and is particularly noteworthy in sports frocks, afternoon gowns and evening robes, most of which are combined with a cloak intended to be worn as an integral part of the costume.

The ensembles du soir chez Patou are very lovely. The long evening wraps are richly embroidered or trimmed with costly furs such as sable and chinchilla and the dresses are equally beautiful. One model shows a gown of green artificial satin elaborately embroidered in gold, silver and copper threads. The wrap is black and is lined with the green satin of the gown.

Cape of Red Velvet.

Another shows a cape developed in a beautiful shade of bright red velvet with a huge collar of chinchilla fur, and a dress of crepe romaine in the same vivid red. The cascading panel at the left side is ornamented with a spray of paradise dyed to match the dress. A very striking ensemble shows a green velvet wrap with a sable collar and a dress of gold net, embroidered in turquoise blue and gold beads and gold and old rose threads.

The range of spring and summer afternoon gowns is much more extensive than that for winter wear. This year the three-piece gown has disappeared from the salons of Patou. It has been replaced by the tailored gown and by the afternoon ensemble consisting of a dress and coat especially designed to be worn together. Plaiting, the inevitable method of ornamentation, is the principal trimming note on this type of costume.

Nearly all the tailored suits rely upon plaiting in some form for their elaboration. Stitched plaits in band form, side plaits forming panels, wide, inverted plaits stitched three-quarters of their length and then allowed to hang freely, and box plaits are noteworthy. Plaits are also used as a trimming for jackets, and the same idea is carried out in the skirt.

The sports costume has attained a position of primary importance in the modes of spring and summer. The models of Patou are always very simple and chic, principally because of the character of the materials. Particularly adapted to tennis are skirts with multiple plaits worn with sweaters in frisotta—a new and very successful fabric, the richness of whose tints is very pleasing to the eye under the glare of the summer sun. Other sports costumes in more neutral and duller tones are carried out in English cheviots and men's woolen suitings.

Leather is the predominant fabric for motor cloaks and the newest models are developed in bright shades of red and blue.

New Necklines.

The lack of variety in the spring silhouette has thrown the burden of the new mode upon the details of dress, which, as a consequence, know no restraining mandates. The neckline in particular has been subjected to varied manipulations by the leading designers of Paris.

Chanel shows a decided change in the neckline—a departure from the bateau form. In fact, she entirely neglects this type. In her collection are many round necklines, particularly in evening dresses, the back being cut much deeper than the front, frequently to below the shoulder blades.

In daytime dresses the soft, rolling collar is much featured by this designer—a contrast to the long, revers-like shawl collars which appear on her jumper sports dresses. On afternoon frocks of crepe de chine or printed mousseline the slightly rounding neckline is headed by a narrow band of the material which ties on the left shoulder, center front or half-way between, according to the cut of the dress.

The bateau neckline is also non grata with Agnes, whose every model exploits a collar, or at least a suggestion thereof. Most of these collars are small and round and of the lingerie type. Organdie, linen and silk are the fabrics employed.

Georgette and Patou are nonpartisan. The short, round line, the bateau neck and the V neckline are treated with equal impartiality in these collections. Jenny also varies the line, but shows a marked tendency toward the V cut, particularly in blouses.

The scarf, of course, is the piece de resistance of the spring neckline. In the collection of Chanel this decorative note is unusually significant. Almost every evening gown has its accompanying scarf, always of the same material, and varying in length from the short, stubby scarf to the long and flowing type. Only in a few instances does it form an inseparable part of the dress. An evening gown of black lace with round decolletage shows the scarf drawn across the front and attached at each shoulder, while the ends are allowed to hang freely. A cluster of pink roses is placed on either shoulder where the scarf is attached.

The spring collection of one prominent French designer emphasizes strongly the straight and slender silhouette. All models show extremely straight backs and in nearly every instance an unbroken line from shoulder to hem. With a few exceptions, all ornamentation appears in the front, and any suggestion of a waistline is given through the hanging of shirred, finely plaited or tiny tucked apron fronts or flowing panels. In such instances the waistline is low, but the dress proper very straight, tight-fitting and short, seemingly appropriate only for the most slender youthful figure. In daytime dresses, whether of wool or silk, the sleeves, which are set in, are long and tight-fitting and in most cases entirely plain.

STUDENT SHOOTS HIS CLASSMATE, ENDS OWN LIFE

Note Says Victim Was Tired of Life, but Lacked Courage to End It.

Pottstown, Pa.—Because his dearest friend, James Warmkessel, did not have courage enough to commit suicide, Thomas Shenton shot him and then sent a bullet through his own head in Shenton's room at the Y. M. C. A. Both were students at the Wharton School of Finance evening school, University of Pennsylvania.

Apparently both were doing well. Each had a responsible position and was gaining an education. Their class work was satisfactory. Each was twenty-five years old and they were inseparable companions outside of working hours.

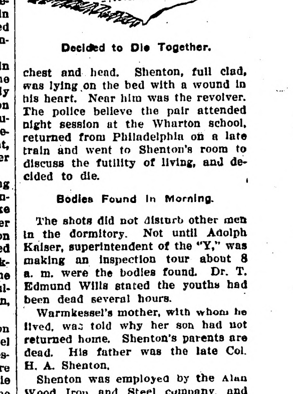
"Jim and I are both disgusted with ourselves. It's awful to be weaklings, with nothing in yourselves to be proud of. So what's the use? He is trying to kill himself by running himself down, for he says he hasn't nerve enough to shoot himself. I can't stand by and see him die that way. And he's too good a friend to hope for another like him. So we have decided to go together. TOM."

Warmkessel's body was near the door. His overcoat and hat were still on. He had been shot through the chest and head. Shenton, full clad, was lying on the bed with a wound in his heart. Near him was the revolver. The police believe the pair attended night session at the Wharton school, returned from Philadelphia on a late train and went to Shenton's room to discuss the futility of living, and decided to die.



Decided to Die Together.

Bodies Found in Morning.

The shots did not disturb other men in the dormitory. Not until Adolph Kaiser, superintendent of the "Y," was making an inspection tour about 8 a. m. were the bodies found. Dr. T. Edmund Wills stated the youths had been dead several hours.

Warmkessel's mother, with whom he lived, was told why her son had not returned home. Shenton's parents are dead. His father was the late Col. H. A. Shenton.

Shenton was employed by the Alan Wood Iron and Steel company, and Warmkessel by the McClintic-Marshall Construction company.
